But speaking of rats, Ducas declares that the story that the soldiers bait their bayonets with a bit of cheese and then shoot the rat when he comes to nibble at it, is all a joke which originated in the trenches. You don't have to waste the cheese, says he, because the rats are easy enough marks anyway if the soldiers wanted to shoot them. Some of them become real pets.

Is Killed In Action

KILLED ON THE 13th

Mr. Lewis Ingram of the City Clerk's Office, received a telegram this afternoon to the effect that Gunner Robert H. Thompson of Peterborough, was killd in action on November 13th. The telegram was from Gunner Thompson's brother-in-law, Mr. Walter Maguire of Montreal, where Gunner Thompson's mother, Mrs. Catharine Thompson, is now residing. The news will be a shock to a large circle of friends. Gunner Thompson was born in Peterborough and, with the exception of two years' residence in Massena, N. Y., lived all is life in this city. He had been living at the home of his aunt, Mrs. John Allin, Sherbrooke street, and had learned his trade as a machinist in the Canadian General Electric Works. He was twenty-five years of age and was a member of Massena Lodge A. F. and A. M. With his friend, Gunner Sidney Armstrong, of Peterborough, recently reported wounded, Gunner Thompson enlisted in May last, and went overseas with a draft from the Cobourg Heavy Battery, afterwards transferring to the 165th Canadian Siege Battery, with which he went to the front. It is a singular coincidence that he should meet death on the 13th of November. A few weeks ago a letter was received from him, saying that he must be lucky as he was No. 13 on his gun which fired 13 rounds on Friday Oct. 13th and escaped unhurt.

Gunner Thompson's grandmother, Mrs. Scott, resides in Peterborough, as well as his aunt, Mrs. Allin, while his mother and sister, Mrs. Maguire, are now living in Montreal.

Recital Was A Success

Yesterday evening the first of a series of recitals to be held weekly at Webber's drug store, Charlotte street, was well attended. The programme, given in yesterday's paper, included solos by Thos. Chalmers, and other famous opera stars. These recitals, given free of charge, are to introduce the New Edison Diamond Disc records. Mr. Webber has kindly offered to give, free of charge, the use not only of his ice cream parlours, but a recital, such as given yesterday, to any patriotic society at any time.

WELL DESIGNED CHRISTMAS WINDOW

The earliest and most seasonably trimmed window of Christmas fruits, peels, etc., may be seen in the fine corner grocery of Mr. S. Mitchell, corner of Park and Sherbrooke streets. The well arranged display of Valencia and other raisins, currants, peels, grapes, nuts, shelled and unshelled, together with various allied goods of a seasonable and Christmassy character, is alike creditable to the window dresser and the preparedness of the hard-working proprietor and proprietoress.

Gifts For Boys At The Front

Capt. Pearson, in his address, given recently, makes some valuable suggestions for gifts to be sent to the boys in the trenches. Handkerchiefs, which are constantly lost, are always welcome, and are used at nights to keep mice and rats from running over their faces; put up indelible lead pencils in sections two inches long; soda biscuits, which cannot be bought in England; one dollar bills when we are too rushed to pack a parcel; snap shots, lots of to pack a parcel; snap shots, lots of snow scenes, clippings from the daily papers and candies.

A Budding Philosopher.—"What is the meaning of 'Mr.'?" "Please, ma'am, a title of address used for 'master.'" "Very good. Now, can you tell me the meaning of 'Miss'?" Monaghan Has 1060 Ratepayers

At the June sessions of the County Council there were several barbs despatched blindly but with a sort of wireless direction to the mark for which they were intended and at this morning's meeting it was made manifest that they had found their billet. Reeve McIntosh stated that Monaghan's number of ratepayers had been filed with the County Clerk as 853 instead of 1,060. And on that showing it had been remarked in June that some township had a deputy reeve to which it was not entitled if the number of ratepayers was less than 1,000.

Mr. McIntosh said he desired to call attention to the error that had been made in order that Deputy-reeve Robeson would not be regarded as present under false colours.

Reeve Anderson admitted that he had been guilty of indirectly reminding Monaghan of its published number of ratepayers. Mr. McIntosh stated that quite a number of additional names would be listed in the near future.

The other municipalities are as follows:

	Ratepayers	Population
Asphodel	578	1570
Belmont and Methuen	553	1539
Burleigh and Anstruther	364	467
Chandos	227	683
Dummer	713	1372
Douro	589	1501
Ennismore	154	649
Galway and Cavendish	318	515
North Monaghan	1060	1999
Harvey	442	811
Otonabee	1034	2630
Smith	1073	2428
Lakefield	372	1537
Norwood	313	845
Havelock	400	1470
	6 182	19,809

Reeve Crough of Ennismore stated that 154 was really more than their number of ratepayers and Reeve Fitzgerald stated that Lakefield's population had slumped to about 900.

Sir,—In reply to One Who Has Been Stung, I think the warning would carry more weight if the person would give the name of the party they purchased the (printed in Germany) cards from. Then the soldiers' wives and mothers could see it as a guide when shopping.

THE SITUATION IN ROUMANIA

The Military Expert of the New York Times Sums Up the Roumanian Situation---Country Over Which the Germans Still Have to Advance Before They Can Reach the Main Fortifications of the Roumanian Capital Offers Great Military Difficulties.

RUSSIA THE ONLY HOPE

NEW YORK, Nov. 30. (New York Times Military Expert)—In view of the fact that the line of the Alt Valley had already been turned by Mackensen when he crossed the Danube at Zimnitsa, it was not surprising that the Rumanians were forced to give up that position as a line of defense and to fall back behind Topolog and the Veda. The former is a branch of the Alt, rising in the Transylvanian mountains and reaching the Alt about forty-five miles from the frontier. It possesses the advantages of having very high banks on both sides and is therefore relatively easy to defend. At the same time, however, it is but a small stream offering few difficulties as far as the actual crossing is concerned, while the preponderance of heavy artillery which the Germans possess offsets the advantage of terrain held by the Rumanians. It does not seem reasonable that this line can be held. It is fairly well provided with lines of supply and with lateral lines of distribution. But there does not seem to be sufficient inherent strength in the position itself to offer the Rumanians the temptation to try and effect a stand here.

Situation is Not Clear.

The line of Topolog, however, forms but small part of the line on which the Rumanians wound themselves at latest reports. Almost the direct continuation of the Topolog is the Vedea, a stream which rises on the eastern side of one of the hills, which bound the Topolog Valley, and flows southeast into the Danube. It is along this stream that the greater length of line exists. The situation here is not altogether clear, but it seems from the news that the line has, like the line of the Alt, already been turned by Mackensen in the south. The town of Alexandra has been taken. This much we do know. This is a railroad town on the west bank of the river, and, being on the railroad, it would seem that the Rumanians would, for lack of supply facilities, fall back where the advantage of rapid supply lay with them, rather than with the Germans. Indeed, there does not now seem to be any good position to which the Rumanians can retire where the advantage will not be with the Teutonic allies.

Normally, the country over which the Germans still have to advance before they can reach the main fortifications of the Rumanian capital would offer great military difficulties against such opposition as would be encouraged from an active enemy. But the Rumanians are in retreat, they have met with severe defeats, and are threatened with extreme disaster. Their morale is low, and they are certainly combating artillery much superior to their own. They have the advantage, it is true, of shorter lines, and lines which are becoming still shorter as they retreat ...ey are also becoming more and more thickly concentrated as the line of battle grows shorter, due to the closing in of the Teutons. But the same thing is true of the latter. Their lines also are becoming more dense, the power of their massed attacks growing greater.

A Line of Retreat.

There is, too, a danger, ever present with the Rumanians, of the Germans who are struggling in the passes north of Campulung, breaking down the Rumanian resistance here and cutting behind the main line of Rumanian defense, which is now along the Topolog River. If the Rumanians try to hold their present line along this river, the Teutonic effort will undoubtedly be made from the north insufficient force to threaten the outflanking of the Topolog line. The results will be exactly the same, the retirement to a new line. Another point in connection with this is that there is one and only one sure line of retreat for the Rumanians, which must be kept open, no matter what happens. A threat against this line, which would take form the very minute the Rumanians holding the border passes from Tomos Pass to Bukowina began to give way, would send the entire Rumanian Army scurrying back to a line just in front of Bucharest. This line is the railroad from Czernowitz to Bucharest, which parallels the border about thirty-five miles from it. This road is more than the line of retreat. It is the line over which all Russian reinforcements are coming, and over which the Russians are shipping supplies. If Russia is ever thus cut off from the Rumanians the end is even more certain than it appears to be now.

Russia The Only Hope.

Russia is the only hope of Rumania. She of all the Allies is alone able to reach the boundaries of King Ferdinand's country. Serrail is not far off in miles and has a great many troops who could be utilized to advantage against the German forces. But there is, as a glance at the map will show, absolutely no way by which Rumania can be reached. Due to the season of the year Russia herself, is badly handicapped. It is a known fact that Russia has to import the greater part of her ammunition. The great majority of the shell which is sold to the Allies in this country goes to Russia by way of the White Sea. The greater part of Japanese manufacture goes to Russia over the Trans-Siberian railroad. The White Sea route is closed by the Winter, so that Japan is the principal source of Russian supply. The amount which Russia can send to Rumania's aid is, therefore, very limited.

The net result is, that Rumania is completely cut off from her western Allies, as completely indeed for all practical purposes of direct aid, as if they did not exist. The only aid they can render is indirect—a series of attacks made by them of such force as to compel a division of the German forces now humbling Rumania so that the pressure will be remitted. Such a move has been expected for some time. Indeed, shortly after the offensive of Italy by which she recovered most of the ground which had lost in the great Austrian effort in Trentina and subsequently took Gorz ia, it was expected that the Allies on the Saloniki front would begin operations so as to complete the girdle of fire which was being drawn around the Central Powers. But week after week went by. Minor operations were begun at the two extremeties of the line, in the Struma Valley and against Monastir. But a serious effort to drive northward and strike the Central Powers through their back door, break the connection between Berlin and Sofia by a blow against the Oriental railroad and thus cut off the two most eastern allies—Turkey and Bulgaria—such an effort has never made its appearance.

A Unity of Command.

Why such an effort has not been made no one can say. It is useless to lay the blame at the door of an individual or an individual power. We simply do not know, and there is nothing in the military situation which gives us the slightest clue. We do know that the military affairs of the Allies are in the hands of a General Staff which dictates the entire military policy. We may therefore assume that there is a unity of command among the Allies, just as there is among the Central Powers. But even though we may not know the causes of the inactivity at such a time, we can see the results and it is almost certain that when the history of the war is written, the operations of the Allies in the Balkans from the day the opening gun was fired against the fortifications of Gallipoli until the present time will be considered the outcome of a policy of blundering stupidity.

JELLICOE IS MADE FIRST SEA LORD BEATTY COMMANDS FLEET

Jellicoe Becomes Member of Ministry—Beatty's Great Work in Command of Battle-Cruiser Fleet is Recognized—Jellicoe Succeeds Sir H. B. Jackson—Beatty is Youngest Man Who Ever Commanded Britain's Grand Fleet.

OTHER CHANGES PENDING

LONDON, Nov. 30.— In the Commons yesterday First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour announced the selection of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, and Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty as commander of the grand fleet.

Sir Henry Jackson, retiring First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, has been appointed admiral and president of the Royal Naval College at Greenwich.

Balfour also stated that due to these changes there would be a number of transfers in the make-up of the Admiralty Board, and also a number of changes in the higher commands of the fleets.

The decision involving the appointments of Admirals Jellicoe, Beatty and Jackson was taken some time ago, Mr. Balfour said, but for military reasons the announcement was delayed.

Sir John Jellicoe, by the above appointment, becomes a member of the British Military, though not of the Cabinet. He succeeds Sir H. B. Jackson, appointed in May, 1915, and is the fourth First Sea Lord since the war began, the others having been Battenberg, Fisher, and Jackson. Beatty is moved up from the battle-cruiser command to command of the Grand Fleet.

Admiral Sir John Rushworth Jellicoe, K.C.B., K.C.V.S., assumed supreme command of the British home fleets on August 4, 1914, with the acting rank of admiral. He has been Second Sea Lord of the Admiralty since 1912, and 57 years of age.

Rear-Admiral Sir David Beatty, named commander of the Grand Fleet, has for some time been commanding England's battle-cruiser squadron. He was the youngest of rear-admirals, and is now the youngest man who ever commanded England's Grand Fleet, being only 45 years of age. His wife is an American woman, formerly Ethel Field, daughter of the late Marshall Field the Chicago merchant.

Beatty was the British naval commander of the cruiser squadron which encountered the German fleet in the North Sea, and fought the naval battle of the Skagerak, which followed, on May 31, 1916. Before this he had commanded squadrons in the battles of Heligoland and in that which resulted in the sinking of the German cruiser Bleucher.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 30. — The Russians have captured eleven officers and seven hundred men with six machine guns near the Roumanian frontier. Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"Are you then so sure of obedience, mon cher?" She raised her gorgeous eyes and laughed up at him with indulgent amusement. Her manner was that of a young empress who regards any criticism of herself as an audacious jest, so unprecedented as to be diverting. "Are you sure that you have nothing yet to learn? I said I should not come down to the breakfast room—because I did not wish to come."

"You mean that you still refuse?"

"If you desire to call it that. I would not seem ungracious. I should prefer the word 'decline'."

"Then that is reason enough why you are coming."

Mary lifted her brows in incredulous amusement, but Hamilton Burton did not smile in response. He came a step nearer her chair and said very quietly: "While you are in my house I wish you to appear at the breakfast-table. This morning is a good time to begin. Will you accompany me on your own feet, or will you make your initial appearance kicking those same feet, while I carry you down like a child in a tantrum? There are about five seconds available for you to give the question mature deliberation."

"Thank you, cheri." Her mirthful pupils were not flecked with annoyance. "Five seconds are four seconds more than I need. I shall not go either way."

Hamilton made no further comment. With the apparent ease of one taking up a child from its cradle, he bent down and gathered her slender figure in his arms, then, lifting her bodily from her chair, he turned toward the door.

For an instant, she lay against his shoulder, too astounded for protest. Then her satin slippers began beating a furious tattoo and her small fists pummeling him as her cheeks flamed and her mismatched eyes burst into indignant fire. These demonstrations her brother ignored as he carried her in effortless fashion out into the broad hall and half-way down the stairs. She had ceased to struggle by that time and was gasping in wordless wrath. But at the turn of the stairway in the lower hall he paused and stood still, while their eyes met and locked in a brief, hot duel of wills.

"Now," he inquired calmly, "shall this be the manner of your first appearance before my secretary and butler, or will you make the rest of the journey on your own power?"

For the first time she recovered her voice. It was a wild mingling of frustrated wrath and outraged dignity, and for once she found that her fluency had forsaken her. She had been taught—Hamilton had seen to that—that when she spoke others should obey. She had not yet learned to bow to even his autocracy.

"Ham!" she exclaimed tensely, though even now she spoke in a cautious voice so that no echo might reach other ears: "Put me down! How dare you?"

He did not answer the question; instead he asked another.

"Will you enter as mistress of the house or will you go in kicking?"

During a long, defiant pause, their eyes held, both pairs unwavering; then the girl said quietly: "I'll go in myself."

CHAPTER VI.

Harrow had not exaggerated the facts when he said that it had been his privilege to serve in families "where niceties were highly regarded." He was the accomplished servant, seeing and hearing only such things as his betters intended for his eyes and ears. If he had human emotions he ordinarily revealed them only when his livery was doffed. Yet even the impeccably correct serving man has his moments of weakness, and, as Hamilton Burton left the room, he muttered low, but quite audibly, "My God!" Then, feeling Carl Bristoll's chilling glance upon him, he sought to cover his indiscretion in an apologetic cough.

But the secretary himself felt the disturbing uneasiness that had prompted that exclamation. Hamilton Burton had been dulled and when that occurred peace fled and punishment fell.

Evidently the girl upstairs, the girl just returned from years of study and travel in Europe, had something of that same spirit which made her brother's will a thing of adamant, but she had not done well to begin her new life by measuring lances with the autocratic Hamilton. Probably at the moment she was being reprimanded, perhaps rebuked into tears which, since she was young and beautiful, became a disquieting thought. Carl Bristoll felt the discomfort of the outsider in the shadow of a family scene.

He would now have to meet Mary Burton under the most inauspicious circumstances, and she would always remember that he had first seen her with tear-stained eyes at a moment of humiliation and defeat. It was too much to expect that a woman could forget this, and the young secretary had the wish that it should be otherwise. So he sat rather moodily contemplating his plate and when he heard steps on the stairs he was surprised at the brevity of the interval. Hamilton Burton had evidently subdued this insurrection in his household with the same whirlwind swiftness that he employed toward enemies beyond his walls.

Bristoll saw the young financier draw back the portieres and he himself rose hastily and came forward, but he halted half way and stood transfixed. He was told that he was to expect beauty and he had expected it, yet now for the moment he found himself standing astonished and as devoid of a raw schoolboy of his usually imperturbable poise. From this treacherous condition he was recalled by the quizzical amusement of his employer, and, bowing from the hips, he found himself murmuring some well bred inanity.

The girl standing there in the door was a sight to make men gasp and lose their tongues, and because this was not the first that had done so, her own perfect lips curved into a smile of purest graciousness, and in her voice as she spoke was a quality of xylophone music made the more charming by that slight French accent which years abroad had given her. Beauty is so variant of type, so often vaunted and so rarely found in true perfectness, that Carl Bristoll had accepted the newspaper reports of the girl's loveliness with a discounted credence. Now he was convinced. The quality of her coloring and expression would have made her face beautiful even had it lacked its allurement of line and delicacy of proportion; even had the chin tilted less regally and the eyes looked out under their long lashes with less serene queenliness, though ready to twinkle at the instant into the merriment of a mischief-loving child.

She was tall, but not too tall, lithe and slim and sinuous as a mermaid, yet well enough rounded to make each delicate curve a charm, not merely of promise but of fulfilment. She wore a flowing morning gown that made negligee seem to the suddenly intoxicated secretary the glorified costume for a woman. It was a richly embroidered thing from China, and on her head was a crown of lace. Bristoll knew that its material name would be a boudoir cap, but on her head it became a crown—no, it was too flim and otherial for that; rather it was a sort of a halo. Beneath it and imprisoning pale fire in its amber softness, escaped a truant mass of curls. From the cap to the foamy whiteness of a lacy petticoat that peeped out just above the silk clad ankles, she was exquisite. And all these things stamped themselves on young Carl Bristoll's brain as he bowed. Then he realized the delicate white and pink glow of her complexion and a marvellous pair of mismated eyes.

Later, when trying to defend to his own sophisticated mind his unaccountable loss of poise, he assured himself it was those eyes. They should have spoiled her beauty, just as any other thing that destroyed symmetry of balance in form or color would have marred the effect. Yet, on the contrary, they were gorgeous and wonderful, and when he looked at them he felt as if he had plunged into some icy pool and come out glowing.

"It is a pleasure, indeed, Mr. Bristoll," she smiled when he had been presented. "You see we must be good and informal friends since the——" she shrugged her slim shoulders and quite unconsciously fell into French idiom as she continued—"since the so great impatience of my big brother compels me to meet you like this—all untidy and unprepared." She made a little gesture with both hands and her rippling laugh seemed to envelop the young secretary with a deep sense of obligation for her gracious mess. "I have been so long from America, and I have not yet come back to American ways. In France they do not so rush from their beds to their business. In France they take the time to live."

In Hamilton Burton's face there remained no echo of the impatience of a few minutes past. In his serene eyes was no hint of remembered annoyance. As he drew back his sister's chair one saw in his masterful face only the satisfied pride of a man fastidious of taste in all things from neck scarfs to women.

"I'm truly sorry, Mary," he declared, "to have inconvenienced you, but you must let me be a little selfish. The only time that I can be sure of seeing you will be across the breakfast table, and that privilege you must grant—because you are too delectable a sister to do without."

"Ah!" she laughed, "but I did not know that here in America the men know how to say the pretty things—and to their own sisters, too! But it is for me to apologise. It is I who let the coffee grow cold. I have been spoiled abroad where the people are very late." Under her smiling eyes the two men sat content while she made of serving the Bolivian coffee a ceremonial as pretty as a fete.

Young Bristoll, usually loquacious enough, was not talkative this morning. What had happened to more hardened philanders abroad was happening to him and the shield which he had always succeeded in holding safely before his heart was being lowered under the bright archery of Mary Burton's eyes.

At last he rose, and his chief said, quietly, "Carl, I shall be an hour late. Will you run down to the office and sit on the lid until I get there?"

The secretary's brows went up. "You were to meet several of the directors of the Inter-Creek Coal and Ore at ten-fifteen," he reminded.

"Ah," exclaimed Mary with an adorable show of penitence, "and it is I who am causing Monsieur Cole and Monsieur Ore to wait—I am so sorry!"

But, when Bristoll had gone and library safe from the overhearing of the servants, the girl's manner abruptly changed. She stood by the broad desk, resting her slender fingers lightly on the mahogany top, and turned to her brother. Her attitude was very straight and regal, and her voice though still soft and musical, had in it the quiet ring of defiance.

"So!" she said. "So, in my brother's house I come and go under orders? So, I rise when he commands it and go to bed at his direction."

Hamilton Burton paused with his fingers on the knob of a wall safe from which he had meant to take a package that he had placed there as a gift in celebration of her home coming. It had pleased him, as he was shown that rope of splendidly matched pearls in the establishment of the continent's premier jeweller that he was able to buy such gifts. Of the twenty millions of families in America, nineteen million would have regarded their cost as a large fortune upon whose income they could live at ease while life lasted. But Hamilton Burton had been even prouder that on his sister's throat their beauty would after all be the secondary beauty, and with the eye of the connoisseur he had rejected several of the graduated gems and demanded that in their place more perfect ones be substituted. Agents of the great house, skilled in the nuances of selection had sought far to better them until the result was satisfactory to the exacting taste of the purchaser.

Hamilton Burton was spoken of as a woman hater. Society saw him but rarely. Power was his mistress and success his passion. His egotism, centreing on no deep love of his own and too fastidious for mere "affairs," left him opportunity for an exaggerated family pride.

Now he halted with his fingers on the combination knob of the safe, and straightened up. The sun fell upon a face very attractive and winning, and a figure very strong and graceful, but at the same moment the features hardened and the eyes wore their fighting glint.

"Mary," he said very slowly, "I thought that you understood. I certainly thought from the way you spoke in there that you realized it was you who had acted like a very lovely and a very selfish little pig."

"Did you suppose then," she queried as her chin went a shade higher, and the long lashes dropped a little over the vivid eyes, "that I should make a scene before your servants?"

"If you include Mr. Bristoll in that category, I must ask you to correct your impression. Carl is my closest friend. A man who happens to stand on an eminence has few such friends, and he values those he has."

"Mr. Bristoll seemed to me"—she shrugged her shoulders and spread her palms—"what shall I say—a nice boy? Yet I should hardly have discussed in his presence such matters as we have now to discuss. It seems, mon cher, that we do not yet quite understand each other. Is it not so?"

A New Blood-Food Has Been Discovered That Works Wonders

SAID TO PUT NEW LIFE INTO PEOPLE THAT ARE RUN-DOWN.

For years doctors have been searching for a combination that would enable them to inject into thin blood the elements it lacked. This can now be done, and any weak-blooded person can quickly be made strong and well.

Already a small army of ailing people has proved the merit of taking after each meal with a sip or two of water, two chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets. This is easily done, and even one week's use of this wonderful blood-food will prove how nourishing and strengthening and flesh-building the treatment is.

Just think of it—Ferrozone uplifts the entire nervous system, removes the blood, makes it rich and red—gives the sort of aid that's needed in throwing off weakness and languor.

Tens of thousands enjoy the advantages of renewed health through Ferrozone:—if you'll only use it, you'll surely grow strong too; its beneficial action is noticed even in a week. You see it goes right to work, removes the causes of the trouble and then quickly makes a cure.

For those who sleep poorly and have nervous apprehensions, Ferrozone is a boon; it is a specialist in such cases.

Where there is paleness, poor appetite and languor, Ferrozone makes the patient feel like new in a few days.

In tiredness, nerve exhaustion, spring fever and debility, the power of Ferrozone is known from coast to coast and universally used with grand results.

Let Ferrozone build you up, let it win you back to robust health,—it will do so quickly if you give it the chance. Sold by all dealers. 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50. Remember, Ferrozone is the only blood-food that has ever been discovered that works wonders.

ASKS FOR WIFE IN WANT AD. AND HE WOULD TAKE WIDOW

Looking for a wife—I am William G. Garner, 38 years of age, a pretty man from the south side; sound of mind and fond of all kinds of work; a great singer, music player, and church man; am looking for a young woman, but if I cannot get one, a widow will do, as I want to start housekeeping before winter time.

William G. Garner, Huntington.

New York, Nov. 14—Such is the all embracing proposal published in the Long Islander, a weekly newspaper issued in Huntington.

"Every man worthy of the name should have a fireside of his own with a wife to make the home brighter," said Mr Garner, confessing modestly that he had advertised for a wife. "I have saved some money and if I find the right woman I shall buy a little home and we will be as happy as two birds.

Nearly Correct.—Johnny came running home one day with a book under his arm. His mother said—"What's that, Johnny?" Johnny—"A prise, mother." "A prise, Johnny. "What for?" "For natural history, mother. The teacher asked me how many legs an ostrich had, and I said three." "But, Johnny, an ostrich has only two legs." "I ken that noo, mither; but the rest o' the class said fower, and I was the nearest."

LUNG TROUBLE

Was never cured by dosing the stomach. The two organs are not connected. If they were, food swallowed would choke you. For lung and bronchial troubles you must breathe the cure, and you can't breathe cough syrups, tonics and syrupy compounds! Peps provide the rational treatment for coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung troubles. Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing.

On the face of it, now, does this not sound more reasonable than dragging the stomach? Try one box of Peps. A trial will cost you only 50c., and the good you will reap—well, health cannot be expressed in money terms. Be sure of the article when ordering from druggist or store. First four letters

Was Completely Laid Up With Severe Case of Piles

There is no longer any debate as to the best treatment for itching, bleeding or protruding piles But since about one person in every four suffers more or less from this annoying ailment it is necessary to keep on telling the people about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Wm. Shaw, Island Brook, Que., writes: "I am writing this to let you know the benefit that I have derived from your Ointment. I have suffered more or less for years with protruding piles and last winter I got so bad I was completely laid up with them. I went to our local storekeeper and asked him if he had anything that was good for piles and he recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment. I purchased a box and took it home and used it according to the directions and for over one year I have not been troubled with piles. I had tried other remedies before but they only gave me temporary relief and that one box of your Ointment did more for me than all the others, as I have not been troubled since last winter. I consider it to be the best remedy for piles I have ever used and shall always carry a box with me, although I don't think I will need it for piles. We have used it for other purposes in the family, such as burns, and cuts and scratches, etc., and my wife says it is one of the best remedies for such purposes we have ever had in the house. Although you only charge sixty cents a box for it it is well worth $5.00 a box for anyone who is afflicted with piles. Now you can use this letter if you wish or refer anyone to me who wants to know about it for piles. I might say that in my business I am known all over the English portion of Quebec, and am having this statement sworn to before a Justice of the Peace."

"Sworn before me this first day of April, 1916, M. M. Holbrook, J. P., Island Brook, Que." Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60c a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto

Good Shoes Need Protection From Wet, Like Good Clothes!

High Price of Shoes, and Low Price of Rubbers and Overshoes, Spreading This Commonsense View

Many a man, and woman, too, who would never think of letting a good suit get damp, will thoughtlessly splash through slush and water with an expensive pair of shoes, caring little so long as the feet do not get too wet.

This treatment takes it out of shoes just as much as it would out of clothes, for none but the heaviest waterproofed leather, unsuitable for general wear, can stand repeated wetting and give more than half the service it should. In these days, with shoes costing two to five dollars a pair more than before the war, no one who is at all in sympathy with the Empire-wide movement for thrift will deliberately continue such waste.

Fortunately, indeed, rubber has not followed the upward trend of almost every other necessity of life, but in the raw state is even cheaper than before the war. So, though labor, fabrics and chemicals cost more, and a war tax is paid on crude rubber as well as on the other materials, rubbers and overshoes, except in a few cases, have not advanced in price. Thus a pair of rubbers, costing perhaps one-fifth as much as your shoes, will practically double their service and save you repair bills. At the same time they will be protecting you from colds by keeping your feet really dry and comfortable in any weather.

KING ALBERT INDIGNANT.

Deeply Moved at "Slavery" Imposed on Belgian People, It is Said.

Frederick W. Whitridge, Alexander J. Hemphill and P. Mali, Belgian Consul General in New York, received yesterday the following communication:

"Henry Carton de Wiart, Minister of Justice of Belgium, now at Havre, wires to Louis de Sadeleer, Minister of State for Belgium, that King Albert is deeply moved and indignant over the deportation and slavery imposed upon the Belgian people. All Belgians firmly hope that as soon as this almost incredible outrage is known, all civilization will vigorously protest against this horrible crime against humanity and the law of the nations."

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or carelessness in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

The feeling prevails this week that markets have attained their top prices. It applied more particularly to groceries, but considering provisions there is really no prospect but higher prices for butter and eggs. At 30c cheese should remain as far as the consumer is concerned, and it is not now expected to exceed that figure. But no one knows what butter and eggs are likely to do. In York organized housewives have tried to boycott eggs for two weeks, with be a successful stroke against cold storage houses, but so scarce have been in this vicinity that an embargo is hardly necessary.

Retail prices of eggs are from 45c to 50c, with guaranteed new laids bringing special figures. Butter is steady at 45 cents but one grocer has 1500 lbs. of fine creamery he is selling at 44c a pound.

CREAM AT TORONTO.

While 30c per pound butter fat, delivered, has been paid by some small creameries in portions of Western Ontario this price is above the possibilities of the big commercial creameries, they declare. The price is only possible where retail sales may be made by the creamery on good markets. Where this can be arranged higher prices may be realized but the cost sheet will not show a profit if the price is paid in the ordinary way.

This week the Toronto Creamery sets the price for the last half of November at 47c per pound of butter fat net to the shippers. In sweet cream prices are quoted up to 50c per pound of butter fat, delivered at Toronto.

OTHER COMMODITIES.

Millbrook Epworth League Meeting

MILLBROOK, Nov. 29. — The Epworth League regular meeting was held on Monday evening, when about 100 people attended. The programme proved very interesting. A special feature of it was the debate, "Resolved, that rural communities afford better opportunities for the investment of life than urban communities." This subject was very ably debated.

Those taking part were: Affirmative, Messrs. I. Hatherly, W. Ellis, E. Hard; negative, Messrs. W. Elson, S. Richards (the latter speaking twice on account of Mr. Wm. Kennedy not being able to attend).

Rev. Mr. Wilke, Rev. Mr. Russell and Mr. W. S. Given were the judges. In arriving at their decision they took into account platform appearance, style of address, as well as argument. The result was: Affirmative 162 points, negative 158 points.

Rev. Mr. Clarke of Cavan, proved a very able and tactful critic. Miss Ella Elsom showed very nice discrimination in singing, "Face to face."

Altogether the meeting was a decided success.

For the Boys.

The Epworth League sent four boxes of home-made candy to their members who are in France, and the Methodist church and Sunday school sent thirty boxes of home-made cakes to the boys on the firing line, whose names are on the honour roll of the church.

If Stomach Hurts Drink Hot Water

A Physician's Advice.

"If dyspepsia, sufferers from gas, wind or flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of hot water immediately after eating they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach trouble, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well known New York physician stated that most forms of stomach trouble are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and bisurated magnesia immediately neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two, therefore, being marvellously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestants, stimulants or medicines for indigestion.

Daily Average For November Was 2,487, the Smallest List Since July

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Daily average of British casualties for November was only 2,487, as compared with 3,692 in October, 3,985 in September, 4,127 in August and 1,926 in July, these being the months of the big Somme offensive. With the exception of July the figures for November are the smallest since that offensive began. The total losses during the five months are but slightly over 460,000.

Germany published 2,756,897 casualties during the war up to the end of October, and even these do not represent the total German losses, as their lists are far in arrears.

Taking into account that the British figures include naval and colonial losses, while Germany's doesn't, it may be said in a general way that Germany's losses since the big drive began aggregate, on all fronts, double Britain's.

UNATTACHED OFFICERS ARE TO BE "CLEANED UP"

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., November 30.—Interesting developments are anticipated in connection with the overseas organization following the return from England of Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, next week.

The general cleaning up of unattached officers in England is anticipated at an early date. There are in England some two hundred odd unattached Canadian colonels and majors drawing full pay and separation allowances amounting in all to about $70,000 per week.

Some of them also drew, "billetting allowances" for a time.

Unattached officers of higher rank will be given the choice of either "reverting," or of donning plain clothes and waiting without pay until a time comes when they can be utilized.

FRANZ JOSEF'S FAVOURITE BARRED FROM FUNERAL

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, November 30.—Frau Schrant, Emperor Franz Josef's intimate for nearly two score years, and the woman to whom he has credited with pouring out his sorrows, was refused a last view of the man she loved. Frau Schrant drove to Scenoonbrum Palace on the morning after the aged Emperor died. She demanded admittance to the Palace at which during the life of the ruler she was an almost daily visitor. She was urged to leave at once by order of the new Emperor.

NO CONFIRMATION OF A FIFTH DIVISION

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Ont., November 30.—There is no official confirmation at the Militia Department of the report that the fifth Canadian division is to be organized.

It is believed that unless there is a decided improvement in enlistment four divisions will represent the maximum force Canada will be able to keep at the front.

Fishing Fleet Is Raided By Sub.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 30.—Without warning a large German submarine Tuesday afternoon attacked the Brixham fishing fleet, sinking three trawlers, a Lloyds despatch to-day asserted.

After the trawlers were sunk the enemy undersea boat shelled the remaining vessels.

All crews of the fishing fleet were safely landed.

Germany Ready For Peace at Her Terms

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, November 30.—Germany is ready for peace which will guarantee her existence and her future—but since Germany's enemies are not yet desirous of peace Germany will go confidently forward in war.

So declared the Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg in the Reichstag to-day, introducing the new bill for national auxiliary service—the "mobilization of civilians."

Prilep Bombarded By Allied Aeroplane

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, November 30.—The bombardment of Prilep, held by the Bulgarian-German forces on the Macedonian front by Allied aeroplanes, was announced in to-day's official statement. Rain and fog are hindering operations in the fighting.

FIFTEEN YEAR OLD BOY ASPHYXIATED IN WATER STREET HOUSE

Louis Smith, a Bellboy at the Empress Hotel, Meets a Tragic Death Early This Morning—Disconnected Gas Pipe Was the Cause

HOME IN HAVELOCK

Escaping gas caused the death of Lorus Smith, some time between two and nine-thirty o'clock this morning. Deceased, who was fifteen years of age, was employed as a bell-boy at the Empress Hotel. He went off duty about two o'clock this morning and a few hours later was found dead in his basement bedroom at 336 Water street. It is believed that the boy disconnected the gas pipe in order to move the dressing stand into a different position, against the wall. A handkerchief was found stuffed into the disconnected end of the pipe. The pipe led through from the house next door and was not connected up with any appliance in the room where the boy's body was found.

Smelled Gas.

A number of the employees of the Empress Hotel live in the same house. This morning, about 5 o'clock, Miss Agnes Forrest, one of the girls, noticed a strong smell of gas. Thinking it came from the stove, the girl opened the damper. Later, she, together with a number of other girls, left for the hotel, which is but a few yards away. Upon their return to the house, shortly after nine o'clock, the smell of gas was still noticeable. One of the girls went back to the hotel and summoned Mr Chris. Graham, who went over and conducted an investigation. Upon entering the cellar the odor of gas was more apparent. The door leading into the boy's bedroom was partly open. Mr. Graham entered the room and was horrified to find the boy lying dead on the bed. He carried him out of the room and immediately sent for the pulmotor and medical aid. Dr. Greer and Dr. King arrived in a few minutes, and pronounced the boy dead. The actual time of death could not be ascertained. In the opinion of one of the doctors the boy might have died within an hour after retiring.

Home in Havelock.

Deceased was a son of Conductor Smith of the C.P.R. He was one of two twins. The boy's parents reside in Havelock. Deceased has been employed at the hotel for several months, and in the words of the proprietor: "Was one of the best boys we ever had."

Coroner Dr. Greer will conduct an inquest which will open this evening in the Police Court at 8 o'clock.

A CHANCE TO HELP A SOLDIER'S FAMILY

This is the case of the family of a man on service in England. The family (wife and seven children) are living in a small house. It is very poorly supplied. Furnished isn't a word to be used in this connection. A few things, just such as you may have no use for are badly wanted. More, badly needed. The wife is frail and not just a good manager. Who can help. Here is a list. The things may be scattered around. Look up in the attic.

Double bedstead (without mattress)
Single bedstead.
Some kind of sideboard or cupboard. See that the hinges are there.
Six chairs.
A bureau, (or what was called a bureau), and a wash stand.
A table of some sort.
Small heating stove, coal or wood.

Friends, this is not a large order when so many can divide it up. Never miss the things and most of them are in the way, anyway. Better clean them out. Most thankfully received, and please notify Patriotic Fund Office.

Of course it is frankly admitted that it looks queer if the family of a man on service is in such hard circumstances. But there is a story behind it. (That is behind the circumstances, not the family). If interested ask the office. But 'phone as to all and sundry. That is the important thing. N.B.—'Phone on Saturday not before.

Hon. Martin Burrell Will Speak At Big Recruiting Rally Here

The Minister of Agriculture, Major Campbell, Chief Recruiting Officer and Capt. O'Flynn of the 247th Battalion Will Be Speakers at Sunday's Mass Meeting in the Armouries---Eligible Men Urged to Attend---Interesting Letters From Overseas---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture in the Dominion Government, will be the chief speaker at the big recruiting meeting in the Armouries on Sunday night next in the interests of recruiting generally, and of the 247th Battalion in particular. Major Campbell, the Chief Recruiting Officer for No. 3 Military District, and Captain O'Flynn, of the 247th Battalion, will also address the meeting, which it is hoped will be one of the largest ever held in Peterborough. The Hon. Mr. Burrell, who comes from British Columbia, and is an eloquent speaker, will have an important message for the audience, while Captain O'Flynn, who is a veteran of the 2nd Battalion, will also bring a message from the boys at the front.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ackerman has confidence that the eligibles of Peterborough have enough manhood in them to attend this meeting and to hear the subject of recruiting discussed logically

A copy of the following letter has been mailed to as many of the men of military age as could be located:

Peterborough, Nov 29th, 1916

TO ALL ELIGIBLE YOUNG MEN,—

Your name has been handed to me as one who is eligible for Service, and one who will be liable for Service under compulsion. If my source of information has been incorrect, you will only be doing your duty by endeavouring to convince those who are eligible to do theirs.

Next Sunday night, December 3rd at 8:30, there is going to be a Recruiting Meeting in the Armouries for the purpose of launching a new and systematic campaign for recruits for the Battalion which I have the honour to command.

I personally appeal to you in the name of those men who are over in France fighting for you to-day, and who will continue to fight for you, to be present and listen to many logical reasons why you should be in uniform. The situation in Europe at the present time is serious, so serious in fact, that we are to-day fighting for our very existence. How would you feel should we be be beaten, and how would you relieve your own conscience, and how are you going to face those men who come back?

I would ask you to attend this meeting, and I can assure you that you will not be singled out and embarrassed before the meeting. If it should so happen that you have been rejected, please wear your rejected button.

Trusting that you will accept this invitation and be present next Sunday night, I remain,

Yours truly,

C. H. ACKERMAN,
Lt.-Col. O.C. 247th Battalion.

Mr. P. Burke, 286 Townsend street, has received the following letter from his son, Gunner F. P. Burke, in France:

France, Nov. 13, 1916.

Dear Father and Mother,— Just a few lines to let you know I'm well, hoping to find you the same. I received a letter from John about November 9; he arrived safe and sound. Well, I haven't received an Examiner now for about seven weeks. It looks very much like as if we will have to put in another winter out here, and we are pretty near up to our knees in mud, so it is no joke here now. So I have not received your two parcels that you sent me, but I tell you what I would like is a couple of pair of socks and a pair of rough leather gloves, as fine leather gloves out here are no good in the wet and mud, and I think the best way to send them is to register the parcels. It only costs a few cents more, and I'm sure of getting them then. Well, I'm back with the trench mortars again, so I will have the same old address as I have had before. Well, I suppose you will be preparing for Christmas and New Year's. I won't be home for this one, so you can think of me but I guess I will be home for the next one. I expect to get leave for England pretty soon, and I might get it in time to see John there, which I hope I will, as I will be about the 20th to go, so you see there is 19 to go ahead of me. We get seven days leave about every eight months spent out here, and it is little enough out here, too. Well, I had a pretty good time when I was with the 20th Battery, but not as good a time as in the trench mortars. We are sleeping under a waterproof covering here now and we get issued with charcoal and coke to make a fire, so you see we are not as bad as you would expect, but as the time rolls on the war is coming nearer to an end, which we all hope will come pretty soon. Well, I don't think I can say very much more, so I think I will have to quite for now. Wishing you all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. I remain, your son

Pte. Harold Lawrence, Mounted Rifles Glad That He Enlisted When Sixteen and was Able to do his bit in the Trenches.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Mrs. Buller, 361 Aylmer street, has received the following letter from Pte. Harold Lawrence, Mounted Rifles, a Peterborough prisoner of war at Wahn, Germany:

Dear Mrs. Buller,— Just received your most kind and welcome letter and parcel which found me in fair health. I haven't had what you call good health since I have been here.

I was taken prisoner on June the second at a place called Ypres. The battle started at 8.30 in the morning and we fought till we couldn't stand it much longer for the want of food and rest. It was terrible to see all the men that were wounded and killed. We had to walk over them. It was impossible not to, because we lost so many men. We had only 250 men left out of our regiment, and we were up to strength—that is 1,150, including officers. Thank God that I am alive to-day. I only had a slight wound in the left thigh, which didn't amount to anything. I lasted in the battle from 8.30 a.m. till 2 a.m. the next morning. Nothing to drink or eat; nothing in the world to do but shoot, and I certainly did to save my life. I lost my chum beside me, which drew myself so hard I had to cry.

Well, now that I am a prisoner of war I am finished fighting, but thank God I enlisted when only sixteen and I went to the trenches as a man and did my duty there for five to seven months, and when I come home I will be proud to say I have done my bit, and it will be my turn for a rest. Now, out here where I am we work hard. We are building a bridge. We start at 6.30 a.m. and finish at 7 p.m. and you see how hard it is for us, and we get soup and coffee, so you can see how we love our parcels when they come. When I opened your parcel and saw the cake and biscuits I could hardly realise what it was, it was so long since I have seen any. The best things out here are tea, sugar, cocoa, milk, cheese, biscuits, cakes and tobacco or some tinned meats, as it is the best stuff to stay good, as they have a long way to come.

Well, Mrs. Buller, I am the only Peterborough boy at Wahn and they should know me, so will you put this in the Examiner and they will know my address, as I can't write often here. I am only allowed two letters and four post cards a month.

Well, I hope you will advertise this and I will write you again soon. I will have to come to a close now, as it is time for bed, 9.30 p.m. Give my love to all my old chums and may God bless them and keep them in good health till I come home. I will have to close, thanking you once more for your kindness, as I needed the parcel very badly. I remain,

Yours sincerely,

OLD MEMBERS OF GEISHA CASTE ARE INTERESTED

Many expressions of good luck and best wishes for the success of to-day's presentation of the "Geisha" comes from old members of the former company now settled far and wide. From England and France and from Quebec, Toronto, Detroit, and other cities come in messages from those whose friends have told them of the reproduction of the old favourite play. Mr. Will Maclaren (Wun Hi), Miss Lillian Dean (O Julliette San), Mr. Reginald Bettelliffe, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Common, Miss Ethel Taylor and Miss De la Lowe, Toronto, are among those who would like to be in the city this week. Copies of the programme and issues of the local papers will be sent along at the end of the week to all who took part in the former series in 1910.

Organization Formed to Canvass the City For Ten Thousand Dollars With Which to Help the Y.M.C.A. Work Among Canadian Soldiers —Campaign Starts To-day.

MEETING LAST NIGHT

A meeting was held last evening in the Simcoe street patriotic rooms for the purpose of completing the organization of the team captains and team members under whose direction a canvas will be made locally in connection with the effort to raise ten thousand dollars with which to help the Y.M.C.A. work among Canadian soldiers. Mr. W. G. Merrow, who occupied the chair, expressed himself as being heartily in accord with the project. He was followed by Captain T. W. Jones, who confined his remarks to a couple of important points that were not touched upon at previous meetings. One of these concerns the work of the association in the various prison camps. This is carried on by men of neutral countries under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. It is one of the most important branches of the Y.M.C.A. work and entails considerable expense to the association. The workers are usually Americans, as only men of neutral countries are acceptable to the enemy countries in which they work. Another important branch of the service is that of caring for and educating the wounded soldiers. One phase of this work is carried out on the high seas, while the men are returning to this country. Slides illustrating the various trades are shown and lectures given by competent instructors.

SCOPE OF THE WORK.

The concert work from the soldiers' standpoint is another of the most interesting features of the work. Many parties of professional entertainers have visited the various camps, giving their services through the Y.M.C.A. and it is appreciated greatly by the boys. When there is any shortage of professional talent, excellent material is to be found in every brigade in camp, and some of the most amusing concerts have been provided by the soldiers themselves.

The sing songs which precede the concert programme are as a rule most inspiring, especially when popular jolly songs are used. The boys are not downhearted ;they love bright, happy music which relieves the irksomeness of their everyday military duty.

Religious work of a distinctly evangelistic kind has been conducted in each of the camps. Ministers from the leading pulpits of Ontario and Quebec have been engaged and have delivered such strong appeals that many soldiers have been won into the Kingdom of Christ.

One night at Barriefield ninety-five men signed cards indicating their desire to live the Christian life; at Valcartier on a single occasion one hundred and eighty men so decided, and at other camps the average runs from forty to sixty per meeting.

This work does not end with decisions—every man is linked up to some definite issue. Bible class study, prayer meeting or personal work and as far as possible is placed in touch with his battalion chaplain. In all this work the Association co-operates with the chaplains, and on the other hand the Association derives a great deal of assistance from some chaplains.

WHY IS IT PERMITTED?

It is asserted on authority of respectable credibility that Henri Bourassa's anti-British speeches and writings are being freely circulated by the Germans in Belgium as evidence that Canadians are not in sympathy with the cause of Belgium and the allies. It is like the Germans to use this use of the statements—made by Canada—to strengthen their cause and weaken the cause of the allies. Who is responsible for this astonishing condition, or the steps that have led up to it, or for its continuance? Surely the Borden government. Only the government promptly panned a Northern Ontario newspaper, recently enough, a Liberal paper, for indiscretion, in regard to censorship or some such comparatively trivial military matter, the government has permitted Mr. Bourassa's paper, "Le Devoir," to print day by day during the past twenty-two months, columns of seditious and treasonable appeal, which directed to the French Canadian readers, have to have poisoned the popular mind and made recruiting in Quebec almost negligible quantity. In permitting this this government has effectively, if not intentionally, been effectively playing into Germany's hands, serving its cause, and weakening the cause of the allies. Why is this permitted? Is it because Bourassa is too valuable a vote-getting partisan interests to antagonize? Is it because the partisans of Bourassa's treasonable anti-British anti-recruiting and, virtually, German sentiments and doctrines, the Borden cabinet, stay the hand of loyal members of the cabinet? Every honest Canadian, no matter what his party politics, think this over and try to imagine a similar country where a similar utterance of speech and sentiment would be permitted for twenty-four hours! This is a free country, but it is not free enough to countenance influences that imperil our safety, by weakening, morally and physically—its national capital de corps and the forces engaged in the cause for the freedom we and the allies are fighting for.

OURSELVES FIRST.

Adam Beck, head of the Hydro Commission, has declared that no power shall be exported from Canada from the surplus available after Ontario's needs are satisfied. While there is the right stand to take, Sir Adam merits no particular praise for being a man of common sense and possessed patriotism he could do otherwise. This attitude towards developed electrical power should be the general attitude of both Dominion and Provincial governments towards the other natural resources of the country. For us, first, they should provided—in the phraseology of a parliamentary document, "for their use and benefit"; that is, we shall have the full benefit of the values from their development, itself, apart from development, itself, the service, the service of the people of Canada, first considered—and considered as relates to cost of transmission.

This is especially applicable at this time when we need to economize, conserve and employ all our resources of manhood and material for ultimately selfish purposes—to help win the war. If it is the correct thing, the obvious thing, the patriotic thing, to make the export of electrically developed power, subject to consideration of the supply of our own domestic needs first, we should apply the same principle to our pulp wood products. The Dominion should take its cue, in this regard, from the clear, and decided attitude of the unanimous action of the Hydro Commission and the Ontario Government in the matter of power. Exportation of pulp wood, still increased prices, is subject to this action of the Government in regulating, in home interests, the domestic supply and export supply of pulp and paper. This is a matter that affects our whole population. The newspapers are the popular libraries, finding their way into almost every home, from the humblest to the highest, holding an indispensable relation to the material, moral and educational interests of the people. Anything that will hamper the newspaper and printing business is a national injury. If we are to have, as we should have, full or fuller advantages from having the whip hand in the matter of paper, we should provide that our supply is not threatened with, or subjected to, inconvenience limitation, through too free exportation. Excess exportation of power will lessen our supply of mechanical electricity, and excess export of paper or pulp will impair the value of our intellectual electricity, as represented by the press and the interests it stands for.

RESPONSIBILITY.

Responsibility is a heavy word, if we submit our shoulders to its weight A sense of responsibility is easily created. It comes when responsibility is thrust upon us and we accept it. In this great war thousands of "scamps" and no'er-do-wells as society held them, have enlisted and when confronted with the responsibility of playing the man, they have measured up to it; they have become of our best fighting men and have won decorations for their courage. Young lads not long from the school desk or college halls have been made officers and we smiled at the idea. Yet some of them have developed under responsibility an efficiency we would have thought impossible. One young Peterborough man, a case in point; he left Canada as a corporal and returned a lieut.-colonel, charged with the responsibility of organizing and commanding a regiment. With responsibility thrust upon him, he met it, the sense of it came to him, confirmed his resolves, steadied his impulses and made the boy a man, the corporal a colonel. If we want to make a man of a boy, or a woman of a girl, we should place some responsibilit upon them. If they have anything in them the seeds of responsibility will bring it out.

It requires a good man or a good government to accept and live up to his or its responsibility. It is not a sign of a strong government, if it declines to accept responsibility. The high cost of living is a real live issue with our people who feel its pinch; and as the custodian of the public interests, the government was appealed to—to do something. What did it do? It evaded the responsibility and threw it upon the municipalities. This is no partizan construction of their action or inaction in a matter of vital public interest. Mayor Church of Toronto who is not much of a Grit, presiding at a meeting in that city in protest against the governments "half-baked" measures represented by its order-in-council, said that the government had "not acted with any strength in the matter; and when the question was fought to an issue, the responsibility was placed with their municipalities"—in other words the government shirked its responsibility and instead of shouldering it, shouldered it upon the municipalities. The government has, moreover, failed to take any effective responsibility in the matter of recruiting and if we had had to depend upon the government in this matter; if we had not had the splendidly impulsive spirit of voluntarism operating upon our young men; if we had not had patriotic private citizens take the responsibility the government had evaded, we should not have had now nearly 400,000 splendid Canadian soldiers under arms.

HOW AUSTRALIA DEALT WITH THE MATTER OF METAL SUPPLY TO GERMANY

In view of the revelations made by Mr. Hartley Dewart, M.P.P., in regard to the control of Canada's nickel, and particularly in view of his mention of the part played by the so-called "English" firm of H. R. Merton & Co., there is special timeliness in recalling a speech made before the Empire Parliamentary Association in the British House of Commons recently by Premier Hughes, of Australia. It may be noted that "the English firm" to which Mr. Hughes made such scathing references is the same Merton & Co. to which Mr. Hartley Dewart has referred. Mr. Hughes said:

Well, when the war broke out, and Australia, in common with the rest of the Empire, rallied to the standard, it was found that the great metal industry of Australia, the sources to which the Empire might have looked for a supply adequate even for its abnormal needs, was so completely dominated by German capital and German influence that the choice seemed to be only between complete paralysis of the industry, shutting down of the mines, the throwing out of employment of thousands of workmen, or supplying these metals to the agencies of Germany through whom alone the Australian companies were permitted by their contracts to sell their products, and through whom alone Britain could buy them.

Is not this an exact duplication of the position in which Canada found herself in regard to her wonderful nickel supplies? Mr. Hughes continued:—

The German agencies of whom I speak were not situated in Germany, but in London. They were—legally considered—British firms. Actually, they were, for all practical purposes, German. Under the cloak of naturalization, our enemies were within the very heart of our citadel; for it is literally true—although it has sometimes been questioned—that for nearly twelve months after we were at war with Germany, the British Government could only buy Australian lead—or any other—from a German firm. It may be said that it was an English firm. Legally, it was; and so no, but in essence it was German. It was a tentacle of that great German "metal octopus" that, with its heart at Frankfort-on-Main — the headquarters of the Merton group—had got the earth in its grip. What an intolerable insult to our pride as British citizens it was and is that Germany should have such a hold over our trade that we should actually have been compelled to buy the raw material for munitions from German agencies at prices practically fixed by them, and that we should have had to pay $450 or $500 for spelter in America while Germany was able to get it at $130. And this spelter which she got at $130 was largely from Australian ores. To kill Englishmen, and Australians, too, with ammunition made from Australian ores, and, at the same time, to compel the British Government to buy its ammunition through German agencies at three times the normal price, was admittedly a master-stroke.

But the Australian Government did not acquiesce in the situation. They did not allow the metal trust to ship Australia's ore out to a neutral country, on the promise that none should be sold except to strictly friendly or neutral countries, and the further promise that some time or other after the war some of the ore should be refined in Australia. No. They expropriated all the German metal interests in Australia, and at one stroke brought control of all the lead, copper and zinc resources of the Commonwealth into British hands. It has been declared that the Krupps, under concealed names, are really at the back of the International Nickel Company, which holds Canada's wonderful nickel supplies in the hollow of its hands. Mr. Dewart has produced documentary proof that this same "Merton & Co." are connected with it. Yet the Government friends of the company meet all criticism of the nickel situation with a "Hush! All is well!"—Montreal Herald.

F. A., in response to a gift of socks and gum sent by the Soldiers, Wives and Mothers' Club:

Dear Mrs. Jay,—I received your gift of socks and gum, and they are the things we need most out here, as there is lots of rain and mud to put up with. We are still keeping up the good work and fighting very hard. We are getting fed well, as good as could be expected, and getting good clothing. I am a Peterborough married man and my home is at 625 Aylmer street. I have been out nearly two years, and have been in nearly every scrap, and come out safe so far. You can thank the good people of Peterborough. Give us comforts and ammunition and we will soon be home and then we will enjoy the comforts at home.

A number of the 109th Lindsay Battalion men, who went overseas shortly after the 57rd Battalion are listed in the recent casualty lists. Pte. Percy Junkin of Bobcaygeon has been killed and several Lindsay members of the 109th wounded:

The Lindsay Post says: The 252nd Battalion has recruited and enlisted over thirty men in the past ten days; and while this is very encouraging to the staff, it is hoped that more results will be obtained from the outlying districts, which up to the present are much behind the towns in the number of men enlisted.

A draft of twenty-five men from the No. 3 special service company at Kingston has been attached to the 235nd Battalion. These men were all recruited in this neighbourhood and many of them have homes in Lindsay. They are a welcome addition to the battalion.

The following letter has been received from Signaller P. H. McCracken, a Puterborough boy in France:

H. Q. S., 12th Brigade, C.E.F.,
France, Nov. 11th.

Dear Mother:—Just a few lines to let you know I am well, hoping you are all the same. I have not had a letter from you for about a week now, but I expect one before long. I had a letter from Lottie Hamilton a few days ago, also one from Burwell Moore. In the last letter from Ethel she told me that Stan. Smith was dead. I was very sorry to hear it. I knew he had been wounded, but did not know whether he was dead or not. I guess his wife will feel pretty bad over him. I also saw where Lieut. Morris was dead. He was a fine fellow. He was up to camp with us the time I was at the lakes. I was talking to Bert over the telephone the other day. He said he was well then. I met Charlie Sharpe one day last week. He has just been out for a short time. He looks pretty well also. What kind of weather are you having over there? Pretty cold I guess. We are having a lot of rain just at present. There is a heavy mist falling. I expect it will turn to rain before it is finished.

Well, I guess you will be busy getting ready for Christmas by the time you get this letter. Now, I don't want you to go spending a lot of money buying things to send out to me, for I will be all right here. You were asking what I would like. Well, I am going to ask you would you please send me some "tit-bits." I like to get a good candy once in a while, and we can't buy very much, only chocolate bars over here, so I thought you would buy me a few, but I don't want you to go buying a lot of things for I may never get them at all. I only wish I was in a place where I could buy something to send to you, for you have been so awfully good to me, sending me so many boxes over, but I hope to be able to pay back the kindness some day. I don't want you to worry about me, for I am all right over here. I don't see very much excitement.

Well, I guess I'll have to come to a close as news is very scarce around here.

Sig. P. H. McCracken.

Sergt.-Major R. T. Biggs who went overseas with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R. and who returned on furlough in July last was taken ill on the way back to England and after being confined to hospital in Halifax was discharged by a medical board as unfit for service. He returned to his duties at the Armouries this morning.

In the list of casualties among Canadian N.C.O's and men who went overseas with the Canadian forces and were transferred to the Imperial Army appears the name of Pte. J. Galloway of Peterborough who is reported wounded. Pte. Galloway left with the first contingent and was transferred to the Highland Light Infantry with whom he went to the front.

Pte. Henry Morrow of Havelock is officially reported wounded.

MESSAGE OF SYMPATHY.

Mrs. Edward Payne, 215 Carlisle Avenue, whose son, Pte. Edward William Payne was killed in action, has received the following message of condolence:

"The Prime Minister and members of the Government of Canada send their deepest sympathy in the bereavement which you have sustained."

To be, or not to be. That is the question. To be a soldier and a man, or not to be. That is the question that has troubled many minds since Aug. 14th 1914. It has been made possible for every man of eligible age an physical fitness to find his place in the ranks of the Empire's heroes. We have heard some say, "I'd sooner a live coward than a dead hero at day." Yes, but think what a hero at a time the live cowards will be when the live heroes come home after the war. Buck up, boys, get into the game, it's worth while. If you are too short for the 247th Battalion, the Bantam Battalion, 236th, will take you.

THE SILENT WATCHERS.

They sail, those silent watchers,
Far o'er the Northern Sea,
Manned by the sons of men who fought
To keep old England free.
The dreadnought and the cruiser,
And the craft of humble degree,
That gallant craft that sweeps the mine
From the pathways of the sea.

They watch, these silent watchers,
At the gateway of Britain's might.
They watch through the rage of the stormy day
And the frosts of the starry night.
The dreadnought and the cruiser,
And the gallant men of the sea;
Ready to die as their fathers died
To leave their children free.

They guard the broad Atlantic routes
From the treacherous craft of the Hun;
They guard the shores of British lands
From the east to the setting sun.
From Vancouver and the Rockies,
To the proud Laurentian Hills,
From the Fraser to Cape Breton,
The pulse of their prowess thrills.

And because they watch in the darkness,
Those guardians of Britain's might,
Our homes are secure from the pestilence
Of the brutal war lord's blight.
Our cornfields wave in plenty
And the fires in our hearths burn bright,
For the lads from the land of our fathers
Are guarding our homes to-night.

Shall we help to keep that vigil
They have called to us in their need?
Shall we answer as Britons should answer,
We are whelps of the lion's breed?
Shall we take our share with the British tars,
We men from over the sea?
Canadian sons of the men who fought
To keep old England free.
And the fires in our hearts burn bright.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

DEADLY CANDY AND TOYS.

London. — Miss Helen Mantries, a Scotch nurse who has come from Roumania, said in an interview published in the Observer: "At Bucharest, poisoned sweets and toys were dropped by German airplanes. One of the bombs contained microbes of every kind of virulent disease — cholera, diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid. M. Jonescu was present at the analysis of some of the contents of the sweets which looked like satin pralines. They were made of chloride of lime. Many children ate them and died. One morning after an air raid glittering pencil cases lay strewn in the street. A soldier picked up one and was unscrewing the metal when it exploded. Three of his fingers were blown off.

ACTRESS GOT BIG LEGACY

LONDON, Nov. 30.—A Berne despatch to the Wireless Press says that the will of Emperor Francis Joseph, which was opened the morning after his death to ascertain whether it contained directions for his funeral, was found to have in it a provision for a legacy of £50,000 to the actress Katharina Schratt. This part of the will, the despatch says, was dated some years back, while other clauses had been added during the war.

Heartburn and Windy Spasms

The efficacy of Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief in these complaints will be a revelation to those who have hitherto trusted to bismuth or soda mixtures, or to old-fashioned liver pills and salts. Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief does that quickly, surely, and so it effects real cure where the old purgative preparations only weaken the system, and create the pill-taking or salts-taking habit.

Take Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief for constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, sick headache, dizziness, spots before the eyes, flatulence and windy spasms, acidity, heartburn, impure blood, and that dull, heavy feeling which is a sure indication of liver troubles.

GERMANS DEMAND BELGIUM AND MASTERY OF THE SEAS

Remarkable Article on Peace Terms—To the Victor Belong the Spoils, is Doctrine

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Rheinish and Westphalian Gazette, in an article on the prinriple of German peace, declares that the reconciliation of Germany and her western enemies is impossible, according to an Amsterdam despatch to Reuter's. The paper declares that it believes Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg recognizes this and adds:

"Our ultimate aim is to push through to the west and the ocean. Whatever offers resistance must be crushed." Refering to the Balkans, the Gazette says: "What the victor gets, he holds." In respect to the lost German colonies the Gazette is quoted as saying:

"The French Provinces are worth twice our colonies and we will take our compensation out in France. Let us daily tell the French that every foot we conquer is ours. We need not waste words about Belgium; we need access to the Channel and we need Antwerp. Whoever wants Belgium may fetch it from us."

The Gazette concludes that England is more assailable than Russia and that London can be destroyed easier than Moscow because, it says, Moscow costs blood and London only torpedoes.

"We have no fantastic dreams," are the Gazette's final words, "of conquering the world. German burgdom is not yet ripe for mastering and governing a world-empire. We neither can nor will destroy the British Empire, but the minimum necessary for German peace is the complete beating down of France in the west and prestige of the German flag on all the seas."

An Amsterdam despatch to the Times refers to the Gazette's article as by far the most remarkable that has yet appeared in regard to German peace terms. The despatch adds that the Gazette represents great industrial magnates who "as recent executive changes show, are making their influence increasingly felt."

Annexation is also advocated by Dr. Jaeger, a member of the Central party in the Reichstag, who, writing in the Dusseldorf General Anzeiger, insists that the Berlin blood shed in Belgium since 1914 must not have been shed in vain.

"Belgium must be our guarantee," writes Dr. Jaeger, "for a good part of the war costs. We must retain permanently the Meuse line with Liege and Namur. Part of old Luxemburg which has become Belgian can perhaps be ceded to the Grand Duchy."

After saying that the Walloons could be ejected from their homes, Dr. Jaeger pronounced in favour of allowing the Belgian dynasty to remain. He declared, however, that the country must be brought politically, militarily, and economically in closer relation to Germany.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN.

A PICTURE FOR HUSBANDS.

Here is a picture which some husbands could study with advantage. Many a man seems to regard these household duties of his wife as not to be compared for a moment with those which engross his attention. He expects, if business has perplexed or made him anxious, to have his wife's sympathy when he comes home at night, but never imagines that during the day anything could have occurred to trouble that wife. He returns from his workshop or counting room soured, perhaps, by some bad bargains, annoyed by a stupid workman or unreasonable employer, morose from some ill-spoken word, and expects to be received with smiles: it matters not how surly may be his looks, his wife must be, in dress, in countenance, in words, all sweetness and amiability. He may have no pleasant word, may take his place moodily at the table, but his wife's words must be affectionate, and his wife's looks full only of gladness. What, he thinks, has she to trouble her?

The tea is despatched silently, very likely with somber complaints over the trials he has had during the day, or the closeness of the times; and then the evening paper is taken in hand and pored over until the very advertisements are devoured, or the reader's face is lowed upon the crumpled page in sleep. Or, if he be not weary enough for that, he seizes his hat and rustles for the club room or reading room, or more probably for the lounging place where should as he do congregate; there with the fragment of cigar in hand and desultory talk from his lips, he lingers till the noise of the closing of the shutters warns him to leave. He goes at last home again, because he cannot go anywhere else. Meanwhile the wife, with a heavy heart and tired step, got the little ones into bed, and as best she could, has worn away the long hours of the evening in silence and loneliness. Should a thought of his selfishness or injustice cross the mind of the husband, he responds with ready self-complacency, "I require relaxation, and must see my friends."

FOR HUSBANDS.

You are a husband. Your wife is absolutely at your mercy. She may not have known this when she became your wife, but she has been compelled to feel it since that eventful moment. However, neglectful, unkind, cruel or penuriously oppressive you may be sure she has had no redress. To publish her woes to the the public is her disgrace; to return your conduct in kind is only to increase your injustice to her. It may be that both your success in life and your ability to earn food for the children she has born to you, depends upon her skill in hiding, from the public your conduct to her in private. She has to smile before the world to conceal the wrongs she has to endure, and she is compelled to silence in private lest these wrongs may be increased.

She has left everything to devote herself to you and you have never indicated your appreciation of her action. She has planned, toiled and exhausted her resources of head and hand to minister to your comfort and advance your interests, but not a word of gartitude has ever escaped your lips. She has been confined to hearth and home all day long to piece out your income, to beautify and bless your home and to bring forth, to rear and to mould the minds of your children, but never an encouraging word has been spoken in her ears. She has shown by everything since she left her tears and tenderness of a devoted mother, that you are the one who, next to her Lord, occupies the most sacred place in her heart, but you have not spoken the endearing word, nor given the gentle touch of affection since the day she became your wife. You gave enough of these—aye too much—when you wooed in order to wed, but after the wedding the wooing ceased and the wife has wept in secret, her whole nature has been starved and her whole life, that ought to have been in the perpetual bloom of the month of May, has become a bleached and blasted desert of dry sand. All this has come to pass for the lack of those trifling attentions, those little marks of affection, those delicate acts of appreciation that constitute the food and life of a woman's soul. A true woman feeds upon the outward attentions that come from the heart of the husband she loves.

* * *

Well assorted marriages are essential to good homes. This is nature's law in the case. To violate it is to bring swift punishment on the heads of the violators, as well as to bring a curse upon posterity. The husband and wife who are not suited to each other lead a cat and dog life. Their children are unwelcome and grow up without care. The home atmosphere is not suited to the healthy growth of virtue and refinement. What is the result? A family of ill-natured, quarrelsome, unrefined children. They marry and carry to their homes the same atmosphere and rear other families like unto the ones in which they were raised. The wonder is that there are so many agreeable and cultured people in the world as there are.

Suit Is Withdrawn; Husband Pays $4,000

Wife, Fifty, Claimed $5,000 for Ejectment from His Hearth and Home.

WINDSOR, Nov. 30. — Jacob E. Eede, a wealthy London street resident, seventy-six years old, who last July married his second wife, a widow of fifty, paid her $4,000 to-day upon the advice of counsel, following the calling of her suit against Eede for $5,000 for ejectment from his hearth and home. The case was called before Mr. Justice Middleton, at the Essex session of the Ontario Supreme Court, held in Sandwich, but before it had proceeded very far, the Justice urged the contesting parties to "get together" if possible. Later it was announced that the suit had been withdrawn by Mrs. Eede, and that she would accept $4,000 from her husband, at the same time giving up her right to alimony.

Injured Man Laughed When Simple Treatment Was Suggested, but he Thanked his Comrade Later.

Once upon a time word came to Henry A. Voehl, of Plainfield, N. J., that a close friend had been injured, and full of anxiety he visited the afflicted man, who was suffering from a sprained ankle.

"It was so bad that the leg had turned black," said Mr. Voehl in relating the story. "I told him I would have him out in a week and he laughed at me. But I took him a bottle of Sloan's Liniment, that night he put some on and noticed the ankle felt better. I told him to use it every day, and in three days his ankle was practically well. In four days he was working. He gladly admits that Sloan's Liniment "put him on his feet."

Pulpwood a Reality And Promising Possibility of Our Townships Says Reeve Lean

The exigencies of news print production, not only under the present difficulties of labour carriage, reflect attention to Peterborough's possibilities in this important field. Reeve N. Lean of Burleigh and Anstruther, is urged by a minor obsession that the northern townships of this country do not receive the official attention they deserve. The number of fire rangers is entirely inadequate to cover the thousand of acres of wooded territory and too few to cope with fires even in their incipient stages. This indifferent attitude on the part of the county and its representatives and of the province as a whole springs from an accepted idea that the northern townships are all but valueless and impossible. Reeve Lean opposes that opinion. He states that pulp wood is cut out of Burleigh, Anstruther, Chandos and adjoining districts every winter, floated down the Eel river to Lakefield and there loaded on to flat cars. Spruce, balsam and poplar are principal pulp woods, and Mr. Lean states that an extensive acreage of young pine, following a cutting of fifteen years ago, is now attaining bulky form, but a forest fire would sweep through it with disastrous results. This pine practically invites the fire fiend and Reeve Lean is one of those who fear for its future because of the paucity of rangers. He also feels that the idea of reforestration might be applied to the townships, confident that in years to come the county would be amply repaid for present efforts to give that section a fair measure of consideration.

P. C. Blade Intercepts Auto Load Of Whiskey From Hastings And Chief Starts General Round-up

When P. C. Arthur Blade saw an automobile swing around a corner with an open door revealing a pile of wooden cases that looked suspiciously like whisky containers his curiosity lead to the biggest raid the local police have carried out in a long time. He immediately notified Sergeant Reid and together they followed the car to the garage of a local bartender where they found four cases of whisky, twelve bottles per case, but from one of them, six bottles were missing. The cases bore consignment tags to a Hastings man and the chauffeur, a young liveryman of the city, was manifestly "night-running" the liquor for its real consignees in Peterborough.

Chief Thompson was called out at 2.30 a.m. and immediately called out the force and later in the morning directed simultaneous raids on several hotels, including that at which the bar tender is employed and the private residence on Stewart street of a brother of another hotelman.

CHARGES LAID.

The material results of the early morning operations, and there will likely be others to follow, are briefly a charge against the first hotelkeeper of having liquor on his premises, and a charge against the bartender of having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling, to wit his garage.

As stated other actions may be worked up by Chief Thompson. The importance of this haul is found in the fact that it may be the end of certain rumors the police have been investigating.

FINED $10.

The chauffeur pleaded guilty in Police Court this morning to being drunk in a public place and was fined $10 and $3.75 costs. He refused to answer certain questions. Chief Thompson insisted upon as to where he got his liquor and was remanded for a week.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the bartender and was called into service by the chauffeur when the latter was cornered by the Chief. Mr. Gordon stated that Chief Thompson had been making illegal arrests. Magistrate Dumble upheld the Chief's request for a remand, and the latter reminded Mr. Gordon that he was City Solicitor.

The hearing of the charges against the hotelman and his barkeep was adjourned.

"War Brides" Took $40,000 and Broker Then Ends His Life

NEW YORK, Nov. 30. —Frank H. Smiley, who, it is said, lost a legacy of $40,000 in "war brides," sent a bullet through his brain in his law office at No. 58 Chambers street. His body was found by a scrubwoman where it had fallen, near his desk, on which he had finished figuring his losses, a sheet of paper showing a deficit of $3,600.

Andrew Calvin, another lawyer, from whom Mr. Smiley subleased his office room, was called from his home, at No. 98 Woodruff avenue, Brooklyn. He said Mr. Smiley inherited $40,000 recently and began to speculate in Wall street, dealing particularly in stocks affected by the European war.

"He made money at times," said Mr. Calvin, "but he could not understand why brokers should be entitled to such high commissions and to eliminate such commissions he devised a system of trading to eliminate the commissions. The result was that he bought issues upon which he lost all his money. He had been in pretty hard lines recently."

Mr. Smiley, who was fifty-five years old, lived with is wife at No. 231 West 105th street. No money or valuables were found in his pocket, the police reported.

Bishop Reeve Celebrated 25th Anniversary of Elevation to Episcopate

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Bishop W. D. Reeve, assistant Bishop of Toronto, yesterday celebrated the 25th anniversary of his elevation to the episcopate by entertaining all the city rectors to a luncheon in the Prince George Hotel, preceded by a celebration of Holy Communion at St James' Cathedral at 11.30. Bishop Reeve, who was the recipient of hearty congratulations, gave interesting reminiscences of his life in Canada, and the Right Rev Bishop Sweeny and Rev. Dr. Cayley also spoke.

Bishop Reeve's first real experience of Canada was gained in the North. It commenced after he had bid farewell to his home in Lincolnshire, Eng. and with his bride of two weeks he entered upon his work in the wilds of the Mackenzie River district. That was in 1869, when he was in his 25th year, and had behind him a sound training acquired at the Theological Training Church Missionary Society College London, Fort Garry, which is now Winnipeg, had then a population of 200 people. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Reeve passed through on their way to Fort Simpson, which was to be the centre of their labours for many years. The people there were scattered over a wide area; they were chiefly trappers and to fulfill his mission among them the Bishop had to perform his circuit on snow shoes or by sleigh in the Winter time and by boat or canoe in the Summer. Naturally, in that wild country at that time he had many thrilling experiences, and in addition to being missionary he had to act the part of physician to the sick.

Although Bishop Reeve spent 38 years in the Mackenzie district, being at one time Archdeacon of Chipewyan, and later the first Bishop of Mackenzie River. During these years many changes took place in the habits of the people. The country passed from a wild state to one of civilization.

In 1874 Bishop Reeve was ordained a Priest. In 1887 the University of Manitoba honoured him with the degree of Doctor of Divinity, and on November 29, the same year, he was created a Bishop at Holy Trinity Church, Winnipeg. It was only because of advancing years, and the strenuousness of the work in the North that Bishop Reeve sought a change, and in 1907 he came to Toronto to be assistant to the late Bishop Sweatman.

To further celebrate the event Bishop Reeve has caused to be sent photo of himself to all the clergy in this diocese and his former one of Mackenzie River, and to all the Bishops of the Anglican Church in the Dominion.

"I THANK THE DAY I FIRST HEARD OF NATIVE ROOTS"

Wife of Well-known Hamilton Tailor Was in Terrible Shape as Result of Stomach Trouble—Credits Famous Herbal Medicine with Being First to Ever Benefit Her.

Only those who have suffered from some tormenting ailment and tried every medicine they have heard of without results, can appreciate to the fullest extent what it means when a truly efficient medicine is at last found. Mrs. John McFarlane, wife of the well known Hamilton tailor, who lives at 93 Vine street, has had such an experience. Probably few women in Hamilton have spent more money in the last few years in an effort to find a medicine that would give permanent benefits. She suffered with a severe case of stomach trouble. She tried about every medicine she heard of without results. Her condition became alarming and was a source of continual worry to her devoted husband. Mrs. McFarlane was finally induced to try Extract of Native Roots (double strength), the famous herbal remedy which has become the talk of Hamilton because of its wonderful curative powers. For the benefit of others who might be afflicted as she was Mrs. McFarlane has made a public signed statement. Read what she says: "I was bothered with severe stomach trouble to such a degree that after sitting down to a meal and eating even as much as a piece of bread, I would have to leave the table. Dizziness caused from my stomach would overcome me. I couldn't even face my meal for fear of immediate vomiting spells that would come over me. I have taken one bottle of Native-Roots and can truthfully say that my headaches have left me and that I have no more trouble with stomach gas distress.

"I did more work yesterday and to-day than I have before in over a month and can now sit down to a good meal, relishing it throughout. I thank the day I first saw Native-Roots advertised in a Hamilton newspaper, as I had tried nearly everything and spent much money in an effort to get relief. In fact I have a regular drug store of medicine at my home. Bottles and boxes of stuff of no use to me after trying them all."

Native-Roots (double strength) can be procured in Peterborough at Warne Drug Co., or from leading druggists everywhere. Accept none but the genuine. Your druggist can get it for you from his wholesaler. Don't fail to start this wonderful treatment to-day.

Brussels Has New Edith Cavell Case

NEW YORK, Nov. 30. — The Sun this morning publishes the following:

Paris, Nov. 30.—When the details of the shooting of Mme. Heloise Moresse become known, the world will find the case is a parallel to that of Miss Edith Cavell, according to Vie Feminine, which to-day reports the death of the patriotic French woman, executed in Brussels.

Mme. Moresmes was the wife of a Belgian journalist. When the war began she remained with him. Her relatives last heard directly from her in January, 1916, but recently a merchant in Amsterdam wrote to them, saying she died "tragically," February 29, 1916, "the victim of her ardent patriotism." Confirmation has been obtained of the report that she was shot by the Germans, but no details have been ascertained.

Mme. Moresse was 40 years old, and a nurse at the Tuck Hospital, which was founded by Edward Tuck, a former New York banker.

St. Luke's Womens' Guild will hold their annual sale of fancy articles, aprons, home-made cooking and candy; on Thursday afternoon Dec. 7th.. Afternoon Tea will be served.

CENSUS OF MACHINERY IN GERMAN EMPIRE

Every Tool Will be Employed to Best Advantage in the Munition Factories.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The Man-Power bill, providing for compulsory service of civilians for war purposes, will be introduced to the Reichstag today with a speech by Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg pointing out the necessity of this sweeping measure. The Chancellor probably will give some assurance as to the way in which the bill will be enforced—a subject in regard to which various parties in the Reichstag still cherish anxieties.

The bill as introduced undoubtedly will differ considerably from the draft recently published. The principle of the measure that all able-bodied males between the ages of 18 and 60 not serving with the colors are liable to labor service in the interests of the Fatherland will be unchanged, but it is uncertain even at this late hour just what form the control of the Reichstag over the execution of the law will assume.

This uncertainty would result not only in extended debates in the Reichstag, but with General Von Stein, first quartermaster-general, declaring that the measure is an inevitable necessity, the Parliament is expected to surmount obstacles and make quick work of the measure.

The subject of equipment for the home army in the way of the necessary machines and tools for the production of munitions also will be settled quickly. The authorities are taking a census of all suitable machinery and tools in the Empire, and wherever these are not being employed to the best advantage they will be transferred to new munitions factories.

CURLING SEASON IS APPROACHING

The season when this popular winter sport commences is now drawing near and the committee are already getting things in shape. The Banks' Rink, which have been occupying the ice during the summer months, and have to vacate that part used for curling by December 1st, have already left, and it won't be long till the Curlers' Club are in session once more. It is that the secretary, Mr. [illegible] can be found at his office almost every day now booking dates after the correspondence, etc.

POULTRY SHOW OUT OF BUSINESS

No Show in Lindsay This Year Owing to Lack of Funds

For want of finances the Lindsay Poultry Show will be a defunct organization until other days and other men may probably resurrect it and bring about some change that will put it on a strictly sound basis.

At a meeting of the members held Monday night it was decided unanimously that no show would be given this year. A deputation from the Society approached the County Council last week, when it was in session, but the request for $50, or even $25 was turned down by a majority vote, many of the councillors averring that those winter shows were of no benefit to poultry breeders, nor to the poultry industry, looking at it from a business point of view. They were inclined to believe that it was the gambler in fowl that made money out of shows; in other words, the dealer who was a good judge and went out amongst the farmers at certain seasons purchasing the choicest birds from their flocks, which they afterwards trimmed up and exhibited in the show ring. With the showing of poultry became a business during the fall and winter. Fanciers of this type visited all the towns where shows were held and scooped in the money prizes and all valuable cups offered, and the farmer gained nothing! Those same exhibitors never probably had a setting of eggs hatched out on their own account, nor never sold a bird for breeding purposes in their life.

This was where the shoe pinched when the poultry men put their case before a body made up of practically all farmers, who are adepts in poultry raising and are out for the best interests of the breeder, not the fakir. It was striking this root that has blighted the association's prospects and shattered their hopes indemnitely. However, Lindsay is not the only place gone out, as Oshawa dropped out last year, and Cannington and Orillia have decided on a discontinuance of a show for this year.

To those who contributed cash towards the carrying on of a show in Lindsay a refund of the money and prizes, if any, will be made. All outstanding debts will be settled with whatever money is in the bank at present to the Association's credit.

Ald. Edgar Will Be A Candidate

Ald. John Edgar, when asked this morning as to his intentions at the forthcoming municipal elections, said that he proposed to seek re-election as a representative for the South Ward. He had no intention of entering the Mayoralty contest.

PASTOR APPROVES OF SUNDAY GOLF

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—That Sunday golf, Sunday automobile rides and other forms of quiet Sunday recreation were not so bad for Christian people were opinions expressed by the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, pastor of the Central Congregational church Brooklyn, in an address before the twenty-second annual meeting of the Woman's National Sabbath Alliance held in the Central Presbyterian Church, Madison avenue and Fifty-seventh street.

There were more than two hundred women present, including Mrs. Finley J. Shepard and other equally prominent and several left the church while Dr. Boynton was speaking.

There was little or no applause at the close of the address. After the meeting those present did not hide their displeasure. The organization is made up of the most conservative women in the Protestant churches, and their platform is the old Puritanical Christian Sabbath.

Dr. Boynton said he was not in favour of a Puritanical Sabbath to-day. He stated that when he was a boy his Sunday dinner consisted of "bread and butter and molasses," but that now the Sunday midday meal was the most elaborate of the week.

The clergyman first emphasized the need for public worship. He said he thought every one should go to church Sunday morning. For the afternoon he believed golfing or motoring or other recreation was not wrong.

Dr. Boynton said an elder of his church who was nervous asked him about playing golf Sunday afternoon.

"I told him to go along and play golf and he would be in all the better trim for Sunday evening service," said the clergyman. "I believe in keeping Sunday morning for worship. But we have a mind and a heart and a body, and we need to nourish all these on Sunday.

"I approve of recreation Sunday afternoon. We must throw off Sunday grave clothes. Sunday should be a day of joy and happiness and brightness. I do not want to go back to Puritanical standards."

Warsaw Items Of Interest

WARSAW, Nov. 29.—The Japanese evening held in the Methodist church was a splendid success. Tea was served from six to eight o'clock after which an excellent programme was rendered. Many beautiful and unique articles were for sale in a booth presided over by two fair maids in Japanese costume. The sale of goods was sent by Miss Ada Payne, a former member of this circuit who is now a missionary in Japan. A fine "log cabin" quilt made and donated by Mrs. Jacob White sold for $5.25. The programme, which was long and varied was as follows:

Address—Rev. Mr. Clare.
Prayer—Rev. Mr. Roberts.
Address—Miss Alice Wasen.
Japanese Chorus—Five girls.
Address—Miss Elsie Gherin.
Solo—Mr. Rufus Payne.
Address—Miss Florence Snider.
Duet—Messrs. Henry and Ernest Batten.
Address—Misses Lula Bell and Margaret Clare.
Solo—Mrs. George Taylor.

The addresses were instructive and full of interest. They set forth vividly life and conditions in Japan and the wonderful progress made during the last few years in religion, home life, and schools.

Mr. George Burnham of Peterborough was a business visitor in town on Monday.

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church will meet at the home of Mrs. Alex. Calder on Thursday of this week.

On Tuesday afternoon a knitting tea was held in the Red Cross room for the purpose of collecting fruit, etc., to be sent to the Convalescent Homes in Toronto. On account of the inclemency of the weather very few were present, but the contributions were liberal. The donation will not be sent forward for a few weeks so those who wish to contribute may still do so.

Mr. Bruce Hutchinson of Peterborough was here on business on Tuesday.

Mrs. Arthur Edwards returned on Thursday from Toronto where she has been attending the annual meeting of the Women's Institutes of Ontario.

Mr. William O'Brien of Peterborough was in town on Tuesday.

A ceremony of interest to people of this neighborhood took place on Saturday, October 21st, when the colors of the 86th Machine Gun Battalion, which had been donated by Mrs. W. E. Sanford, of Hamilton, and presented by the Countess of Aberdeen, on the morning of May 16th, 1916, the day on which the Battalion left for overseas, were deposited for safe keeping in the ancient and historic Cathedral of Canterbury, England.

The bearers of the colors were Lieutenant J. A. Dewart, son of the late John Dewart of this place, and Lieutenant Alexander McFarlane, both of whom have been warned for France and were expecting to leave in a couple of days for the firing line. The other members of the color party consisted of three non-commissioned officers, Sergeant-Majors Rowe, Neal, and Haylock, and an escort of ten men, carrying rifles with bayonets fixed, and all belonging to the original 86th Battalion.

When the color party reached the Cathedral they were admitted by the West entrance, which is only opened for Royalty or on strictly Military occasions. The party marched with unfurled colors up the centre of the nave and halted at the steps of the choir, before the Dean and Canons, who stood upon the altar steps. The Dean of the Cathedral then read the service appropriate for such occasions, including the 46th Psalm, and a prayer that, "He, before whose awful presence Moses laid up the tables of the law, and David, the sword of victory, might vouchsafe to receive these colors beneath the protection of His Holy House."

CAPTAIN TELLS OF HIS SHIPWRECK

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Captain Wielly Harts, of the bark Albatros, which sailed in ballast from an Italian port in September and was wrecked on the Mexican Coast north of Progreso on October 13, accompanied by his wife, arrived here on board the steamship Montrey, of the Ward line, from Progreso. Captain Harts said that it was a seeming miracle that he, his wife and the crew were saved in the face of the storm.

"There were thirteen in the crew," said Captain Hartz. "On October 13 we were in the southern part of the Gulf of Mexico. A gale sprung up, and we were hard pressed. The gale rose to a hurricane, and the wind blew from ninety to one hundred miles an hour. Under shortened sail we made an attempt to ride out the storm, but the timbers of the ship, twenty years old, gave way under the strain. Parts of the bottom timbers worked loose and floated up. The ship's carpenter finally reported that the water in the hold was gaining and I determined to make a drive for the Yucatan Peninsula, seventy-five miles to the south. More sail was set, and at the speed of twenty-five knots, we filled away! In less than three hours the breaking waves on the beach were sighted.

"I picked out the least boisterous portion of the beach and headed the ship for it. A man was stationed at the mainstay with an axe, and with orders to sever the rigging at a given command before we struck. This was done and the mast went by the board. Every man with lifejacks, was thrown from the deck by the shock when she grounded. I clasped my wife in my arms, but the seas tore her from me and I next saw her ashore, half a mile away."

A Mexican life-saving station rendered all the aid in its power. Captain Harts said, but could offer no assistance in getting to Progreso, the nearest city. The shipwrecked mariners marched nineteen miles overland, cutting their way through mesquite and cactus and finally reached a small fishing village. The journey to Progreso was made later. Despite her experience Mrs. Harts declared she was willing and ready to accompany her husband on any voyage he might make.

UNANSWERABLE.—"You should never take anything that doesn't agree with you," the physician told him. "If I'd always followed that rule, Mamie," he remarked to his wife, "where would you be?"

"ANNUAL PERJURY---"

Every year she says, says she,
"You must solemnly agree
Not to buy a thing for me—
Gifts mean nothing in my eyes—
It's the spirit that I prize,—
And we must economize."
So we solemnly concur.
And we earnestly agree—
Not a thing from me to her,
Not a thing from her to me.
Every year I say, said I,
Gazing gravely eye to eye,
"Give me nothing you must buy.
You'll admit it's very true
It's a foolish thing to do,
Swapping presents—me and you!"
So each year we gravely swear;
Though we're thoroughly aware
Each will spend a little more
On the other than before."
Doesn't this verse, taken from "New York Life," exactly describe the yearly procedure of many of us?
Without a doubt you will buy later; why not buy now, when everything is complete? The longer you delay, the more good things will be sold out.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Those who know most about the copper situation agree that there is a prospect for a larger advance in Kennecott than in any other of the copper issues, says the Boston Financial News.

Anaconda owns the International Smelter at Miami, Arizona, which is only second in size to its own smelter, handles the Inspiration and Miami output and produces 22,000,000 pounds of copper a month. It also owns 150,000 shares in Inspiration.

Laidlaw & Co.—Business conditions of market importance continue good beyond all precedent and wise conservatism seems to have little to guard against.

Jenks, Gwynne & Co.—The stock market has developed into a two-sided affair, with no definite trend apparent. Favor commitments for quick profits only for the present based on the sharp dips and rallies, as trading has become very professional.

Paste some blotting paper on the bottom of the flower bowls and they will not mar polished surfaces.

If the hems of each pair of stockings are pinned together with a small safety pin when they are washed it will save the time and trouble of sorting; also they can be hung on the line more quickly.

Boycott Cut Price Of Turkeys Fifteen Cents Per Pound

American Thanksgiving Day Bird Got So Dear That Ladies Would Not Buy It—Boycott Brought the Prices Down From 45 to 30 Cents Per Pound—Great Quantities of Eggs Reported to Have Been Thrown Away By Storage Warehouses.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.— The ladies of the Montreal Housewives League, who have instituted a boycott against potatoes in this city until such time as the price is reduced to what the public feel is a reasonable one, will receive considerable encouragement from the result of boycott that went into effect a day or two ago in Boston and New England and reached its culminating point to-day. This boycott was one against turkeys. Thursday being the American Thanksgiving, the manufacturers of Boston and the New England states found it "necessary" at the beginning of this week to gradually raise the price of the regulation festive bird till it had reached a point of 45 cents per pound.

"This was too much for the thrifty housewives of New England and they resolved that if turkey remained at 45 cents per pound that their Thanksgiving dinner would be one of New England codfish, for which commodity that part of the United States has more reason to be thankful than for turkey. The result was that little if any turkey was sold in Boston and districts during the week at 45 cents per pound and Tuesday the merchants began to show signs of anxiety and they would not be able to dispose of their large stocks. According to advices received in Montreal yesterday, Wednesday morning saw the beginning of the break and already in certain districts turkey can be purchased at 30 cents a pound.

Which is certain to be good news to the ladies who are actively engaged in promoting the boycott against potatoes in this city. Officials of the Montreal Housewives League stated yesterday that they were very optimistic as to the ultimate result of their scheme. Already they have assurance that very many families in this city will eat no potatoes until the price the market here the vast stocks that are located in Montreal and vicinity. They expect to be able to make an important announcement shortly in connection with the organization of further means to force the merchants to throw surplus stocks of commodities on the market and not keep them until they are spoiled by age and become unfit for food.

There was a well defined rumour abroad in certain quarters yesterday that certain cold storage firms in Montreal have been getting rid of large quantities of cold storage eggs within the past few days as they are unwilling that the Government inspectors who are certain to be busy soon should find too large a stock on their premises. It is stated that great quantities of these cold storage eggs have found a last resting place in the St. Lawrence river at various points from Point St. Charles west and that eggs enough to supply Montreal with omelets for a year have been disposed of in this way recently.

30,000,000 Eggs in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—City, state and federal officials, together with members of civic, women's and other organizations, were working yesterday in an attempt to find a solution for the high price of foodstuffs.

With the campaign centering on eggs, it is announced that municipal inspectors had discovered in storage about 800,000 eggs of questionable quality which were tagged and marked for examination by the city chemists, while more than 2,000,000 eggs were found in six cold storage houses awaiting an increase in price. In addition to 30,000,000 eggs stored in another warehouse, the owner of which has not been located. U. S. District Attorney Glynn also began an inquiry into the holdings of 70,000,000 eggs in Chicago, and to learn if Mr. Wets is not the actual owner, who is backing him in the alleged attempt corner.

SERIES OF LECTURES AT TABERNACLE

Rev. A. G. Doner to Give Portrayals of Coming Events and World Crisis.

Rev. Archibald Gormley Doner, the new pastor of Bethany Tabernacle, will begin a series of illustrated lectures on the "Great Dispensational and Governmental Plan of God."

The signs and evidences of terminal days will be faithfully pointed out, while the place of the Jew and the great world-war, as related to prophecy, will be interestingly demonstrated by the use of a large illustrated chart.

Pastor Doner has been a close student of the Prophetic Scriptures for over fifteen years, and has lectured on these themes in both Canada and United States.

In beginning these special addresses at the Tabernacle each Sunday, at both morning and evening services, the Pastor sincerely urges upon the people of Peterborough a return to the fundamental truths of the Scripture, to asking for the "old paths" and to heart-preparation for the imminent advent of the Millennial King.

Without respect to denominational connection we cordially invite the public to these services.—A. G. Doner Pastor.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.— Plainer fare will mark the menus of the diet squad of the Chicago Health Department during the remainder of the attempt to demonstrate how to live well at reasonable prices, the second week of which began yesterday, Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner, expressed the hope that in the final week the cost of feeding the twelve dieters might be cut to about 20 cents a day per person. Dr. Robertson said he expects to [illegible] the daily ration slightly, substitute less fattening and [illegible] foods, pointing out that in the first week the members of the squad made a total gain of 24 3-4 pounds. He said that this average had increased from 20.03 to 154.2.

Oddfellows Hold A Progressive Euchre Party

The Oddfellows and their friends and ladies held a very pleasing and successful entertainment last night in their spacious hall to mark the event of the opening of their new club rooms.

There was a very large number present.

The Oddfellows are invariably happy in their arrangements for the enjoyment of their guests, and judging by the expressions heard, last night's event was no exception to the rule.

Mr. Wise in his usual able manner very neatly expressed to the audience, the pleasure the management felt at seeing so many present, and that at the next similar event which would be held in January, they would again have the pleasure of welcoming the ladies to their hall.

Congregational Rally in St. Paul's To-night

For the last three nights no fewer than sixty-eight of the men of St. Paul's church have been engaged in an every-member visitation of the congregation. These men will meet in the Sunday school hall this evening at eight o'clock to give in their reports. An invitation is extended to all the members and adherents to be present.

The men were instructed to ask those whom they visited a number of questions and to receive from them suggestions for the improvement of the congregational life. The answers to these and the suggestions offered will form the basis of the reports and discussions to-night. It is expected the meeting will be an interesting one.

Restaurant Has 350 Chickens In Storage For Winter

A local restaurant has already purchased 350 chickens on the market and placed them in cold storage for winter consumption. They were bought at the prices prevailing under supplies that were heavier than the regular demand and thus provide a full larder for the season when prices will be higher. It indicates the fact that the market has offered the public larger quantities of poultry than it was prepared to buy.

Work of Major Davidson Is Highly Praised

At a meeting held by the Daughters of the Empire in Port Hope, Nurse Russell, who has lately returned from England with a number of wounded soldiers, spoke in the most enthusiastic words of the work, and increasing energy of Major J. C. Davidson, in the Orpington Hospital, Kent. Miss Russell spoke of many others who are interested in the same work, but seemed most impressed by Canon Davidson. At the same meeting the I.O.D.E. voted $200 to the Orpington Hospital, for chairs for the wounded. These are badly needed, as up to date there were but five amongst seven hundred soldiers. $100 was voted for the Y.M.C.A.

147 Deserters Now in The Prison Farm, Guelph

GUELPH, Nov. 29.—The order releasing the deserters, which was sent out from Ottawa will mean quite a slump in the population of the Prison Farm here should the men accept the leniency extended to them. There are 147 men at the present time serving terms at the Reformatory for desertion from the various units of the Canadian overseas forces. This information was given out by Dr. Gilmour, Superintendent. All these will be released on condition that they at once return to the unit from which they deserted or to the officer commanding the military district from which they came. There are about four hundred men at the Farm here now.

MET DEATH IN FRANCE

Lieut. W. Stewart Laing, Well Known Peterboro' Boy Who Was at the Front With Canadian Engineers, Killed in Action on Nov. 27th

PROMOTED OVERSEAS

The tragic news was received this afternoon that Lieut. W. Stewart Laing of the Canadian Engineers, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Laing, 490 Cedar Street, is officially reported killed in action on Nov. 27. The news will be a great shock to the city, generally, as Lieut. Laing had a host of friends here. He was born in Peterborough and had lived practically all his life here, receiving his earlier education in the public schools and collegiate institute and afterwards attending Queen's University, Kingston. He enlisted as a sapper with the Queen's Engineers, early in the war, and had been at the front for a long period, receiving his commission as lieutenant for good work in the field. Lieut. Laing was a member of St. Andrew's church and at the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. He is survived by his parents, one brother, Mr. J. M. Laing and one sister.

County Asked To Contribute

Patriotic Fund Deputation Indicates the Share for 1917 Needs Expected From County

The 1917 demands of the Patriotic Fund in Peterborough were outlined by a local deputation to the City Council this afternoon who after stating through Mr. Daniel O'Connel that the city had decided to contribute $60,000 of the $100,000 needed for next year and recommended to the County Fathers that they undertake to provide the remaining $40,000.

The deputation was composed of Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. R. G. Peever, Judge Huycke, Daniel O'Connell, E. A. Peck K. D. Kerr, Jos. Wearing, Chief Howard, R. Winch, J. A. Aylmer, Adjutant McElhiney, C. A. G. Spence, Aldermen Stratton, Edgar Langford, Weir.

Mr. O'Connell proved an able and eloquent spokesman for the deputation. Mr. Staples spoke for the Canadian Patriotic Fund, representing Sir Herbert Ames. He was in Dresden, Germany for a considerable period after the outbreak of the war and returned to his Canada for a visit.

Ald. Edgar represented Mayor Duffus who is out of the city. Rev. Mr Peever, Rev. Mr. Webb and Judge Huycke spoke pointedly and briefly supporting the Patriotic Fund.

Mr. O'Connell explained to the Council the operations of the Patriotic Fund in Peterborough the careful and unremitting attention its disbursement had received, the investigation of the home and financial conditions of its beneficiaries and the successful effort to suppress extravagant expenditure of the money the Fund distributes to the dependent families of our soldiers. The handling of the Fund in Peterborough had been reduced practically to a scientific system.

Passing to the contribution since the war began.

Mr. O'Connell stated that Peterborough city and county had up to the present contributed $113,415.45 to the general fund, of which $112,224.00 had been returned to the Peterborough branch for distribution in this county and city. Only $191 now remained at Ottawa to the credit of Peterborough, and by the end of December more money would have been drawn from than had been paid to the Patriotic Fund. The monthly distribution of money in this county amounts to $7,500.

The estimate requirements for the local fund in 1917 Mr. O'Connell placed at $720,000, which had been reduced to $100,000 by Ontario's large donation of two million dollars to the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Mr. D. O'Connell told the Council that the gentlemen behind the local fund had actually been engaged in the collections for every patriotic movement. They had found that many undesirable persons had refused to share in any of the sacrifices and it was recently concluded that it was impossible to raise $100,000 in Peterborough or $60,000 in the city this year. Hence the city's adoption of the method of raising $60,000 by issuing 20-year debentures.

A piece of cardboard slipped over the hooks or nails in the kitchen sink door will protect it from soil and mould from damp cloths and may be replaced frequently.

TORONTO BREWERY UP ON TEST CASE

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—The first Police Court prosecution of its kind in Toronto to date under the Ontario Temperance Act was argued before Magistrate Denison to-day when the Reinhardt Brewery Company appeared to answer to two charges: One a charge of selling to a person in the Province; the other a charge of selling and delivering to a person in the Province to re-sell.

A policeman saw a delivery waggon take on an 8-gallon keg of ale at the brewery, followed it, and saw the liquor delivered to George Gardner. James Haverson, counsel for the defendants, produced papers and evidence to show that Gardner had ordered the liquor from George Dennis, who also does business under the name of the Montreal Bottling Co., in Montreal, and had sent the money in payment; that Dennis had previously ordered from the brewery, and paid for a quantity of liquor to be kept in the brewery to be delivered to his order; and that on receipt of the order and money from Gardner Dennis had ordered the brewery to deliver from his own stock in the brewery the liquor ordered from him by Gardner. Therefore, M. Haverson argued, it was a sale to a party outside the Province, under the privileges granted by sections 45 and 130 of the Act.

"The question is, your Worship, whether this was a sale within the meaning of the Act, or only a way of getting around the sale," said Crown Attorney Corley.

"Unless the sale of liquor to Montreal parties were bona fide, the breweries simply could not continue in business," argued Mr. Haverson. "They have too much at stake".

Magistrate Denison said the question at issue was a very important one, and would have to be gone into most thoroughly. He adjourned the case for one week.

The second charge against the Reinhardt Brewery, that of delivering liquor to a person within the Province for the purpose of re-sale, brought George McFarlane, of 346 Queen street east, into court, both as a witness and defendant. Inspector Greer found overproof beer on tap in McFarlane's premises. McFarlane was consequently charged with unlawfully selling liquor within the Province. He was fined $200 and costs. Immediately afterwards he was called by the Crown as a witness against the brewery. He said he had ordered local option beer, and believed he had got it.

"If I had known it was overproof I could have given the inspector some other kind," he confessed. The brewery's defence was that the overproof liquor was intended for shipment to Montreal, and had been delivered to McFarlane by mistake. On this charge they were defended by Hartley Dewart, K.C.

"I admit that some things seem like a hardship" remarked Mr. Corley. "But Mr. Dewart is in a position to make representations in certain quarters.

"Yes," said the magistrate. "I am glad to hear it. Mr. Dewart might do worse than bring some things to the careful attention of the department. Meanwhile the law is on the books, and must be obeyed."

The brewery company was found guilty and fined $200 and costs. Both parties will send their checks tomorrow.

You can easily wax your thread for sewing table linen, etc., by removing the paper labels from the spools and immersing in hot paraffin wax, keeping the thread in the hot wax for half an hour. Remove and rub with a soft cloth to rid them of superfluous wax.

The dark brown stains which cigarettes make on copper or brass ash trays can quickly and easily be removed with a little denatured alcohol applied with a brush.

In the last rinsing water for sheer materials, such as scrim curtains, use one tablespoonful of powdered borax to each gallon of water. This prevents the cloudy appearance so often noticed when starch is used, and the material will iron much easier.

To tighten a sewing machine belt, put a few drops of castor oil on the loose belt, run the machine a few minutes and belt will tighten.

Washington Asks Allies To Pass Austrian Envoy

INTERNATIONAL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The United States has sent notes to Great Britain and France, it became known Wednesday, requesting reconsideration by those governments of their refusal to issue a safe conduct through their blockade lines for Count Tarnowski, new Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to this country, and speaking of the unfortunate effect that a continued refusal would have on opinion here.

The notes declare that it is an inalienable right of sovereign nations to exchange Ambassadors and insist that a third nation, even in time of war, is not justified in denying that right.

Great care is taken to base the representations solely on the grounds of international right as distinguished from mere international courtesy, making it clear that the United States is not asking a favour or assuming the attitude of a pleader.

Care also is taken not to put the government in the position of having changed its attitude since the last communication on the subject, which was merely the transmission of the Austrian government's request for a safe conduct. It was intended at first, when the rebuff was received, to drop the position of being a messenger of Austria and make a formal demand in the name of the United States.

It was decided, however, that it was unnecessary to take such action at this stage of the negotiations, when it is hoped that a firm statement of the general principles of international law in the case will cause a reconsideration by the Allies. If the present note meets with an unsatisfactory response it is admitted that a very difficult situation will be developed.

EXPECT CHANGE OF ATTITUDE.

The Allied Embassies are deeply concerned over the resent felt by the Washington government and are taking unusual care to keep their governments fully informed. It is not known that they have forwarded any direct representations to their governments except in so far as the nature of their information is in itself a recommendation. Nevertheless, officials have every hope that this informal action by the diplomatic representatives on the ground will go far toward influencing a change of attitude on the other side.

Early replies to the American notes are expected, owing to the fact that Count Tarnowski hoped to leave Rotterdam on the Dutch steamship Nieuw Amsterdam on December 16.

Should the replies prove unfavourable the United States might send a final note notifying the Allies to disturb the Austrian envoy at their own risk, or it might be decided to send an American merchantman or warship to some neutral port to receive the Ambassador and bring him across the Atlantic. As yet, however, such a contingency has hardly been contemplated in view of the confident belief that the Allies will yield.

CATTLE MARKET.

Receipts at the Toronto Union Stock Yards yesterday were 72 cars made up of 412 cattle, 136 calves, 3,594 hogs, 470 sheep and lambs.

Market prices are steady to firm for all good quality butcher cattle, but easier on common stuff, with trade inclined to drag on the latter.

The bulk of cattle offerings for today was of very poor average quality, and prices for the commoner stuff were inclined easier. Choice butcher steers and heifers continued quite firm. Butcher cows and bulls, steady; canners and cutters steady and good demand.

Common light stockers are easier.

Hogs firm, and 10c to 25c higher.

Good veal calves firm.

Sheep and lambs firm, the later 25c to 40c higher.

Hogs steady to firm at $11.50 off cars, a little higher paid on one or two lots.

Production Is Less Population Is Lower

W. C. Good, B.A., Sees Serious Rural Problem in This Province—"Back to the Land"—Capital and Labour Drift Away From the Farm, and Mr. Good Tells the Reason

THE NATION'S LEADERS

TORONTO, December 1.—A serious condition fronts the future of this country through the decline in agriculture in the past fifteen or twenty years, said W. C. Good, B.A., of Brant County, who delivered an address at luncheon yesterday before the Empire Club on "Canada's Rural Problem."

Mr. Good, who was born and raised on the farm which he now operates, has lived for five years in this city, and spent two years at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, so that he has had opportunities to study the problem from almost every angle. After emphasizing the importance of agriculture from the standpoint of its relation to the financial future of the country, and the human material it supplies for other industries, he made a rapid review of the way farming has declined to such an extent as to constitute a serious menace to the future of the country.

SERIOUS RURAL PROBLEM.

"We have a serious rural problem confronting us," he said, "and the war is not responsible for it. The curtailment of production is getting worse and worse, and the pressure bearing on the farmer is going to result in a further and more serious lessening of production. There is such a depletion of people in the rural districts that the social life of the country is becoming seriously menaced. Much of the land that was formerly cultivated is now cattle range. The weeds are increasing year by year. Hundreds of acres are useless because of lack of drainage. Even the live stock is on the decrease. The timber is rotting on the land, all through lack of help. Men who can earn three or four dollars a day in other industries find that the farmer cannot pay them more than fifty cents a day in farming."

Mr. Good went on to give several instances of farms which are slowly perishing year by year. He mentioned one farm in his own neighbourhood which in the time of the present owner's grandfather was worked by six men, and extra summer help. Now one man has to run the whole place, and the production of the land has been cut down to one-third or one-half of its former production.

LAW OF COMPENSATION.

The reason, Mr. Good said, for this depletion of country life, is not that farmers make life unattractive for their children, or that the cities are too attractive for the young people, but that the fundamental law of compensation for labour and capital stands in the way. The rewards of agriculture are not as good as in other industries, and to illustrate his point he said that in the five years from 1910 to 1914 in Canada the surplus profit in the manufacturing industry was $289,000,000. In the same period the deficit in the agricultural industry was $110,000,000, which had to be met by the farmer and his wife taking less wages.

There are, of course, he continued, other rewards besides the material, but people will not follow an occupation which is so far inferior to others in its rewards. And that agriculture is such an industry there is no disputing, he said, because the drifting away of capital and labour into other industries indicates it. The natural trend of labour and capital into profitable industry cannot be gainsayed.

NATION'S LEADERS.

Speaking of the wonders of country life, Mr. Good ascribed to it the important office of supplying the leaders in every line of endeavour, men and women who enter into city life with new blood and ambitions, and become the nation's leaders. City life is self-extinguishing in three generations, he said. The country has a monopoly of fresh air and sunshine and good food, which are of the greatest importance in the life of growing men. The varied nature of farm work contrasts favourably with the routine life of the city, and it calls for adaptability, initiative and resource. It's quietness is also conducive to continuity of thought and strength of character.

An independent yeomanry is one of the best guarantees of permanent democracy, he said, and democracy containing as it does in itself the seeds of continuity and life, the vital importance to the community of the rural classes cannot be exaggerated.

The foolish policy of this country followed before the war, in which the primary industry of agriculture is neglected and the secondary industries developed. Mr. Good deplored greatly, and characterized it as wild and stupid.

DAUGHTER BORN TO NEW YORK BRIDEG OF WAR WEDDIN

Vicomtesse de Kervern, Formerly Miss Priscilla Alden Griffin, of New York, a Mother.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—Vicomtesse George Marie de Mandiut de Kervern has given birth to a daughter. She is the daughter of Mrs. Elgene Griffin, of New York, and the late General Eugene Griffin. The child is to be christened Yolande.

Vicomtesse de Kervern was Miss Priscilla Alden Griffin before her marriage, on February 14, 1916, to Vicomte George Marie de Mandiut de Kervern, of Paris, at the house of her mother, Mrs. Eugene Griffin, of No. 500 Fifth avenue, New York city. The engagement had been announced in the month before, and they were to have been married in March, but the Viscount, who was in New York convalescing from wounds received on duty as a military aviator in the French army, was called back to the colours. The arrangements for the wedding were hurried, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. P. Daly, of St. Patrick's Cathedral, with a civil ceremony following on the same day in the Municipal Building by Alderman Isaac Guiman.

After the wedding the couple passed their honeymoon at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. They left for France on April 25, in order that the bridegroom could rejoin the Aviation Corps, while his wife was to live in Paris.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

She seated herself and glanced up at him with a half challenge in her eyes, even though her lips smiled charmingly.

"Mary"—the voice was now hard and the face was very fixed—"there is very little to understand and I have very little time for discussion. You have been abroad enjoying every human advantage that money could buy you. When you were a kid washing dishes in the White Mountains you cried to be pretty. If you had cried for the moon I would have tried to get it for you. If I'd failed it would have been my first failure. The beauty I didn't give you—education, culture, social standing of the highest. You have come back home with every exquisite accomplishment that a woman can have. I'm willing to admit that from my point of view you have been a good investment. You have instinctively the perfection that most women only arrive after. I'm so proud of you that I have chosen to make you the mistress of my house. What you want you have only to ask for, but you will please remember that I am head of my family. I shall make few demands—and these must be complied with. That is all there is to understand."

"I had understood," she answered very quietly, "that I was to regard this house as my own and that I was to be mistress here. That, you pointed out in your letters, was why I should find it preferable to going to my mother's. Was it not so?"

"If you had gone to mother's would you have expected to upset the entire schedule of family affairs?" he demanded.

"Daughter am I in my mother's house, but Mistress in mine own," she quoted.

Hamilton Burton took several turns back and forth across the floor. The whole situation was surprising and intolerable. Never had son or brother been more lavish in waving the magician's wand for the pleasure of his family, but never had any other member forgotten the obedience they owed to his paramount genius. Men who fought him he could crush, and did crush ruthlessly and with no afterthought, but his own sister, crossing his will, became a problem of more difficult solution.

"It is a trifle whether you breakfast in bed or not," he said sullenly, halting in his walk and standing before her. "It is vital that you remember that you are a girl and that I am the head of this family, whose right and duty it is to direct you. It was I that brought this family out of obscurity and drudgery. But for me you would now be mending some lumber jack's socks and washing his dishes and living in the gray monotony of unstained days. There has been only one productive member in this household and that is myself. There has been just one who could, with no outside aid, meet the world and conquer it, and the family which I have brought up with me from an abandoned farm to the high places of success must regard my wishes."

"You have summarized with the modesty of a tyrant and a czar," she replied as her eyes suddenly broke into an unexpected fire and her upstilted chin set itself defiantly, "the many favors that your hand of self made royalty has conferred upon your supplicant family." Her musical voice took on a deeper thrill. "You have reminded me of my father and mother my brother and myself, we are all but parasites that feed upon your so great powers of achievement. Eh bien, you have made a mistake. My mother is a saint—"

"If any one dared to contradict that she halted him with an imperious wave of her hand.

"If my czar-like brother will permit his sister to address his throne," she said with quiet sarcasm, "I shall esteem it a gracious favor. Let us be frank with each other. My mother is a saint and my father a good man. My brother Paul is a genius in muscle and a weakling—but as you say, each of them is without power. Each of them is a parasite and you are the oak upon which they grow and bloom. But as for me—" She stopped and laughed, and suddenly Hamilton Burton realized that his sister Mary, was not the child that he had always regarded her; not the slip of a girl that had been sent away in the infancy of his fortune to be educated abroad, but a woman of twenty-five, and an unusual woman.

"As for me," she continued slowly, "I think you have made a mistake. Whence, mon cher, came this fire in your soul which told you back there in the barren hills that you were not like little men? May it not be that this genius came to you from some remote ancestor? May it not be that also in my veins crept some of that fire? Ahem! Whether that be true or no, this I do of a certainty believe. The spirit of fight that is in you is likewise in me. You will not find in me the jeune fille who shall who shall obey without knowing why. My feet are small, for which I thank le bon Dieu—but I can stand quite staunchly upon them. You boast of the princely gifts that you have bestowed upon me. For those I am not unthankful but I shall not regard them as the price of blind obedience. If they have been given in that spirit, you have done for me nothing more than other men have done for their mistresses."

She ended and stood very calm in her anger while her brother who had never before been successfully defied gazed into her face with an expression of amazement. Then slowly there came over his own a glow of keen admiration.

He came over and bowed with almost courtly ceremony, then he laughed.

"Mary," he exclaimed, "we shall fight, you and I, but we shall reign together. By God, you are my sister! Not just by coincidence of birth, but by the deeper kinship of our two souls. Great heavens, girl, since I came here to fight and to win, I've been lonely. It is not egotism but truth that makes me say this. I have been a conqueror—and all conquerors are lonely. You are mistress here. Do as you wish." He went back to the safe, but he looked up and laughed in a naive and winning fashion that was quite irresistible.

"By the way," he suggested, "are you going to do me the honor to breakfast with me hereafter?"

The girl laughed, too, and her eyes were as serenely gracious as a queen's may afford to be when of her own will she makes a royal concession.

"Yes, I shall breakfast with you, mon cher brother," she replied. Then she added with perfect mimicry of his own overbearing voice, "It's a trifle whether I breakfast in bed or not. It is vital that you remember who is mistress of this house. C'est moi."

A moment later the man whose frown carried punishment for his adversaries and whose smile was so frank and winning for his friends, stood before his sister, watching her eyes as eagerly as a school boy while he opened the satin case and held out to her the string of pearls.

"Mary," he said simply, "I'm not a man that carries fight with women. Paul looks after that gentle art for this family. You are the only girl I care about. When I give presents to a woman, it will be to you. There is no other woman in New York who could wear that rope of pearls and not look as if the pearls were wearing her. On your throat they are what jewels should always be—a subordinate decoration, partly eclipsed stars. I thought you might like them."

She took the gift and raised it to the light, while her eyes kindled and her lips parted in delight, and as she looked at the pearls, her brother looked at her.

"They are beautiful, aren't they?" she exclaimed, and as she gazed at their well matched perfection a glow kindled in her cheeks.

"With such gifts," she murmured softly, "you could buy the souls of many women, mon cher. If you insist on being a master, at least you are a generous one."

Possibly at that moment, back of her delight, there rose a little ghost-like doubt. He had said, "We shall fight—but we shall reign together." She wondered vaguely how complete would be her participation in that reign. So far as they had fought, each had won a victory and he had paid a handsome indemnity—in fact

WHY SCREEN WHEELS REVERSE

Portland Oregonian: An expert has figured out why the wheels of a moving vehicle shown on the motion picture screen sometimes appear to stand still, sometimes to waver between forward and backward and more often to travel backwards. The motion-picture as everyone knows, is simply a succession of photographs—taken at the rate of about twenty to the second, and each representing an instantaneous snapshot. If the spoke of the wheel in the period it takes to make a picture moves to a position almost but not quite where the succeeding spoke stood in picture number one, the eye associates it with its former successor because it is nearest to it, and which seems therefore to have moved slightly backward. If the number one spoke in the interval be-

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, DEC. 1, 1916

WHY?

The Montreal Star says "Sir Robert Borden is not a man to act impetuously." Why "impetuously?"

THE ONLY ONE.

The Toronto Telegram, in its vigorous language, which was not all used up in driving Sir Sam out of office, denounces Canadian journals for advocating peace. We don't know of any Canadian journals of note or influence advocating peace at the present time, except, perhaps, the organ of some members of the Borden Cabinet, "Le Devoir."

THANKSGIVING.

Our good neighbours in the United States yesterday celebrated their national thanksgiving. In accordance with their largely prevalent idea, they had much to excite their gratitude. While other nations are agonising in tears and blood, and suffering hardships and privation, the United States is blessed—if one can take that view—with peace. The war, which strikes almost every other country so hard, has been a money maker and medium of phenomenal material prosperity. The country is blessed with abundance of money to buy food at even high prices. From the bread and butter point of view our neighbours had abundant impulse to thanksgiving yesterday.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Sir George Foster has written to the President of the Equal Suffrage Society, Ottawa, that he is in favour of giving women the right to vote—"the part women have played in this war and the sacrifices they have made"—have strengthened his opinion in favour of equal suffrage." We don't suppose that Sir George reads The Examiner, but what he says as to women having earned the right to vote by the part they played in the war, was said by The Examiner some time ago, and more than once. The reasonableness of it is so obvious that it could not escape the observation of any man with eyes not obscured by prejudice. Women's heroism, her capacity for prompt action, are not inferior to those of men. We prate proudly of the coolness and courage of our soldiers under fire, and in strenuous emergency; but no soldier on any front has shown more ready courage, more steadiness under stress of circumstances than the female nurse of Grace Hospital, Toronto, who, with a fire raging under their feet, with methodical coolness and trained skill, removed the patients from the burning building, safely, and without panic or hysterics. One nurse that carried five babies at once to a rescuing fireman, must have had her wits about her, as well as her arms full. A mere man, under similar circumstances, with only one baby to rescue, would have bungled the job. Women, with equal courage, equal aptitude in emergency, equal, if not greater, thought for others, and equal intellectual capacity, and equal moral sense, have other claims than their war-time achievements added to equal suffrage rights. It is due to them as an abstract right. The liberty and rights that go with British parliamentary institutions cannot be consistently confined to any class of adult, rational, sound-minded subjects, or consistently withheld.

FORESTRY AND FORESIGHT.

Mr. Reeve Lean, of Burleigh, Anstruther and Chandos, thinks of something besides his specific representation duties. He takes an interest in the general welfare and potentialities of his constituency. He says there are in these townships comparatively large areas containing valuable timber, and considerable areas self forested to pine. The sad thing about these is the absence of government and popular interest. These forest growths are at the mercy of forest fires, no adequate measures being provided for their protection. This condition is not confined to this district, for the whole forest wealth of Ontario has not been provided with the protection, though, through the urging of the Forestry Association, the government has been prodded into organizing a department, with E. J. Zavitz, of the forestry section of the Lands Department, as head, to deal solely with forest fire prevention; and none too soon.

Previous indifference arose from lack of real interest, or lack of recognition of the immense importance of our forest resources. An annual timber crop of forty million dollars, yielding a provincial revenue of one and a half to two millions, is something worth conserving and perpetuating. Rational methods of cutting, prevention of waste by fire of growing timber, and the conditions favourable to reproduction, practised from the beginning, would have kept to our forest wealth pretty nearly to its original potentialities of wealth—if not in extent or area, at least in value. Besides, secondary considerations of water flow, with forest floors acting as reservoirs would have been practically recognized. With publicly-owned electric energy, a prominent factor in our provincial activities, the conservation of water power is of prime importance.

We have not, in the past, dealt with our forest wealth with the foresight that true statesmanship exercises. We have slashed and burned and wasted with great enerprise and energy; but we have paid no practical attention to conservation and reproduction. If, from the beginning we had planted a pine tree for every one cut, our forests would have been perpetual.

It is not too late to make a beginning of better things. In the life of a nation or a province, a half century or a century is little. We have seen in Canada sturdy pine, and other forest trees, spring up to merchantable size upon lands where the original forest had been removed. There is, however, no such thing as an original forest since Adam. Forests, if let alone reproduce themselves—if mans destructive presence is averted.

Foresight, looking to the future, regarding forestry as having rights, are elements in true national life. We who have wasted the forest heritage of the people owe it to posterity to provide some of the advantages we have selfishly destroyed. A forest planted to-day would not count much in the life of the present or two or three generations. But the world goes one when we are gone, and in from fifty to a hundred years, such a forest, which can be grown on land unfit for tillage, would be a source of wealth and water conservation. We can't realize that it is almost a hundred years—98 years—since the site of Peterborough was surveyed. In that time a forest could have grown from the seed, to have a value per acre, a source of revenue, greater than any acre of cultivated land in the country.

In the northern part of this county there are great areas of land from which the timber has been cut. The land, much of it, is fit for little else than tree growth. If these lands were acquired by the county council—which could be cheaply done—and planted to forest or the present growth fostered and protected, in a generation or two these lands so treated would yield revenue enough to pay all the expenses of county government; and, intelligently dealt with, this revenue would be perpetual. A pine tree worth ten dollars today, would be worth fifty dollars in fifty or seventy-five years from now. There is nothing chimerical or impossible about realizing such conditions, and perhaps, as little probability of its being done so long as governments, municipal and national, live only for today, we shall continue to live for the present, and, as we have done with our forest and other resources, live up to the spirit of the reckless philosophy—"eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow we die."

POWER OF SUNLIGHT

Sun Creates Bone and Lessens Shell Fragments

A Swiss doctor in attendance on wounded soldiers writes as follows: What doctor a few years back would have imagined that the sun could reform lost bones? Yet this miracle is daily being performed in the case of British soldiers interned here. The process of bone formation by the sun is extremely slow, but the fact remains that bones shattered by shell or surgically removed are being replaced by new bone substances.

Splinters and minute particles of shell whose presence in the body had defied detection by the Rontgen rays are not only detected but actually loosened and eventually removed by the sun, while defective blood circulation, frequently occasioned by bullet wounds, is remedied. An Irish soldier arrived at Chateau d'Oex with a fracture in one of the principal bones of the left arm which had defied treatment by several eminent German surgeons. Examination at Chateau d'Oex showed that portions of the bone were splinters, and to-day a new bone has been formed, and save for a little stiffness the arm is almost normal.

A Scotsman arrived with his right side paralyzed—a condition due to nervous shock. Daily exposed to the sun during the month following arrival entirely removed the paralysis. An officer who lost a chinchoma "somewhere in France" is watching the interesting process of the formation of a new bone. The doctors believe that the lost will be entirely restored [illegible]

IS THE FOOD BOYCOTT THE HOPE OF BORDEN GOVERNMENT?

Continued inaction at Ottawa in the face of a steadily rising tide of public indignation at a food situation scarcely less menacing in a country three thousand miles nearer the granary than in the war-ridden lands of western Europe seems to indicate that the Prime Minister and his advisers are waiting for the people to right the evil. And the people's only remedy, outside the halls of legislation, is the boycott, odious in principle, and in fact a surrender to the monopolist, for it tacitly admits that the only way to get cheap food is to do without.

Why should a people have to resort to deprivation to obtain the necessaries of life at a reasonable figure? Why should the electorate of Canada subject itself to the humiliation of left-handed submission to the manipulator when that electorate placed in the hands of the Government at Ottawa all the instruments necessary to reduce the manipulator to submission? The Minister of Labour has blanket powers. Why should he hesitate to exercise them? A boycott, of course, would be an exceedingly easy way out for the Federal Government. With the people doing without eggs at seventy cents a dozen, eight-cent bread, and six-cent milk, Premier Borden and Mr. Crothers could take a vacation and relieve their minds completely of the worry of administration.

Great Britain, France, Italy, and even the neutral and fabulously rich United States, are choking the manipulators, as well as striking effective blows at waste and extravagance on the part of the consumer. Yet, here in Canada, with a Government splendidly armed against the forestalling patriots, there is inaction through fear, or supineness through indifference. The people are impatiently waiting upon [illegible] Borden for the remedy. Has he let slip the mantle of responsibility placed upon him by the electors? Must the people fight after they have sent their weapons to Ottawa?—The Globe.

MOTOR TRUCKS SAVED VERDUN FOR FRANCE

How Twentieth Corps Arrived in Nick of Time—A Strange Journey From Paris

A correspondent writes: From Paris to Chalons-sur-Marne the journey was comparatively uneventful. We encountered columns of convoys going in various directions, three military motors, and in the towns and villages, perhaps a dozen civilians all told and a few hundred soldiers. Dusk and the mystery of night in the zone behind the front overtook us at Chalons. Once we had to shut off our headlights, and feel our way slowly through the darkness for a space, because somewhere on our left—north of us—German eyes were peering continually at that road through telescopes. And presently a long line of moving light—an illuminated avenue, which resolved itself into an endless procession of motor trucks loaded to the gunwales with troops.

How Soldiers Travel

They were moving along at fair speed—eighteen or twenty miles an hour, I should say—and there were fully 100 of them in that first lot, which was merely an inkling of what was to come. Each truck carries from eighteen to twenty-four men, do there could not have been more than one regiment, although it seemed as if there were an entire army corps at least.

Saved the Day

My staff officer guide told me that a special section of trucks transports fresh beef to the immediate rear of the firing line every day, another section carries the daily quota of shells of all sizes, still another stands ready to shift an entire army corps from one point to another, literally at a moment's notice.

"It was the trucks which brought Gen. Balfourier and his famous Twentieth Army Corps to the Douaumont front in time to save the position," I was informed. "When the general arrived the commander of the corps which he was to relieve said to him: 'You are doubly welcome, general, because you did not arrive six hours later.' If it were not for the trucks Verdun might have fallen, for without them the Twentieth Corps could never have arrived in time."

TOMMIES OF ROUMANIA

Some Facts Concerning the Handsome Race of Roumanians

An English writer says: One knows of course, however little else one may know about Roumania; that these people are a branch of the Latin family of nations. Their name tells one that. They are "Romans." Their language is a dialect of Latin, much complicated certainly by Slav and Romany words, but not very difficult to read when once the main difference between it and Italian have been mastered. They take their ideals of civilisation from the West, not from the East. They look alert, "gleg i' the uptak," to use a Lowland Scot's phrase. Their eyes are large and expressive. Their features are finely chiselled, almost delicate. Nearly all are good looking men, many are handsome. They remind me of Frenchmen, of Italians. I feel that they have a good pedigree behind them. Their houses—I mean the houses of the peasants—show that they have traditions of order and house pride. Their Sunday clothes tell the same tale. They are clean looking people, with an air of personal dignity, not in any degree pumptious or offensive, which reminds one of their famous ancestry. They live, like the Italian peasants, chiefly on maize flour, made into a cake. Sometimes they eat this hot and soft, sometimes cold and cake-like. Fish is added to it fairly often, meat fairly seldom.

BOLD CHINESE AIRMAN

Has Been in Action Several Times, Bringing Down Two Machines

The non-fighting character generally ascribed to the Chinese is a libel in the case of Sergeant Tse, thirty years old, son of a rich Shanghai merchant who was with the French army in the Somme battle. Tse came to France just before the war began to learn flying when the struggle began he offered his services and was sent first to the Argonne. He has a splendid record. Once when returning from a scouting expedition, he was attacked by six airmen and the canvas of his wings was riddled. He managed to get back safely. Since then he has been in several actions and has brought down two German machines.

If you are not caught, you are no thief.

Talk of Atlas carrying the world on his shoulders, our own country is doing that to-day.—[illegible]

SENTENCED TO DIE FOR KILLING JUDGE

Huntsville, Alt., December 1.—David D. Overton, a Huntsville attorney and formerly clerk of the Madison County Court, was convicted here of the murder of Probate Judge W. T. Lawler, a political opponent, and was sentenced to be hanged. The court set Jan. 12th for the hanging but suspended its order on a motion by the prisoner's attorneys for a new trial.

Overton's conviction furnished the climax to one of the most unusual murder cases in Alabama's istory. The body of Judge Lawler was found on June 17th, weighted, down in the Tennessee River. Within a few days Overton disappeared, and two of his political associates, Shelby Pleasants, a lawyer, and Robert Phillips, County Sheriff, committed suicide, and left notes saying that they could not bear the suspicion aroused by Judge Lawler's death.

Overton was arrested several weeks later in Tennessee and at his trial revealed for the first time that he had killed Lawler. He pleaded self defence and declared that Lawler had taken him to a lonely road along the Tennessee River late at night, and had attacked him after trying to effect an agreement for co-operation to prevent the county Grand Jury "from destroying both of us." The Grand Jury was investigating alleged frauds at the June election, in which Lawler defeated Overton for Judge.

The prisoner said that he had nothing to do with the disposition of Lawler's bod, but that Sheriff Phillips had told him it had been put out of the way. Testimony at the trial in no way connected Pleasants with the tragedy.

Overton received his sentence calmly and when asked whether he had anything to say, replied: "Nothing, except that I am not guilty."

THE RIVER THAMES

Perhaps no river on earth save the Tiber has so much of history hallowing its murky waters as this hard-working English river that flows past London town. The Thames has seen most of England's story in the telling, acted out a stone's throw from its banks.

The most attractive sketch of the river is that lying above the city proper, between Maidenhead and Richmond. Above that stretch the Thames is an inland stream, a river of the countryside, beautiful enough between green fields and hedges, but with nothing to single it out from other rivers, nothing to show that this is the mighty Thames. Below Richmond park it plunges into the grim city like a clean-living countryman; it has picked up a variety of things before it emerges from metropolitan existence. Below London it becomes the great tidal estuary, overburdened with ten thousand ships.

In the reach between these limits, however, it is a soul-satisfying stream. Its banks are green and smoothly cropped, it flows with an even, silent motion that suggests a river asleep. On either side are the villas of London's wealthy, with their neatly planned gardens, their trimly mown lawns. Pleasure boats rock at anchor, where the river leaps against its restraining barriers of fragrant tarred piles, and graceful willows dip their fronds in the water. The scene is one of nature tamed and curried—nature with all trace of forest wilderness gone, but it is singularly satisfied for all that.

On a Sunday plebeian London turns out in force to make holiday. The patient old river is laden with all sorts of boats, punts and skiffs and launches. Young women lie back beneath their parasols, young men row industriously, with an amount of effort that makes the American visitor want to introduce canoes. From the towpath on the bank a concourse even more plebeian watches the concourse on the river. The boats row to and fro, crowd the locks and rise gently on the incoming water, here and there some son of Izaak Walton wets a hook. With the descending twilight the river clears again, and in the silence you can hear him muttering and grumbling to himself, like a ruffled old gentleman, as he follows his eternal path to the sea.

WON'T ATTEND FUNERAL.

Hungary Independents to Show Hatred of Late Emperor.

LONDON, Dec. 1st.—A Berne despatch to the Wireless Press says that negotiations undertaken by the Austrian Premier, Dr. Ernest Von Koerber, with Austrian political leaders in an attempt to obtain assurances that there will be opposition to the Government when Emperor Charles opens Parliament, and that the Czechs will not protest against the penalties which have been imposed on Czech deputies, have been unsuccessful.

The despatch also says that the deputies of the Hungarian Independent party have decided to absent themselves from the funeral of Emperor Francis Joseph in token of disapproval of the late Emperor's aggressive war policy.

NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Stamford, Conn., Nurse Tells How She Found Health.

Stamford, Conn.—"I am a nurse and suffered from a nervous breakdown. I had no appetite and could not sleep at night, and nothing seemed to help me. By chance I heard of Vinol, and after taking the first bottle I noticed an improvement, and four bottles made me well and strong, it gave me a hearty appetite, so I can sleep soundly night or day. I consider Vinol a wonderful tonic." Edith R. Forbes, Stamford, Conn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in overcoming such conditions is because it is a constitutional remedy and goes to the seat of the trouble. It is the greatest strength creator we know—due to the beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates which it contains, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine.

We have seen so many wonderful recoveries like this right here in Peterborough caused by Vinol, that we feel perfectly safe in offering to return money in every such case where Vinol fails to benefit.

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The illustration shows a fascinating little dress, with the front and back portions in one piece. It is made to slip over the head, covering a separate guimpe that buttons at front and is fitted with an elastic at the waistline. The elbow sleeve is prettily finished with a ruffle or frill of material and the guimpe collar is carried over the shoulders of the dress to allow the knotted tie attractively.

The very deep armhole of the dress gives every chance for freedom in exercise. The edges are simply bound for a finish. The lower edge of the dress may be hemmed, or, better still, it may be trimmed with a bias fold of the material. A single large button at either side fastens the dress. An embroidered flower will add much to the little frock and delight the child who wears it.

Linen, serge, gabardine or other fabric for the dress, with several guimpes that may be rubbed, will keep a child well dressed, and the design is just as simple to develop as a little pinafore.

The pattern, No. 7,953, is cut in sizes 4, 6 and 8 years. To make in the medium size will require 1¾ yards of 36 inch material for the dress and 1½ yards for the guimpe.

You may obtain the pattern by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

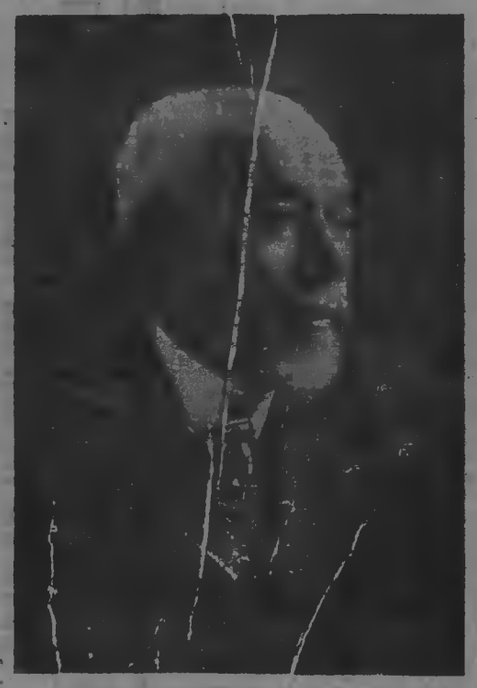
RAILWAY MAGNATE PASSES

Death of Mr. David McNicoll.



ONE of the most remarkable of the many famous men connected with the Canadian Pacific Railway passed away on Sunday with the death of Mr. David McNicoll at Guelph, Ont. From the day of his birth at Aphroath, Scotland, in 1853, up to the day of his death, the life of the late first vice-president of the C. P. R. is a fascinating study.

Many men have abilities high on those that were possessed by David McNicoll, but few men can apply themselves to the exertions that are needed for the development of abilities as he applied himself. At an early age he saw his life work before him as plainly as one might see a great ladder standing against a wall.

Little is known of David McNicoll the child and schoolboy, but in 1866—the year the Fenians invaded Canada from the United States—we are told that the lad, then aged 14 years, took up the post, of clerk with the North British Railway Company in Scotland and in 1873 he got a position as clerk with the North Midland Railway Company.

In 1874 the young railway clerk came to Canada, and at twenty-two years old young McNicoll was lucky enough to get a humble position on the Northern Railway, which ran from Toronto to Collingwood, in Ontario. At the latter mentioned little town he was billing clerk for a year, and then went to Toronto where he was installed as chief clerk in the office of the general manager of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway. The year 1883 brought him another change, for then he became general freight and passenger agent. About this period the C. P. R. was laying steel across the Dominion of Canada and people were beginning to awaken to the wonderful possibilities of the Canadian Pacific. McNicoll was one of those who saw a great future for this railroad, and in 1883 he obtained an appointment in the service of the company as general freight and passenger agent for the Eastern and Ontario Division. Promotion came rapidly for in 1889 he was made General Passenger Agent for all the lines, both railroad and steamship. There was a still further recognition of his worth in 1896 when he took up the duties of Passenger Traffic Manager for the entire system. The height of his advancement was not attained even in 1899 when he was given the important role of Assistant General Manager, for the following year he found himself Second Vice-President and General Manager. The first vice-presidentship was taken up by him in 1903, and in 1906 he was made a director. Owing to ill health in 1914 this distinguished railroad career was brought to a close, and Mr. David McNicoll retired, having left behind him a record that it would be difficult to beat.

Such is the story of the dates of the advancements of the man who is now no more. Looking back on his career we can only see the marks of the bounds he made—the energies that prompted his rapid movements are hidden from us; only those who labored with him and observed his labors can tell of his ambition, and the struggles—the long days of tireless thought, of guiding zealously and of taking guide cheerfully—which were the forces that drove the engine of his ambition. The engine of the ambition of David McNicoll always moved without making an audible puff.

This man, who took a big part in the making of a gigantic enterprise, was the possessor of a strong individuality and a manner some of which was taken from the manner of others. In all that claimed his attention he was most sympathetic; he toiled in quietude, and after he had finished arduous work he did not tell his friends that he had been working hard. He endeavored to make his own particular business perfect, and he wanted all who worked in connection with him to have aims similar to his own. To those above him he imparted business ideas and expounded policies that might lead towards new expansions. If he were exacting at times, he was always just. It is true that there were occasions on which his demeanor was brusque, but brusqueness is often the cover for a soft heart; with him it was frequently the beginning of kindness.

The office of Mr. McNicoll was one of the most pleasant of offices in Montreal, and there the first vice-president used to sit in a swivel chair which allowed him to change his pose as he changed the thoughts which he presented to those who came to speak with him. There was none of the swell about him; he was a plain man, usually wore dark clothes, and his attitude was always unostentatious. He was able to pack a large bundle of wisdom into a small sheaf of words, and he was as practical in his conversation as in his work. There were few questions with regard to the general details of the C. P. R. which he could not answer extempore.

David McNicoll did not sit brooding over the difficulties that came in his path; he surmounted them; his energy made his memorial, stamped his eulogy on the chart of time.

PRESCIENCE.

One thinks of many things at times like this,
While waiting in the trenches to attack—
Of half-forgotten griefs, an hour of bliss,
A waltz one had, a hunt behind the pack!

They say a dying man lives over all
His life in just the passing moment's space;
It may be well that one about to fall
May live old joys—revisit some loved place.

If that be so, then, when our cresting charge
Sweeps o'er you trench line, as it shall and soon,
I'll pause a moment by a river's marge
And watch the waters 'neath the peaceful moon.

Then she shall steal beside me and her hand
Be clasped in mine an instant ere we part
So—at the last—I'll know and understand
All that was hidden in her wilding heart.

The Captain's passing down the line! I feel
The battle thrill that tingles through the air!
He cautions us to silence and cold steel—
We're moving out to storm the German lair!

We're almost on them and they're all a-silent still!
Perhaps they're sleeping!—Heavens what a flare!
They've thrown the whole of hades down the hill—
They're swept the smoking, shaking hillside bare!

'Tis strange: I'm cold—numb to my finger tips!
The fighting must have ceased—I hear no roar;
I'm conscious but of kisses on my lips,
And faint, far waters lapping on the shore!

—O. C. A. Child.

PIMPLES and BOILS
ALL OVER FACE AND BODY

When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples and boils will break out all over the body, and although they are not dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself.

Miss Sylvia Swanson, Theodore, Sask., writes: "I am letting you know what great value your B.B.B. has been to me. A year ago I started to grow pale and weak, the cause being bad blood. I got so many pimples and boils all over my face and body that I would not let strangers see me, and I used to avoid company. I tried many remedies but all seemed a failure. I read about how good your B.B.B. had been to thousands of people so I got a bottle and after I had finished the second one my pimples and boils had all disappeared. People thought it a miracle how well I looked.

"Your grand old remedy sure has been as good as gold and better, to me".

Burdock Blood Bitters has been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

Did Not Spell Fish. — In a north country harbour a Scottish drifter was having her name repainted. Near to her was a British war vessel, from the deck of which a knot of interested tars watched lazily whilst the letters "Psyche" were completed. Just then one afflicted with a particularly sensitive "receiving station" received a "brain wave." "Ho, there, below!" he drawled, and the words squirmed along the seam of his aged clay. "Can't you spell? Was yer never at school? That's not the way we spells 'fish' in the navy."

Over-feeding of breeding sows will almost invariably produce small litters of weak, unthrifty pigs and a high mortality, but under-feeding will produce small and unthrifty

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

The Breeders' Gazette reports the Chicago market as flooded with cattle, intended for a hundred-day feeding period, that are being turned off after thirty days.

Importation of sugar beet seed into the United States in the nine months ended with September amounted to 18,500,000 pounds and broke all previous records.

The La Cima Jersey herd of F. J. Bannister, Kansas City, Mo., was dispersed at an average of 337 on fifty-eight head. Agatha's Maiden Fern fetched $1,325.

The yield of wheat in England this year was 2.8 bushels blow the ten-year average, but the hay crop was four long hundredweights above the average of the decade.

At the October sale of Clydes in Lanark, Scotland, one filly brought $1,500, and a young stallion $1,700. The general run of the good ones sold from these figures down to $600.

A farm house bigger than is necessary is a millstone around the neck of the hard-worked housewife, and a needless expense to the purse of the farmer.—Farmers' Advocate.

Nothing is more important in a poultry yard than a supply of pure water. When birds are in confinement all water vessels should be scoured with a wisp of straw and rinsed daily.

During the present year 500 Herefords have been exported from England, 276 going to South America, 108 to South Africa, forty-nine to the United States, and the balance to other countries.

Lambs will begin to nibble at feed when about two weeks old.

The underlying reason for the high price of hides is the enormous demand for leather.

The stock must be kept thrifty, else they are not extracting the most value from the feeds consumed.

Conveniences for handling feeds and live stock in a building will save much labour. The Animal Husbandry Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture may be able to assist you with building plans free.

The idle work horse may be maintained in weight and condition during the winter months on a ration composed of 1 pound hay, 1 pound straw and 1 pound carrots, mangels or turnips per hundred pounds live weight.

The winter months are the natural period of the year for making sure of the next season's seed supply. Seed of the various forage crops that has been grown at home should be thoroughly recleaned and tested for germination.

The most profitable kind of cows in the cow-testing association in Iowa last year returned its owner a profit of $71.23 per cow; the poorest herd lost its owner 63 cents per cow. No allowance was made for labour in either case.

Pregnant ewes during November and December require approximately: Clover or Alfalfa hay or unthreshed pea straw, 2 to 3 pounds; roots, or ensilage and roots, 2 pounds per head daily. Grain should be fed only to the thin ewes.

Fungi which cause serious losses to the fruit grower live through the winter on fallen leaves, fruit, dead branches and pruning trash. Do not give them a chance to attack your fruit again in spring. Destroy all rubbish by fire.

Horses becoming thin from underfeeding during the winter are losing money. More feed is required to put these horses in shape for the hard work of summer than would be a good maintenance ration during the whole idle season.

Do the work the best you can on the farm, and if you find your neighbours getting better results than you are, investigate how they are doing their work and profit from their experience.

Only the very best breeding rams of good size and quality, showing particularly a heavy, good quality fleece and a strong back and leg, will produce the best feeding lambs and the most wool.

Strength is the greatest essential in a dehorning knife. It must be capable of cutting the horn without crushing or splintering, and care should be taken to disinfect the knife before each operation.

Ill-ventilated, dark, uncomfortable foul stables are the cause of loss annually of one-third of the winter feed given to live stock, and are also one cause of the thin, unthrifty animals so often found therein.

The use of poor boars lacking in size, quality and the desirable type, produces annually a high percentage of pigs which are poor feeders and finally take an inferior finish and in every way are less profitable.

To find the number of tons of hay in a mow, multiply length by depth by breadth in feet and divide by 450. In case of straw, divide by from 600 to 1,000, according to the length of time in mow. The longer the time in mow the smaller the divisor to be used.

Early attention should be given to the seed grain which is to be sown next spring. If no special fields for seed purposes were grown last summer, next season's requirements may be met by very careful recleaning of the main crop harvested last autumn.

The pullets should be fed heavily for egg production, and the hens—the breeders—fed on a light ration. Feed the pullets mixed grain morning and evening. This should be buried in a deep litter to make them work for it. Keep a hopper filled with dry mash before them.

Change seed only when you are sure of getting something superior to the old stock, and use only that seed which has proved its adaptability to your locality.

A little more thought and preparation when nights are long means less work time and more effective work when days are bright and warm and every minutes counts.

Fall plough where practicable all land intended for grain and roots next year, but sod land, intended for corn, other than heavy clay, may be ploughed advantageously in the spring.

The cost of rearing and maintaining, in labour and interest on buildings and equipment, is the same for the profit-making cow and the one costing from $30 to $60 per year.

Believes She Was Saved From Stroke of Paralysis

All One Side Was Cold and Powerless, when She Began Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

A dead nerve cell can never be replaced. In this way it is different to other cells of the human body. But feeble, wasted nerve cells may be restored, and herein lies hope.

In this fact is also a warning to take note of such symptoms as sleeplessness and loss of energy and ambition, and restore the vitality to the nervous system before some form of helplessness results.

Nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis are the natural results of neglecting to keep the nerves in healthful condition. The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when you suspect there is something wrong will soon restore vitality to the nervous system, and thereby prevent serious developments.

Mrs. Merritt Nichols, R. R. No. 8, Dundalk, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing to tell you the great benefit I have derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was so nervous I could not sleep, and found it hard to get my work done at all, but, having no help at the time, had to do the best I could. Finally my left arm became powerless and cold, and this continued to get worse until my whole side was affected, head and all. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the first box helped me so much that I used several, and believe that this treatment saved me from having a paralytic stroke. It has built me up wonderfully, and I can recommend it most heartily, believing that if more Nerve Food were used there would be much less sickness."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures in nature's way by nourishing the feeble, wasted nerves back to health and vigour. Fifty cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

PAST AND PRESENT

Modern Naval Recruiting Methods Followed in Canada

The method used to obtain men in Canada for the Royal Navy is very different to that which prevailed in the days of Nelson when the "Press gang" was used; the Navy was not as it is now a popular service even in Nelson's day, and in order to get a full crew for a new ship it was not an uncommon thing for the captain to spend a few of his hearties ashore with an officer to press men into the service. In this way men were forcibly taken from their homes at a moment's notice and placed on board one of the King's ships to work as a sailor until they could buy themselves out by paying a substitute. As an inducement, and to prevent desertion, a "bounty" was offered to all pressed men, who were allowed to "volunteer" after a fortnight's pressed service, which bounty was paid to them on "volunteering," in some cases it would amount to as much as $300 or $400.

While the British Navy is essentially a voluntary service, the bounty mentioned above has its counterpart now in that a certain proportion of the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve man's pay will be kept back until the termination of his service, as while actually serving the proportion of their pay given to them will put them on an equal footing with their English messmates, while the proportion saved for them will put them on the same standing with their brothers in the Army Expeditionary Force. For quickly getting overseas with a nest egg in the bank on return after discharge, the R.C.N.V.R. offered an unrivalled opportunity.

TURK AND HUNS AKIN

Awkward Attempt in Berlin to Show Love for Turkey

Hugh Byas, a correspondent, writes from Berlin: Under the auspices of the German government there has been founded in this city an "Association for the Promotion of Artistic and Literary Relations Between Germany and her Allies." The first work of the association was to arrange Turkish soirees at the Lessing Museum. It is an old saying that everything in Germany begins with a lecture and this soiree was no exception from the rule. A lecture was given Dr. Kaufmann, Professor of History and Privy Councillor, on Turkish art and literature. The professor proved by numerous quotations that there are a great many points of resemblance between German and Turkish literature, and that the souls of the two people are wonderfully alike, as if Providence had intended them to become close friends and allies.

The next entertainer was a certain Fraulein Ida Druck, who recited a number of Turkish poems. These the audience however did not appear to appreciate or understand, although the Berlin press declared that they were masterpieces of Oriental poetry, especially one which bore the title "On the road to victory." Fraulein Druck was followed by two Turks Mehmed Emin and Imhoff Pasha, of whom the former recited a poem by himself entitled "Steel," which even the Berlin critics thus passed over in silence, probably because the critics understood no more of it than I did.

The chief event of the soiree, however, was the recital by Imhoff Pasha of an ode in honor of Enver Pasha "the glorious conqueror of the Russians, the Italians and the English," whom the poet compared to Alexander the Great, Caesar and Napoleon. During the remainder of the evening German and Turks exchanged "Delikatessen" and "Turkish Delight" but I noticed that each nationality seemed to prefer its own products.

STOP GERMAN PIRACY

The Dean of Worcester, in speaking of after war effects, said: Two movements are observable in Germany at the present moment which are of the utmost concern to us—on the one hand we find a demand for increased submarine frightfulness, on the other hand the signs of preparation for a war for mercantile marine supremacy once peace is declared.

Now the fact to note about the first campaign is that the persons who are calling for more German submarine activity are largely those who are interested in shipping. It is impossible, then, to refrain from the conclusion that the two movements have one aim in view—the wresting of our ocean-going supremacy by destroying our ships and at the same time building against us.

There is a simple remedy in the Allies' hands, I contend, to defeat this ambitious German plan, and that is for the Allies in agreement solemnly to announce that one of the conditions of peace will be that for every Allied ship submarined after a certain date one German ship shall be taken.

The German shipping interests, which are in the hands of clever people, will not make the mistake of believing that the Allies now have not the power to carry out any course they affirm, and the fear that they would have to replace every Allied ship sunk by submarines would have a very salutary effect on their aggressive instincts.

There is a danger in the enemy's ceaseless submarine activity which we have recognized by expediting the building of new ships for ocean-going traffic. We have to ask ourselves: How can we meet this danger other than in replacing lost ships? My answer is, by a pronouncement that the Allies will make no peace with Germany until ships are handed over to make good the loss inflicted by German submarines after a certain date.

JOFFRE NEVER WORRIES

Pen Picture of Calm, Solid, Confident Master of Hosts

The special correspondent of a London newspaper draws the following interesting pen picture of General Joffre, who is believed to be supreme head of all the Allied armies, as he appeared at general headquarters: "It was in a small room 10 ft. by 15 ft., furnished with quiet taste, that Joffre foretold the doom of the Teutonic armies. His kepi, adorned with gold braid, hung on the back of an easy chair, section maps were on the walls and tables, marked at different points with pencilled arrowheads, each of which had been the signal for launching hundreds of thousands of shells at the corresponding point of the actual line. It is with a stubby pencil lying on his desk that the Generalissimo decrees the hammer blows wherewith the French and British armies are wasting German man-power.

"Nothing seems easier than to say General Joffre a call; in reality he is the most difficult man in Europe to approach at this moment. The efficiency of the precautions taken to safeguard him is demonstrated by their unobtrusiveness, yet his safety is as perfect as human ingenuity can make it. Vastly more interesting than his surroundings, however, is the man himself. Gentle and paternal, like an old village priest, he in no way conveys the impression of a superman to whose supreme care the lives of millions of soldiers are entrusted.

"This crushing responsibility he has carried for years without faltering. He is the same Joffre who began to move his millions in August, 1914, and an officer who has been in constant touch with him assures me that neither victory nor reverse seems to affect the steel nerves of this great war chief. His low-pitched voice never rises above conversational level, his slow-moving speech never accelerates under excitement, because he never appears excited. His snowy head, on the well-set burly body, is that of a thinker. His grey eyes reflect none of the horrors of the titanic struggle of which an hourly report has reached him for tragic years. And though he has borne the most tremendous weight of responsibility that ever fell to a single man, without a day's rest, his health remains perfect. The secret is that he does his job without worrying. His ambitions are two—first, to win final victory; then, to retire for life on a houseboat on one of France's beautiful streams."

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I used four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

PETS AT SALONICA ARE VERY ANNOYING

The Land of Little Animals and Certain Insects—Tortoise Prime Favorite

A supernumerary writes: Most of them, of course, are not animals at all in the exact or dictionary sense of the word. Some of them are insects, some of them are reptiles, and I suppose a scientist would find fifty other classifications for them. There is no need to say much about the flies. Those faithful little friends of the army accompany us all over the world, and they are much alike everywhere. Yet it may be noted that the fly of Salonica is more affectionate than the fly of England or even of Egypt. It settles on your face and holds tight, and occasionally it eats pieces of you, in a kind of passion for indissoluble union. But it has little originality, and its methods are monotonous.

It is not like the praying mantis, for instance. One of those devout insects came to dinner with us on my first evening in the land, and went round the table for all the world like a tract distributor. Finally it climbed a beer bottle and stood there with arms upraised and addressed the multitude till the owner of the beer took charge of the situation.

Rather Large Spiders

The beetles are not so objectionable, but, having impetuous natures, they are apt to butt violently into one's face as they roar through the air on their twilight errands—and a collision with a half-ounce bottle travelling at full speed is no joke. It is, however, preferable to the sensation which is produced when a spider measuring an inch and a half across crawls thoughtfully over your face.

But these are small fry. The real pet of the army in Salonica is the tortoise. If you have only known the tortoise as the lazy hermit of an English garden you cannot begin to imagine his alert gaiety here in his home. It takes a little while to get used to the sight of a tortoise galloping round the camp with leathery neck outstretched. It seems almost indecent that such a creature should move at such a pace. Also it is perplexing when what you had taken for a clod of earth begins to walk away from you in a hurry, and there is a tendency to heave lumps of marble after it.

Greedy For Souvenirs

As a matter of fact, the tortoise did not have a very happy time in the early days of the occupation. It was not only that the average human being usually likes to kill things that he does not understand; there was another trouble which was entirely due to the enterprise of those manufacturers who fashion things out of celluloid and label them "real tortoise shell." The army has a lust for souvenirs, and it is always trying to find things to send home. A considerable proportion of it made spirited attempts to carve the shell into combs for its lady's hair while the tortoise was still in possession.

That industry, of course, was speedily discovered and stopped, and today the tortoise has nothing to fear.

No Clergy For Captives

Reuter's Agency is informed that the proposal to send three or four clergymen to minister to British prisoners in Germany was after many months' delay refused by the German Government.

The Bread Problem is not a problem in the home where Shredded Wheat is known. The whole wheat grain is the real staff of life, and you have it in Shredded Wheat Biscuit prepared in a digestible form. It contains more real body-building material than meat or eggs, is more easily digested, and costs much less. The food for the up-and-coming man who does things with hand or brain—for the kiddies that need a well-balanced food for study or play—for the housewife who must save herself from kitchen drudgery. Delicious for breakfast or any meal, with milk or cream.

"TANK" IDEA VERY OLD

Forerunners of the Famous Tanks Used Before Christian Era

The idea of these "land dreadnoughts" and to some extent the application of it, has existed since the dawn of civilization. Bible students will find many texts in the Old Testament which they may acclaim as prophecies, concerning the latest manslaying device. What can be a finer and terser description of the dreadful destructive powers of these modern cars of Juggernaut, which demolish houses and tear down trees, than the familiar verse from the Book of Job: "He esteemeth iron as straw and brass as rotten wood?" Or again, "After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured and brake in pieces and stamped the residue with the feet of it; and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it, and it had ten horns." (Daniel VII:7).

An undoubted prototype of the "tank" was used at the siege of Rhodes several centuries before the Christian era. Prince Demetrius, son of a King of Asia, to reduce the city ravaged to the foot of the walls, huge "Helepolis," a moving citadel of wood plated with iron. This edifice, called the Helopolis, was of prodigious size, had nine stories and might be moved every way. A multitude of engineers, placed on the top of the moving tower, showered down their arrows on the besieged. The strongest tower of Rhodes and a great part of the wall were thrown down."

Veteran a Thief

Having served through the Zulu war and the Egyptian Campaign, for his services in which he was given two medals and a star, and having 19 children and 40 grandchildren, Thomas Palmer, laborer, who pleaded guilty to stealing scrapped metal from employers with whom he had been for twenty years, was bound over.

Sir Richard Burbidge, the commercial genius of Harrod's who celebrated his quarter of a century's association with the firm, likes to tell how he swept floors for a living when a penniless draper's lad many years ago.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to such in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washings the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headache, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin out the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Dec. 3rd, 1916.

Jesus Christ, the first and the last.

Golden Text: Fear not, I am the first and the last and the living one; and I was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore. Rev. 1, 17, 18.

1. Verses 1-3. Why should it be thought impossible that God has in past ages, revealed his will to holy men and that he may do so in this age?

2. If one man gets a true revelation affecting others, and he tells it to them, how may they know that it is a true revelation so that they will be under obligation to God, to observe it?

3. Verse 4. How many are "seven," in the sense in which this numeral is used here? (See Chaps 4:5—5:6.)

4. Verse 4. What is the disposition of the Eternal One towards his church and sinful men?

5. Verses 5, 6. How many relationships does Jesus Christ bear to us, and how are some of them manifested?

6. What does Jesus want to do for a sinner, and what does He want to do for the Christian? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

7. Verses 7, 8. What does the Bible say about a general Judgment Day?

8. Perhaps the Judgment Hall will be in space, the law of gravitation not being operative on spiritualised bodies; a vast throng which no man can number will be there and Jesus Christ will be on the Judgment Throne. What do you consider will be some of the scenes on that great day?

9. Verses 9, 10. What were some of the tribulations which they suffered in those days?

10. Why has there been so much persecution of Christians in past ages?

11. Verses 9, 10. What does it mean to be "in the spirit" as here set forth?

12. If we were always to be "in the spirit," would that unfit, or better fit us, for the work of life? Give your reasons.

13. Where was John when he received this revelation, and what probably brought him there?

14. Verses 11, 12: What is the significance to us and the world, that the revelations of spiritual men in the past ages have been written in books?

15. What are the most important messages which the churches need in these days?

17. Why should all Christians be like "golden candlesticks"?

18. Verses 13-16. Why is it fitting that Jesus be clothed in kingly garments as he walks among the "golden candlesticks"?

19. In what sense do "white wool," "snow," "fire," "a voice like the sound of many waters,' and the other symbols used here, represent Jesus?

20. Verses 17-20. Notwithstanding the royal dignity, the superhuman grandeur and the almighty power of Jesus, why need we not fear him?

REMAINS WITH MONAGHAN TO DECIDE EXTENT OF PROPERTY TAKEN WITH DISPOSAL PLANT

This Was Practically the Result of Conference Last Night —City Seemed Willing to Purchase Enough Ground For Exhibition Park if Township Will Expedite Necessary Preliminaries.

Some progress was made on the Monaghan front last night and might be a concise summary of the latest move to reach a satisfactory decision in the contentious question of the area of property to be included with the sewage disposal site. Apparently the city has passed the state of uncertainty about locating the plant on the Scott-Rutherford property, and furthermore, is prepared to unite with the Agricultural Exhibition directorate in securing sufficient ground for a public and exhibition park. But the plans of this scheme, as presented by City Engineer Parsons, require the closing of Chester and the greater part of McKellar streets, and it is in this stage of the proceedings that Monaghan's hand must be shown.

Reeve McIntosh didn't commit himself when he remarked that the plans looked good on paper, and he also played safe to Mayor Duffus' direct question, asking whether Monaghan Council would facilitate the furtherance of the city's plans. He anticipated objections but would submit the plans to the Council and interested ratepayers.

Those present at last night's conference were Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Stratton, Langford, Edgar, Evans, Duncan, Saunders and McIntyre, Reeve McIntosh, Deputy Reeve Robson and Councillors Rye and Bell of North Monaghan, and Reeve Anderson and Deputy Reeve Eason from neighbouring Otonabee.

What Plans Include.

Mr. Parsons' plans include the property fronting on Park Street, from the river north to King George street and east to a proposed new road between King George and McKellar streets, at a point in front of the Holmes residence, and returning to the river at the boundary between the Holmes grounds and the lots owned by Police Sergeant Kidd and Detective Newhall.

Al. Duncan added that options had been secured on all this property. Most of the owners had said they would sell at cost. McKellar street would be closed through the purchased property.

Expected Objections.

Reeve McIntosh said he expected there would be strong, probably very strong objections, to the closing of McKellar street.

Mayor Duffus said he didn't know how the Provincial Board of Health would regard the plan. They hadn't seen it yet.

Mr. Gillespie, representing the Fair Board, said he liked Reeve McIntosh's reference. "The scheme looked good on paper." He believed the Fair Board would support the plans the City Engineer had prepared.

Reeve McIntosh—"It will cost quite a bit of money, won't it?"

Mayor Duffus—"Any move will cost money; even paying $30,000 for the present grounds. One thing is certain we can't weak it out unless we get together.

Ald. Stratton—"We're all here now."

Ald. Edgar—Could Monaghan promise us to close these streets."

Reeve McIntosh—"I couldn't say that now."

Ald. Stratton stepped back to the present grounds, which he suggested should be retained for exhibition purposes.

Ald. Duncan strongly opposed that idea, preferring to go south to the river. The city, moreover would benefit by the development of the present fair grounds as a residential area.

Mayor Duffus said he believed the maintenance of the present exhibition grounds as a solid block of property was a detriment to the city of more than $10,000 or even $25,000. Aldermen Duncan and Saunders assented to that idea.

It was suggested that with a new location for the exhibition grounds George Street might be extended south to King George street.

Might Annex Whole Section.

Ald. Langford casually interjected the proposal of annexing all the property to the river.

"You're barking up the wrong tree, altogether," replied Mr. Rye, who just naturally sees through a red haze when annexation is broached. "Come out with that and see how far you can get."

Ald. Stratton—"You don't seem to want the city to grow."

Mr. Rye—"Let it grow somewhere else. We don't want to pay the city's taxes. You're not using the property you have got."

Mayor Duffus made another reference about getting together and co-operating.

Mr. Rye caustically remarked that 'co-operation' was a misnomer in the city's mouth. The only co-operation so far had been shown by the Township.

Ald. Stratton—"We're so willing to co-operate we'd annex you."

Mr. Rye — "We fully realize why you want to annex us, but—"

Reeve Anderson of Otonabee agreed with Mayor Duffus that the adjoining townships were concerned about a good agricultural fair in Peterborough.

Ald. Edgar — "We might ask the municipalities if they would contribute towards the cost of the fair grounds."

Mayor Duffus replied that this was more a question for the Fair directors to take up.

City Had Been Very Fair.

Ald. Langford was of the opinion that the city had evidenced an attitude that exceeded co-operation. It had the right from the Provincial Board of Health to locate on the Scott-Rutherford property. It now offered to buy up adjoining property, and the Township remained aloof.

Ald. Stratton — "Don't use that word co-operation. We've been treating them very kindly. We have taken them into our confidence and consideration."

Mr. Rye—"You haven't been as good to us as we have been to you for the past twenty years.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Evans, that the Engineer's plan be submitted to North Monaghan Council for their approval. Carried.

Mr. Rye commented that merely presenting the plans to the Council would not provide progress. It should be submitted to the ratepayers.

Reeve McIntosh replied that he would endeavour to do that and there by get their opinions.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Health and Cost of Living.—There are two extremes in the manner of living and they lead to discomfort, disease and death. One is a lack of sufficient wholesome and nutritious food and the other is an over-abundance and too fee indulgence in rich foods.

During the present war in Europe it is claimed that the people of one great country have never been in better physical health. Before the war began the people of that country were fat and flourishing, a majority of the women suffered with obesity. A majority of the men had no waist line, and were of the ideal aldermanic proportions. The physicians and the surgeons were kept busy and were prosperous. Operations for appendicitis were common indeed. After eighteen months of war and war diet, which means restriction to actual necessities there is veldom if ever an operation for appendicitis. There are very few cases of contagious diseases reported Obesity is almost entirely overcome, and the men are in good hard working order, free from the burden of carrying around too much fat, and with energy developed in proportion.

Temperance in everything is a necessity of good health; the joy of physical life and a long life on top of the earth is desired.

Another of the countries in the war zone has not fared so well. Even at the beginning there was little if any food to spare. The people as a whole lived in poverty, and the death rate was high. There were not many cases of obesity and few operations for appendicitis. The devastation of war increased the distress, and disease and deaths rapidly multiplied. A lack of food in even limited quantities, caused the death of nearly all of the young children and old people. Premature and still births are the rule and not the exception. The end is not yet, but there is the other extreme right here in our own country. As the present time our little nation of only one hundred million people of the earth's population have over one-third of all of the gold of the world. We have an abundant food and clothing supply and we over-eat. Yes, I know, prices are called terribly high but there are comparatively few that have been compelled to restrict the quantity of food served daily on their tables. Obesity is common and surgical operations of all kinds are still more common.

It is to be observed as a historical fact that whenever a nation or a kingdom has grown so rich that it was unnecessary to struggle to earn its bread, it has decayed and disintegrated. Are we going to profit by the lessons of history?

We are great wasters. The waste from many of our kitchens would keep from starvation another family. This wastage is the greatest in the cities. For years one baking company in Chicago has sold daily several tons of day old returned loaves of bread to poultry men for chicken feed.

A few days ago I saw an advertisement in a country newspaper in which a farmer offered 300 bushels of choice pears at 50c per bushel. His farm is only 60 miles from Chicago, and on the same day a big cut price grocery store in Chicago was quoting a special sale of cooking pears at $1.75 per bushel.

One morning recently as I was walking to my office, a distance of about two miles, I was forcibly struck with the great number of automobiles rushing to the heart of the great city. Most of them were large touring cars and had but one or two passengers. In walking four blocks I counted 81 vacant seats. Parallel with their route down town hundreds, yes thousands, of people were riding in the street cars for which the fare of only five cents was frequently a great burden.

The rich city dweller is getting wabbly on his legs, he rides too much, he eats too much. Those that live on the farms in these days and work for a living, have the best of it if they do not overwork or overeat. How is it with you?

CATERING FOR WOUNDED STATISTICS STAGGER

Big English Hospital Confronts Equally Big Problem—Steward Boasts "No Waste"

When 1,500 patients have to be fed daily—many of them on special diets—the problem becomes a trifle involved. For instance, on the days when steak-and-kidney pie figures on the menu 750 pounds of steak and kidney is used; while, in addition, about eighty chickens are used daily. Each chicken provides portions for two men on special diet; while when rabbit pies are the day's main dish no less than 400 rabbits are needed, and here three portions are made from each bunny. Some of the averages include 1,500 eggs, 940 pounds of sausages (two twice weekly) 700 pounds of beef or mutton, and 1,000 pounds of bread per day. Bacon for breakfast amounts to 2,000 rashers each of which weighs 2 ounces. As every man's allowance is 4 ounces, he gets two rashers, which are cut to a nicety by machines.

Fine Variety

Three meals constitute the soldier's daily food; but in this great hospital the organization is so efficient and economical that the catering steward has been able to provide fish, or sausages, or cold ham each day for breakfast in addition, a pudding for dinner, garden stuff or jam for tea, and, on alternate nights, bread-and-butter and cocoa, or bread and soup, for supper. All these meals are prepared in the great main kitchen. But in addition Tommy obtains, by doctor's orders, small delicacies—such as eggs—for tea, and to cook these small items in a huge kitchen would be like cracking nuts with a battleship's ram.

Percentage of Waste

Between every two wards there is a small kitchen, with gas ring, cooking stove, carving table, and hot plate all of its own. Here the willing sisters of the wards will personally cook small "medical comforts" for Tommy. A striking feature of the organization of this hospital are the precautions taken to ensure the minimum amount of waste. It is the steward's proud boast that there are not 10 pounds of bread wasted in a week out of a matter of 9,000 pounds that pass through his hands.

"TOMMY" IN GERMANY

Relates Some Facts—Every Truthful Letter Burned by Censor

A London Daily Mail correspondent writes in speaking of a meeting with a British prisoner in Germany in part as follows: Robinson Crusoe on his island was not more ignorant of the truth about the war than that man, for, while he had learned a few daily expressions in German, he was unable to read it. The only information he could gather was from the French, Belgian, and Russian prisoners with him, and some he got by bribing one of the Landsturm guards with a little margarine or sugar out of his parcel from England.

None the less, though alone, with no Englishman for miles, living almost entirely on his parcels, absolutely cut off from the real facts of the war, hearing nothing but lies, he was as calmly confident of your ultimate victory as I am.

I asked him if he heard from home. "Yes," he said, "now and then, but the folks tell me nothing and I can tell them nothing. If you get back to England you tell the people there not to believe a word that comes from English prisoners. Those who write favorably do so because they have to. Every truthful letter is burned by the military censor. Tell the people to arrange the parcels better, and see that every man gets a parcel at least once a week—not send five parcels to one man and no parcels to some poor bloke like me, who is alone."

BLIND SOLDIER CLERK

Employer Well Satisfied With St. Dunstan's Pupil

The first blinded soldier shorthand typist to be sent out from St. Dunstan's after eight months' training finished his first month's work as a city clerk. Harold Flett, who was blinded at the Dardanelles with the 7th Manchesters in June, 1915, became employed by a London firm. "He was one of our clerks in Manchester before the war," said Mr. Williams, the manager, "but he had not then learned shorthand or typing." Mr. Williams considers blind shorthand typists are particularly suitable as private secretaries. "They can tabulate cards," he said, "and keep business engagements correctly, in fact, do all the work required."

SOLDIER'S POCKET BOOK

A Compact Volume of Everything a Soldier Should Know

The "Field Service Pocket Book," prepared by the General Staff of the War Office, is a marvellous 25 cents' worth, which is all it costs. How it is done for the money is really extraordinary, since it runs to nearly 300 closely printed pages, embellished with colored plates and diagrams, and is neatly bound in canvas boards. Nothing seems to be missing, for the long list of subjects treated herein ranges over such diverse matters as aircraft, astronomy, billeting, camping, censorship, ciphers, cooking, discipline, entrenching, espionage, law, pay, railways, rations, signalling, sketching, strategy, tactics, topography, and the like. Thus, if one wants to know how to cure snake bite, to calculate the velocity of a river, to load a baggage wagon, to destroy a bridge, to select a camping ground, to march by compass, to decode a cipher message, to water horses, to change foreign money, to deal with military offences, or to make tough meat tender, one has only to consult its enlightening pages. They will not be found wanting.

DOGS USED IN WAR

Training Dogs For Patrol and Ambulance Work

One of the most interesting establishments of the French army is that of the French sheep dog, which are being employed in ambulance and patrol work. There are only about 25 in number. Training has to be begun when the dogs are very young. The first thing, of course, is implicit obedience. Then it is a question of training them not to fear gun fire. Once trained, they show themselves absolutely fearless, and so far from recoiling from a shell-burst they usually rush forward and bark furiously at it. On ambulance work they perform much the same duties as those of St. Bernards. They are sent out to scour the ground, and when they have found a wounded man they bring back some article of his apparel. A doctor and two orderlies are then detailed to follow the dog, who brings them to the place where the wounded man is lying. The following story is told of "Fanfare," one of the "Bar Rouge" breed. The dog was carrying a message from the front line to the rear when he was very badly hit in the foreleg by shrapnel. As soon as he had pulled himself together he limped on to his destination on three legs, and then insisted on returning to the front patrol who had originally sent him out.

NOTED BIOLOGIST TO FIGHT FOR EMPIRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—Dr. R. Rugles Gates, who last year was professor of zoology in the University of California came East with the intention of taking part in the important scientific expedition going to British Guiana in the sprin has turned aside to give his services to England. He is taking passage to enlist immediately in the British army.

Russian Carpathian Offensive Is Meeting With Much Success

Petrograd Announces That the Czar's Forces Have Occupied the Whole Range and Heights Around Kirlibaba---Greek Situation is Very Critical---Quiet Reigns on the French Front But General Haig Announces That British Entered German Lines at Armentieres.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, December 1.—The Russian offensive in the Carpathian southward of Kirlibaba is proceeding with success. The War Office statement to-day declared that the Czar's forces in this sector had occupied the whole range of heights surrounding this city recently wrested from the Germans by the Russians at the start of the offensive.

BUCHAREST, December 1.—Six miles south of Pitesci, along the Golesh front, Roumanian troops were in violent engagement with the Teutonic forces, to-day's official statement asserted.

Several hundred enemy prisoners and ten machine guns were captured.

There was also vigorous fighting in the Glaciciоc Valley and near Neajlov, as far as Komana.

In Dobrudja, the statement said, the enemies' whole front had been attacked.

In Western Moldovia, as far as the Bureu Valley, there were lively engagements at Tablabutri and Bratocea. Also there were artillery and infantry engagements in Prahova.

ATHENS, December 1.—Premier Lambros issued a statement to-day stating that the Government "as an interpreter of the desires of the King and the army," asked the people of Greece to show their wisdom and sangfroid in order to avoid all provocation in the present crisis and prevent any aggravation of the situation.

PARIS (French Official Communique), December 1.—"The night was calm along the whole front," said to-day's official statement, concerning the western front.

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, December 1.—The continuation of the heavy Russian offensive between the Uz Valley and the Tartar Pass was announced in yesterday's Austria-Hungarian statement received here to-day.

"The armies of Generals Von Arz and Von Koevess along nearly the whole front day and night stubbornly struggled with the enemy charging again and again," the statement added.

ROME, December 1.—The evacuation of Bucharest by the civil population and preparations for a desperate resistance to the expected German assault, are occupying Roumanian authorities, according to a despatch to-day to the Idea Nasionale.

LONDON, December 1.—The London Chronicle's House of Commons reporter says to-day that although no opposition has yet been given to the Government's votes for credit, it is altogether likely some will develop next Wednesday when the Premier proposes a new vote. Certain Labour, Radical and Irish members propose to contend that it is possible at this time for Britain to obtain an honourable peace, with her aims realised.

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, December 1.—Continued attacks on the army of Archduke Joseph in the Carpathians, by Russians and Roumanians, were part of a violent assault on the passes on a front of three hundred kilometres, to-day's official report declared.

Teutonic troops pursuing the Roumanian forces cut off by Field Marshal von Mackensen yesterday, took more than 300 prisoners. The official statement to-day declared that the Roumanian forces, cut off from their main army ,were seeking to escape "their inevitable fate" by changing the direction of their retreat.

LONDON, December 1.—The retreating Roumanian forces are destroying grain stores and oil in the sections of their country menaced by the German advance, a Reuter's despatch from Jassy stated to-day.

Roumania's great oil wells and vast stores of grain would have been exceedingly rich booty for the Germans.

WASHINGTON, December 1.—Germany stands ready to pay indemnity for the American lives lost in torpedoing of the steamer Marina, offer an apology for the incident and to punish the submarine commander responsible, if it develops that the vessel was sunk unjustly.

This offer was conveyed to the State Department in Germany's formal reply to American inquiries, and during a confidential visit between Secretary of State Lansing and Ambassador von Bernstorff, who made no reference to the settlement of the Lusitania matter or other problems between the two nations.

Pte. Harry Dawkins Who Enlisted Here Is Listed Among Wounded

Was Transferred to the 38th Battalion and Went to the Front as a Member of the 38th Battalion---Pte. Saxby is Recovering---News of Peterborough Boys Overseas ---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Miss L. Booth, 176 Sherbrooke St., has received official word that Pte. Harry Dawkins who enlisted here in May of last year going to the 59th Battalion and afterwards transferring to the 38th Ottawa Battalion has been wounded. An official message states that he was hit on November 9th and is suffering from wounds in the right arm and in the abdomen. Pte. Dawkins went to Bermuda with the 38th and last June went overseas with the same battalion which went to the front as part of the 4th Canadian Division. Before enlisting he was employed by the G.T.R. as a fireman. His relatives live in Belleville.

RENFREW, Nov. 30.—The 240th Battalion with headquarters in Renfrew has established what is believed to be a record for county battalions in Canada in the third year of the war by recruiting 213 men during the month of November. This battalion is the one which recently sent a company of 125 men on a trek of several weeks through the counties of Lanark and Renfrew. The battalion finished the month of November with an even 500 men enrolled.

Mrs. Bugg of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club, 249 Aylmer street has received the following letter from Pte. J. Whittaker, with the 38th Battalion.

Dear Friend and Benefactor,—Just a hurried line asking you to accept my hearty thanks for sending me those socks. If you should care to know who I am just write to Mr. Vincent Maher, R. R. No. 4 Lakefield. I was in his employ close on three years and when the war broke out answered my country's call as in duty bound. You will be pleased to hear that all the boys who enlisted with me in Peterborough are still alive and well. Perhaps you will know them if I mention their names. They are Corp. R. Winson, Ptes. Dawkin, H. Arnold, N. Armstrong and Sandford. Being a total stranger to you I am at a loss to convey to you any news.

However, you may give my hearty thanks to the ladies of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club and pay them all the compliments of the season for me.

Trusting you are enjoying good health. Wishing you a merry Christmas and a most prosperous New Year. Allow me to be your obedient servant,

JOSEPH WHITTAKER.

The many friends of Pte. W. H. Saxby, of the 21st Battalion, who was very severely wounded by shrapnel at St. Eloi, on the 8th of April last, will be interested in knowing that he is making progress towards recovery. Dear Sir,—I beg to inform you that Pte. W. Saxby, 30685, of the 21st Canadians, who is now at the Thicket Hospital, Birchington, England, was seen again yesterday by our visitor, and is reported going on about the same. There are still small pieces of bone giving trouble, but he is so very cheery and bright. He is a great favourite with all the nursing staff, because he bears everything so bravely. You may rest assured that everything possible will be done for him. We shall hope to send a better report next week.—Yours truly,

Beatrice Cavethill, M.L.S.

Mrs. Worrall, 411 London street, has received the following letter:

France, Nov. 13.

Dear Mrs. Worrall,—Just a line to let you know that I received a pair of socks from the Wives' and Mothers' Club. I happened to get the pair with your address and wish to thank you very much for your kindness. You havent forgotten the boys at the front. Such things are very handy when one has a dry pair to put on when his others are wet. Thanking you very much, I remain.

Yours,
Driver Jos. Reynolds,

Wishing you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year

Canadian Command Depot,
Shoreham By Sea
Essex, England, Nov. 7, 1916

Rev B. W. Squire,
Norwood.

Dear Sir,—On behalf of the boys of the Norwood platoon and myself I wish through you to thank the people of the village of Norwood for their kindness to us in giving us the box of good things that we have already received.

I wish to ask the pardon of the village people for my seeming neglect in not acknowledging the receipt of the box before this. My only explanation is that since the box arrived I have been stationed in three different camps. Owing to the fact that some of the boys were in France and others in England I took it upon myself to open the large boxes and re-wrap some parcels and send some of them to France and the others to West Sandling where the remainder of the boys were stationed. I sent every box separate by mail but I am sorry to state that two or three were over the limit weight of seven pounds and therefore could not be sent by post, these I sent through special arrangement with Miss Plummer of the Home Comforts Commission, Shorncliffe.

The boys are mostly in France at present James O'Brien previously supposed to be killed owing to a mistake being made between 409149 J. M. O'Brien and 409188 J. H. O'Brien is now returned to England for an operation on the knee cap and is apparently in good health.

I might say that I am sincerely sorry that I have been unable to accompany the boys to the front although even while in Norwood I knew I could not accompany them to the front, my great ambition was to beat them to it, but as we, fortunately or unfortunately as the case may be, are bound to obey orders. I am at present working at the Canadian Command Depot at Shoreham By Sea with the expectation of going over soon.

Thanking the people of Norwood again for their kindness and confidence in me, I remain.

Sincerely their friend,
Walter C. Thompson,
Captain.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES TO AID COUNCIL

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—R. B. Bennett, K.C., M.P., Director-General of National Service, accepted an offer of representatives of fraternal societies, who, following their interview with Sir Sam Hughes, as Minister of Militia, met him in conference at the King Edward Hotel to-day, and were his guests to luncheon at noon. According to Mr. W. F. Montague, of the Society of Chosen Friends, after the meeting, which was secret, Mr. Bennett expressed himself as willing to employ the co-operation of the fraternal societies. This was the offer made to Mr. Bennett: "Use us in any way and to any extent. For example, we hand you the names and addresses of six thousand local secretaries. They will assist you in any registration that you may wish to take."

More Drafts Will Be Sent

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—Local recruiting agencies which interviewed R. B. Bennett, M.P., Director of National Service, here to-day, were assured that the Government would henceforth send soldiers overseas in drafts from now on. There would be no more waiting and fretting about till full battalions were recruited.

Czar's Troops Driving a Wedge Into Teuton Lines and May Throw Out of Joint the Whole Hun Plan For the Crushing of Roumania

HARD FIGHT ON

LONDON, Friday, Dec 1.—The mention in the Roumanian communique of violent fighting on the Glavatsiotsu River is regarded here as showing that the Roumanian retreat has halted, and that a stand is being made on that stream to contest the advance on Bucharest from the west. There is nothing to indicate, however, whether this action is intended as a final effort to save the capital, or whether it is merely a cover to permit the main Roumanian forces to take positions on the Argesche River some miles further to the east.

The battle has also been joined near the frontier north from Bucharest and along the whole Moldavian front, where the Russians are known to be operating with large forces.

Meanwhile the army of General von Falkenhayn is keeping up its pressure against the Roumanians west and north-west of the capital, in the centre having forced the Roumanians to fall back to within 37 miles of Bucharest. But here also the Roumanians have decided to give battle and are vigorously opposing a further advance.

Farther north the Teutons have captured the town of Campulung, thus opening the way for the unhindered advance of additional troops of the Central Powers through the Torsburg Pass into Wallachia.

The new Russian offensive in the Carpathians directed against Bodna Pass, the capture of which would menace Falkenhayn's base, has resulted in considerable gains. Heavy fighting is proceeding for possession of the important pass through the Carpathians at Kirlibaba and today's Petrograd announcement says the town of Kirlibaba is now within the range of the Russians.

In the region of the village of Koryuniza the Russians captured a salient enemy position which projected deeply into the Russian front. In the wooded Carpathians they gained possession of Rukada height, eleven versts south-west of Wakarka, capturing one hundred Germans and three machine guns. In the region of the heights east of Kirlibaba the battle is still proceeding. In the last two days the Russians have taken about nine hundred prisoners in this neighbourhood.

Gen. Letchitsky's Russian army is attacking along a front of many miles in the wooded and snow-clad Carpathians, just north of the tip of Moldavia, Rouranias northern province. They are struggling to force the Carpathian passes, enter the Hungarian plain and turn the left flank of the whole Teuton line in Transylvania and Roumania.

May Split Teuton Line.

The Russian advance, if it can be kept up, will drive a wedge into the Teuton line near the entrances to the Stiod and Rodna Passes leading to the plains of Hungary. The Russians have been posted for months on the summits of the Carpathians near these passes, seemingly on the point of forcing them. If they succeed they may throw out of joint the whole Teuton plan for the crushing of Roumania.

A BIG VICTORY IN EAST AFRICA FOR GEN. SMUTS

Main German Force in Colony Caught Between Two British Columns and a Large Portion Has Been Caught

OTHERS HAVE RETREATED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The capture of a large German force in German East Africa, the division of the Teutonic armies in that section and the retreat of badly reduced enemy detachments was announced to-day by General Smuts, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in the South African Union.

The British leader reported the main German force in German East Africa has been divided, and the main body caught between converging British columns. This larger portion of the enemy forces was driven north, while the other section was forced to surrender north of Neulangenburg.

The remnants of Gen. Wahle's force, reduced probably by more than a half on account of casualties, are making their retreat eastward toward the district of Mahenge, General Smuts asserted.

German East Africa is Germany's last remaining colony. The fighting detailed by General Smuts is almost in the centre of the colony.

Ald. Edgar Urges Full "Quid Pro Quo"

The Trades and Labour Council's objection to the closing of Mill Street was received by the City Council last night. No grounds for objection were stated.

Ald. Edgar urged that the city ask the Quaker Oats Company to make an even exchange of property for the part of Murray and Mill Streets they receive, and without any conditions restricting the time limit within which a bridge may be begun from London Street across the river to Hazlitt. The city should get a right-of-way for all time.

Mr. D. W. Dumble has offered to give the land necessary to widen Hazlitt Street from 40 to 66 feet if the Quaker Oats Company will likewise widen the proposed extension of Hazlitt Street through their property, making it all a uniform width of 66 feet.

Monaghan and City Drawing Together

Monaghan and the City Council representatives will meet on Saturday at 3 p.m. at the corner of Lansdowne street and Park street to discuss the means of draining surface water from the De Laval property. The olive branch promises to grow to a large tree with the township and city nestling beneath its shade.

WINTER WINDOWS.

Most adaptable of potted plants for the house is the aspidistra. It will do well in rooms where there is no sun and will even survive when kept at a distance from the windows.

Its leaves, which are long and narrow, are dark green, and sometimes variegated. One of good size may be kept in a six inch pot for three or four years without repotting, but it will make a larger plant if repotted once a year. In repotting use one third mellow loam, one-third sand and one-third well rotted manure.

These plants require a large amount of water and the pot should stand in a pot containing water. The leaves, too, should be washed frequently.

A plant that will do well in partial sunlight is the begonia rubra. It requires a soil made up of leaf mould sand and fibrous loam, no manure. Strong sunlight or too much heat is fatal. The soil should be kept moist, but the foliage should be washed as little as possible.

Few plants give more satisfactory results than cyclamens. As they are comparatively inexpensive it is well to buy a plant that is beginning to bloom. It is quite possible, however, to raise them from the corm, a sort of bulb. A corm should be planted in a four inch pot in soil composed of leaf mould, sand and loam in about equal parts. Keep it in the dark until the buds begin to swell, when it should be placed near the window. The cyclamens need sunshine and a great deal of moisture and will do best in a very warm room.

The oxalis is an ornamental plant of easy culture. It is raised from bulbs and may be grown in a shallow pan or vessel of any sort. At first it will require but little water but after it has begun to grow it may be watered generously.

County Gives $3000 To The Patriotic Fund For January

New Council Is Unpledged

In full sympathy with the Patriotic Fund, and recognizing its requirements for 1917, the County Council this morning felt itself restrained from responding to the Fund's appeal to the extent expected of the County, and of which the present Council was apparently prepared to contribute. Their tenure of office expires with the present year and the 1917 council meets on the fourth Tuesday in January. Hence the Council passed a resolution in Finance Committee this morning, providing for a contribution of $3,000, to be paid in January to the Patriotic Fund. It remains with the new Council to decide how much it will give during the entire year of 1917.

This is a case in which actions speak less than words.

Reeve Anderson expressed his accord seconded by Reeve Bullied, that the Council give one-twelfth of $40,000 as the January contribution to the Patriotic Fund and that the balance be dealt with at the January session.

Reeve McIntosh moved an amendment, seconded by Reeve Cuben, that the decision regarding the entire New Year's grant be left with the new Council agreed that the County should give $40,000 to the Fund.

Reeve Anderson expressed his accord with that sentiment; but also pointed out that yesterday's deputation had stated that the present monthly requirements amounted to $7,500. If the County was expected to give 2-5 of the money needed, its monthly contribution would figure out to $3,000.

In the following discussion, the motion was changed from $3333.00 or one-twelfth of $40,000.00 to $3,000.00.

Reeve Squire said he had no doubt of the new Council's action and Deputy Reeve Eason remarked that it would be unworthy of the County ratepayers if it failed to make the required total contribution.

Reeve Anderson spoke of a motion to make the January amount $3,000, but dropped it when, as he said, the amendment proposed no immediate action.

The amendment was defeated. The motion provides for a by-law for the borrowing of $3,000 to be paid in January.

Lawsuits Hamper Township.

Reeve McIntosh stated that six of the Townships faced lawsuits which depleted municipal surpluses and interfered with the heartiest giving to worthy causes. Approach the men, he said, who press these lawsuits, and chances of getting a dollar out of them for patriotic purposes are slim. Reeve McIntosh wished that lawsuits could be suspended until after the war.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

LONDON, December 1.—Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent says Germany has commenced to deport from Belgium to Germany all women and girls who have sewing machines, or who are specialists in hand-sewing. All resistors are liable to imprisonment.

PARIS, December 1.—A counter attack by the German-Bulgarian forces against the positions northwest of Grumirsa in Macedonia taken by the Serbs yesterday, was repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy, the War Office reported to-day.

LONDON, December 1.—The forcing of an entry into German lines at several places south of Armentieres was announced by General Sir Douglas Haig to-day. He also detailed the repulse of an attempted enemy raid on trenches northeast of Neuve Chappelle.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A slight outbreak of rioting on the streets of Athens, with firing of several shots, apparently without casualties, was reported in an evening news despatch from the Greek capital to-day.

Quiet was restored. Admiral Du Fournet is expected to land strong detachments of allied forces to watch the allies' transport there.

The Chalois garrison, in tight marching order, is marching toward Schimartura. Other forces are reported marching southward from Thiesley and Othiotis.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The flat refusal of Greece to the disarmament demanded on behalf of the allies by Admiral Du Fournet, to-day brought about a crisis in the Greek situation.

The refusal came on the last day of the time limit set by the French naval commander in his ultimatum that the surrender of arms and munitions of war be made.

Dispatches from the Greek capital to-day said Admiral Du Fournet, anticipating the refusal because of announcements during the last few days that the Crown Council and the Cabinet had both determined upon this course, was preparing to land allied troops at Piraeus, the port of Athens.

In the meantime the Greek government is apparently preparing for active resistance, having ousted French officers detailed in charge of post offices and telegraph stations.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 1.—The Reichstag has passed to the second reading of the bill for compulsory civilian service, according to Berlin advices to-day. Only slight alterations were made in the measure as orginally introduced.

ONTARIO COMMUNITIES ARE BLAMING OFFENDERS

Fail to Live Up to Their Obligations to Maintain Carnegie Libraries.

RENFREW, Dec. 1.—Mayor Rochester arrived home from New York, where he was endeavouring to have the Carnegie Trust give a more liberal grant than $12,000 for the purpose of erecting a public library building in Renfrew. At least $15,000 is wanted. Consideration was promised, and the town asked to send plans and all particulars. Mr. Carnegie's secretary told Mayor Rochester that several Ontario communities were failing to live up to their obligations in connection with the raising of money for the maintenance of Carnegie libraries, as a result in which all requests for grants could no more carefully examined than in cases past. Some of the States of the Union had proven very remiss in that direction, but none had offended so glaringly as Ontario.

A choice diet is being fed, the dairymen using oil cake, beets, alfalfa and several kinds of meal, all of high milk-producing qualities. Hailey, of Springford, who had the winner last year, has another string of Holsteins.

County Will Deal With Children's Aid Society in January

Mr. E. A. Peck, Mr. Jos. Wearing, Chief Howard, Adjt. McElhenny and Mr. C. A. G. Spence, representing the Children's Aid Society, requested the Council to pay an account of $191 for the care of three children named Lindsay, whose father was tried in the local court last spring on serious criminal charges. The children had been brought to the jail and were there handed over to the Society. In this respect it was an unusual case, the procedure being entirely different from the usual course.

The deputation informed the Council that the society has been financed thus far by voluntary giving, although the municipalities may be lawfully required to pay much larger sums than they had been contributing.

The Finance committee decided to take no action now beyond an invitation to the society to wait upon them at the January session.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 1.—Germany has sent 10,000,000 marks in gold to Switzerland to equalize the rate of exchange. The bullion arrived at Berne yesterday, and was transported to the Swiss National Bank.

MADE THEIR OWN LIQUOR.

Court Decides Druggists Can't be Fined for Selling Tincture of Ginger.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 1. — Another precedent arising out of the Ontario Temperance Act was set here when charges brought against two local druggists brought against two local druggists of a breach of the by-law were dismissed by Magistrate Livingston.

Two men arrested for being drunk, said they bought at drug stores tincture of ginger and mixed it with local option beer or native wine and it intoxicated them.

The druggists didn't deny selling the ginger and medical evidence was that the tincture as sold could not be used as a drink unless diluted as it would burn the throat.

Counsel for the College of Pharmacy asked for judgment for defendants as medical evidence proved that the tincture was not intoxicating save when mixed with other liquor, that no evidence was given to show the alcoholic percentage of such liquors, and that a druggist was not responsible for subsequent mixing, and intoxication.

BIG PORTO RICO COFFEE CROP

This Year's Exports Expected to Reach 60,000,000 Pounds.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Nov. 20.—The coffee crop now being harvested promises to be one of the largest and most valuable ever produced here. More than 3,750,000 pounds of the new crop have been exported in the last two months at an average price of $17.00 per hundred pounds. Stocks of Porto Rico coffee everywhere are low, and there is a keen demand for it. Cuba, Spain, and Italy are the principal purchasers. A shortage of shipping facilities is delaying shipments to Europe.

But for damage done to the crop by a hurricane in August, a little while before the berries matured, it was estimated that the present crop would have been the largest ever produced. Probably about 10 per cent. of the crop was lost owing to the storm. It is expected that there will be between 45,000,000 and 50,000,000 pounds for export despite this loss.

PROTEST MEETING CERTAIN

Arrangements for Women's Protest Meeting Almost Completed—Likely That a List of Cheaper Foods Will be Prepared—Potato Boycott Making Good Success.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1—The straffing of the high cost of living in Montreal is proceeding apace. The directors of the Montreal Housewives' League, who are conducting the potato boycott in this city, have practically completed arrangements for the holding next week of a great mass meeting of women which in all probability will take place in the Windsor Hall and will have for its object the drawing up of a living schedule which will put a ban on such articles of food as are practically prohibitive in price and the substitution of other and equally nutritious commodities.

The ladies of the League are enthusiastic over the success so far of the potato boycott. Petitions are being circulated throughout the various districts of the city which the housewives are being asked to sign, stating that they will not buy potatoes for a period of two weeks. The response has been encouraging in the extreme, and already signs are evident that real success will be obtained as to-day in the poorer districts of the city it was reported to several of the ladies that certain stores had reduced he price by two and three cents per peck.

Some idea of the inflation of the price of potatoes in certain districts of Montreal, where the poorer classes are forced to buy this staple article of food in small quantities each day, may be gathered from the evidence submitted to certain of the ladies who are securing names to the boycott and in which it was proved that there has been an advance in the price of potatoes bought by the peck of no less than 114 per cent. in the past twelve months.

The big mass meeting which the Montreal Housewives' League has under consideration will have as its object the drawing up of a schedule of such articles as should be placed under the ban by local housewives until their prices are reduced and it is understood that eggs are one of the articles to be given the absent treatment next if the potato boycott achieves the success now promised.

HID LIQUOR INSIDE TROUSERS

Smugglers Had Bottles of Liquor Thus Suspended

WALKERVILLE, Dec. 1.—Arrested by Customs Officer Leighton at the ferry dock here while attempting to smuggle liquor into Canada, John Bolisky and John Puinis, living at Ford, were each fined $54.25, including costs, by Magistrate Miers, in the police court to-day. Officer Leighton's attention was drawn to the men because they had made two other trips to Detroit Tuesday. When they were searched three bottles of liquor were taken. The bottles were suspended inside their trousers.

Dr. J. A. Smith, collector of customs, for the port of Windsor, who prosecuted, said other prosecutions would be made against liquor smugglers.

"This is the first conviction ever made, as far as I can remember, for the offence of smuggling in liquor," Dr. Smith said, "but it will not be the last. Since prohibition went into effect hundreds of bottles have been seized, but no police court proceedings followed. The practice must stop, for the government intends to enforce the temperance act to the letter."

New York Uplift Leader is Dead

"Mrs. Mary Goode" Had Succumbed Pneumonia.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—"Mrs. Mary Goode," whose revelations of police grafts were one of the most startling features of the investigation of police methods following the Rosenthal murder, is dead, and her death has disclosed that she devoted the last four years of her life to the uplifting of fallen women. Once she kept a disreputable house and, according to her testimony, paid certain policemen $50 a month for protection. Since her reformation, it is said, she spent most of an allowance of $3,000 a year received from her family in her rescue work.

She always refused to tell her real name, but it is said she came of a reputable up-State family. She died of pneumonia contracted a week ago after a visit to the women's night court in the rain.

SIR SAM HUGHES IN BUFFALO

Declined to Discuss Reasons For Retirement

A Buffalo despatch says: Major-General Sam Hughes, until recently minister of militia of the Dominion of Canada, which post he resigned under pressure after having raised equipped and trained 400,000 Canadian troops for overseas service arrived in Buffalo last night.

He registered at the Iroquois in company with E. S. Lowe of Toronto, who had planned and carried out much of the work of establishing training camps for Canadian soldiers. This morning they leave on a motor trip to Virginia by way of New York.

His friends charged that he had been the victim of intrigue and had been too insistent upon the cutting of red tape to pipeas regular army heads in England.

Upon the question as to what had been the underlying reason for his retirement Gen. Hughes refused to throw any light. He still is in the service, subject to call.

"I am under no obligation to remain silent, but I prefer not to discuss any subject relating even remotely to the military situation," said Gen. Hughes, pleasantly.

But Gen. Hughes did discuss most interestingly phases and side-lights of the great war, always, however, with the injunction that what he said was not be published.

"I was once a newspaperman myself," said Gen. Hughes; "ran a little country journal. Since the war began I have never hesitated to take newspapermen into my confidence with the understanding no use was to be made of what I said, and only once was my confidence misplaced."

Gen. Hughes spoke glowingly of the conduct of Americans who had enlisted with the Canadian troops for service in Europe.

"The Yankee boys are jewels," said Gen. Hughes. "I could relate many instances of splendid heroism and self-sacrifice in which Yankee boys figured.

"I recall one who served in the United States marine corps. Three times he was sent back from the front, wounded. They finally got him with a machine gun.

"There was an American boy enlisted as a private. I had the pleasure of pinning a medal of honour on his breast and make him an officer for gallant conduct at the front."

"He has a big job on his hands."

Gen. Hughes courteously asked to be excused from making comment on the Mexican situation.

BILLY SUNDAY BADLY NEEDED IN WINDY CITY

CHICAGO, Dec. 1. -- Levee gambling chiefs began to get under cover in the Twenty-second street district following an announcement that gunmen of the infamous Five Points Gang in New York have been imported to clean out the Enright-Dunn stockyards mob of "killers."

The report came on the heels of a murderous assault in the saloon of Sells & Stahl, when a "mob" of gunmen shot out the mirrors, the displays of cut glass, and otherwise wrecked the "S. & S." bookmaking establishment in an attempt to kill Stahl, one of the proprietors. Only Stahl's dexterity with his own revolver foiled the gunmen and drove them off.

This "Only a Sample."

"This is only a sample of what's coming off next month," said one of the men engaged in the defense of the "S. & S." "The stockyards gang has been brought into the district to kill off one of the factions. There is going to be some rich fighting."

The offensive is said to be a coterie of gamblers who are said not to like the tactics of the late Joe Hogarty, who was murdered in a Burnham Inn Tuesday morning. A gang trapped Hogarty in Burnham, formed a circle about him, and shot him to death with 18 bullets.

Also included in the dislike of the gang is said to be Sol Van Praag; once powerful in the political circles of the first ward and lately accused of operating a gambling "club" in Wabash avenue below Twenty-second street. On the morning of the murder of Hogarty Van Praag's place was robbed by men said to have appeared later in the gang that slew Hogarty.

John Turio Seeks Retreat.

John Turio has not been seen in his usual haunts for several days. It is rumoured around the "red lights" that he has sought retreat from possible attack.

Turio is the proprietor of a resort in Burnham and always has been connected with "red light" enterprises. For some reason he has not been liked by the gunmen. Some months ago a gang of gunmen went to his place in Burnham to rob it. They found an old friend in charge.

"What are you doing here?" they asked.

"Why, I'm the manager here," he replied.

"O, h—l," came the answer. "That stops us. We came out here to stick up the joint."

BERLIN'S POTATO RATIONS.

Amount Allowed to the Population is Decreased.

Berlin, Dec. 1.— Owing to the decided falling off in the potato crop this it has been decided to introduce a new scheme of potato rationing. On January 1 the urban population will be placed on a daily allowance of three-quarters of a pound instead of one pound. The agricultural population will have an allowance of one pound daily during January and February, and thereafter a pound and a half. The potatoes thus saved will be devoted to placing those performing hard labour on a ration of two pounds daily.

Negro Is Guilty Of Abducting Two Girls of Chatham

Marries One Aged 16—Has Hub for Younger One

Will Still Face Charge of Perjury and Jail Breaking.

CHATHAM, Dec. 1.—Pte. William Thompson, coloured, of No. 2 Construction Battalion, was found guilty on two charges of abduction and sentenced to one year in the Ontario Reformatory on each of the two charges, the sentences to run concurrently.

On October 31 Thompson quietly married Beralce Hawkins, a 16-year-old girl, giving her age as 19. Subsequently the bride and groom left the city, taking with them Muriel Smith, a 13-year-old girl, whom the prisoner proposed to marry to his brother, a soldier at Windsor. Thompson was arrested as he stepped from a train on his return ten days later from Walkerburg, and charged with abduction. He refused to tell the whereabouts of the two girls who were being secretly sought by their parents. They were later found in Ypsilanti, Mich., at the home of the prisoner's sister.

In addition to the charges heard this morning, Thompson will stand in charge of perjury, and also one of jail-breaking. One week ago Saturday, the prisoner, who was confined to the county jail, scaled the high wall, and for 24 hours eluded the police. When arrested he was hiding in a straw stack at North Buxton.

The youngsters have high hopes at Christmas time, not all of which can become realization on Christmas morning.

Disappointment can be often lessened, though, by a trip to the Toyman's Shop. You'll find prices here will permit the utmost liberality of buying without extravagant expenditure. Also the children can at least see everything Santa Claus has designed for them—there's quite a large measure of juvenile enjoyment in that.

The Toyman's Shop is complete—lots of novelties and old friends in new guise. The toymakers have surpassed themselves in the variety and attractiveness of their delights. Dollies await the little mother's love and admiration. The doll family is a wonder—nowhere so great a showing.

Impossible to describe everything. We urge a personal visit. Bring the children. Enjoy with them the largest toy and doll display in the vicinity. It's here.

Women To Boycott Dealers Whose Prices Are Too High

Canadian Housewives' Economic Association to Draft Scale of Prices Which Should Not Be Exceeded

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—The Canadian Housewives' Economic Association have called an executive meeting this afternoon with a view to setting a price for various necessary articles of food, and it is purposed to pass a resolution to ask the women of Toronto to stop buying goods which exceed a certain price limit, and show merchants that the women are serious about reducing the present high cost of living.

"If the women of the city will back us up, I feel sure the measure will be effective," said Mrs. F. S. Mearns, president of the league. Anyone who has made a study of foods will readily realize that other things may be used in place of those which have reached a price beyond the average consumer's pocket. Eggs are not worth 6 1-2 cents apiece, and I fully believe if women would stop buying them at that price they would soon be reduced. Rice could be used in place of potatoes, also other vegetables which are not so expensive and are equally nutritious.

"The meat question might be dealt with similarly. Creamed soups and purees, made with milk and the pulp of vegetables can take the place of meat. Macaroni, spaghetti, and noodles contain so much starch and flesh-building material that they are equal to meat also, if combined with cheese. The fat they lack is supplied by the cheese, and when so combined they make a perfect food."

Mrs. H. S. Harwood pointed out the fact that various members of the league had benefited by food being brought in through their association, and felt much could be done to reduce the cost for everyone. "We have only paid 42 cents a pound for our best butter and 49 cents a dozen for stamped eggs, which we are entitled to return if not strictly fresh; and not pay more than 20c a pound for the best fowl, chickens, ducks, and geese. This goes to show that this produce can be bought for less money if we go the right way about it."

"I think the scheme is a splendid one," said Miss M. Davidson of Central Technical School, "as there is no doubt that certain foodstuffs can be reduced. One way to help would be for all the women's organizations to get together and back them up, as a handful of women are not sufficient to deal with a matter of such vital importance to every householder. Of course, there are many articles which have increased owing to war conditions. The men at the front have to be fed, and must be the first consideration, and I believe this has been largely responsible for the increase in milk, which has been caused by the great production of cheese for the men."

Mrs. C. Hastings, who also feels very strongly on the subject, felt it was a matter in which every women's society or organization should back the C.H.E.A. up in.

She also advocated the use of oleomargarine as a substitute for butter, which would help bring down the price. "This is being used in England," she added, "why not here, as it is just as nutritious?"

Mrs. A. Kantel also favoured the suggestion, and expressed herself as believing it to be a good scheme if all the women could be induced to come together and help in every way, as it is a matter which touches all families.

Mrs. A. E. Huestis, president of the Local Council of Women, said that while such a measure had been proposed under the auspices of their own organization and later fully discussed at Kingston, they had retried in favor of the men, who were endeavoring to reach a solution to the problem. "There is no doubt a great deal can be done if the women are in earnest and carry it through. In all periods of war food prices have gone up owing to transportation and labour, but there is no doubt eggs and some other articles could be sold much more cheaply than they are being purchased to-day.

"It was the opinion of many of the women that eggs and potatoes are being held up in cold storage, until higher prices were reached, and if women cease to buy, it would in all probability hasten a reduction in price."

SHIELDING HER HAT IS KILLED IN STREET

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—An unidentified woman was killed and three other women were injured in three automobile accidents. The woman killed was knocked down in Twenty-third street, near Broadway, as she attempted to cross the street, holding a newspaper on her head to protect her hat from the rain. The automobile was owned by Ernest J. Wile, of No. 342 West Seventy-second street, and was driven by Emil Dennison. There was nothing in the woman's possession by which she could be identified. She died soon after being taken to New York Hospital.

Two of the other women were hurt when they became bewildered in endavoring to get out of the way of an automobile owned by Mountford Mills, of No. 2,211 Broadway, at Seventy-ninth street and Broadway. Mr. Mills was in the automobile, which was being driven by Charles James. James swerved the automobile sharply to avoid striking Mrs. Ellen Walsh, of No. 420 Amsterdam avenue. As he did so the front wheels struck Mrs. Nina Weiss, of No. 315 West Seventy-ninth street, who apparently stopped suddenly when she saw Mrs. Walsh was in danger.

As Mrs. Weiss fell, James again swerved the automobile, to avoid running over her. Mrs. Walsh was not yet out of the way and she also was knocked down. Mrs. Walsh appeared to be most seriously hurt. Mr. Mills directed James to drive with her to the Park Hospital. Surgeons there found her skull had been fractured and pronounced her condition critical. Mrs. Weiss was assisted to her home, but became unconscious there and was taken to Knickerbocker Hospital. There it was found she also was suffering from a fracture of the skull. James reported both accidents to the police. Witnesses corroborated his statement that the accident was unavoidable and he was not arrested.

The third woman injured was hurt when a taxicab in which she was a passenger was in collision with a Fifth avenue automobile, but at Seventh avenue and 145th street. She said she was Miss Bertha Jacobs, of No. 2,979 Perry avenue, the Bronx. She was taken to Harlem Hospital.

To prevent the finger from becoming pricked when hemming or embroidering, put a small piece of surgeon's adhesive plaster over it.

"THE INN"

BY A CANADIAN OVERSEAS

The afternoon was warm and humid, while in the clear blue heavens great bursts of fluffy clouds hung lazily. The sun looked down upon a sleepy earth; no creature moved save the noiseless butterfly as it fluttered languidly over the milkweed in the heavens; no noise was audible save the low, monotonous humming of the bees as they ceaselessly carried on their work.

A cool leafy wood invited me to rest. I lay down on a soft mossy bank and the dreaminess of the world lulled me to sleep. Soon I was tramping along a strange road with a pack on my back. My feet were weary but the cool evening breeze soothed my tired head, and I swung happily down the road until I saw a light streaming through little diamond-shaped panes and heard the sound of singing.

I reached the door and knocked. It was opened by a tall dark man dressed in a coat of claret velvet and breeches of brown doe-skin with a bunch of lace at his throat. The Inn was a low-roofed, half-timbered building with a pleasing lack of symmetry. The light from the log fire streamed through the doorway revealing a symphony of light and shade. The tall man waved me courteously to a seat by the fire, and a big man and a smaller, stout and red-faced, moved along the ingle bench to make room for me.

The room was low and the black oak beams hung just above the tall man's head. There were rushes on the floor and a long oaken table ran the length of the room. Nothing was said for a few minutes; no one seemed curious as to whom I was or how I had reached this out-of-the-way place.

The big man next me half buried his face in his leathern mug as I looked at him and he drank a deep draught. He, too, was dressed in a strange fashion. He wore baggy breeches of coarse cloth, running to below the knees, where his stockings were gathered in with knots of faded ribbon. On his feet were heavy shoes with silver buckles.

His coat was a plum-colored cloth and across his chest was hung a bandolier from which swung on strings a score of cartridges that belonged to the long wheel-locked muskets, that leant against the wall a yard away.

His hat lay on the floor beside him, with feathers curling round the crown above the soft rim. His face was brown and lined, and there was a scar on the right side. This was the man who had been singing as I came in. The song was about a Flanders mare and a long hard road, and it went with the swing of a march.

It was the smaller man who spoke first. "We are glad of another to the party," he said, "for we see by your coat that you are a soldier, though we cannot place you."

"We are all soldiers, and it was of war that we were talking when you came in. We were discussing the merits of the pikemen and the musketeers, for the pike is the queen of weapons. It is not your smelling tubes of iron and the dangling cartridges that will turn the resolute foe. He dare not face a pike, though, and a pike takes no harm from foul weather or any wettings in the crossing of rivers, or in the assaults of 'mosted holds.'

"Heed him not," said the other, interrupting with a voice like a trumpet. "He knows not of what he speaks, and he has been captain of pikemen for a score of years, and will die one. How can a pike kill at a hundred paces? Once I saw with mine own eyes 7,000 Netherlands gathered to their fathers by the musket of the Spaniards, and of the Spanish there were but seven who died. Mayhap it was butcher's work, but it was the musket that made it possible. It is the petronels of the cavalry, the muskets and the fusils of the footmen and the bombards and hoop pieces of the cannonier.. Thus will wars be waged in time to come. In the onslaught or onfall the pike will win its way, but powder and ball will make and mar kingdoms. A double handful of powder, thirty bullets of lead, and six feet of slow match, will bring down crowds. A hog woman in Flanders foretold to me that she saw the sky red as blood with the flame of cannons and her ears were deafened by the noise of the muskets. It was many years from us she said, but it would come, and the smell of powder would foul the wind of France from the English sea to the Alps. There would be cannon that would strike down a man ten score musket shots distant. Cannons would blast walls of stone as the waves dissolve sand. We shall not live to see it, but there will be those who shall."

He reached for his leathern mug, and took a long pull. Then he put his head into the ingle corner, and shut his eyes and was soon snoring heavily.

His companion had done the same some minutes past, so I, too, shut my eyes and rested my head on my arms, for the night was late.

When I awoke I was still on the mossy bank, and as I stirred a rabbit leapt across the patch for safety.

I rose, hoisted my haversack strap over my shoulder and trudged on down the road. It was almost dark and in the dim light I spied a small half-timbered inn under the shelter of two great elms. The light from the cheery fire streamed through the diamond-shaped panes and there was a sound of singing. I knocked at the door and it was opened by a tall, dark man dressed in khaki, who welcomed me in. In the corner were sitting two men, an infantryman and an artilleryman. They moved up for me as I came in. For some moments nothing was said, but they gazed at me now and again over their pewter mugs.

The artilleryman spoke first, addressing his comrade. "You mark my words, it is the artillery that will win this war. It it guns all the time, and more guns. The bayonet and the rifle is all right for attacks, but the great factor in the war is large guns." And he raised his pewter mug, took a long draught, and was soon dozing.

Died From Overdose Of Narcotic Poison

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A verdict of death by misadventure has been found by the jury which investigated the death of Major John Redmond Meredith, son of the Chief Justice of Ontario, found dead while on leave from Shorncliffe at the Regent Palace Hotel Saturday.

Captain William McBrien said he and the deceased arrived in England last June. Deceased suffered insomnia and derived much benefit from a certain preparation Both were very anxious to go to France. Deceased at his hotel one Saturday told witness he intended to have a bath and go to bed as he was not feeling well. When witness returned to the room they shared, he thought the deceased was asleep. "After a time the stillness got on my nerves," continued witness. "I walked to the bed and put my hand on deceased's forehead. It was warm and I thought myself foolish and returned to my own bed. I later got up to turn up the light and found deceased dead."

Captain Joseph Jordan of the Medicals, said: "Before leaving Canada he occasionally gave deceased bromide for sleeplessness. Doctor Vernon, of Harley street, said death was due to an over-dose of narcotic poison, of which anybody could get as much as he wished with a prescription. The coroner remarked it was very dangerous to hand out prescriptions without limiting the amount a patient could get.

25TH CHILD WILL DO BETTER NOW.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—Married three times, the father of 25 children, of whom 21 are still living, declared to Judge Choquet that his 14-year-old son, accused of running away from home, was the only member of the family to go wrong. The 25th child promised to do better, and was allowed to go home with his father.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

I have been congratulating the residents of Ashburnham on their well-lighted main street, but on a trip over to the East side last evening in my car I saw where the addition of one more light would place the lighting of the street beyond criticism, for the present at least. I refer to that part of Hunter Street, just opposite the mill, which is quite dark yet as the bend in the street does not allow the light at the corner of Burnham Street to be of much benefit to this particular spot.

If the Commission and Ald. Evans could only rectify this part of the street, those who use it a great deal would be much benefitted.

An Old East City Resident.

"THE ENFORCING OF LAW."

Mr. Editor.

Sir,—As one interested in "The Ontario Temperance Act," and its enforcement, I am wondering whether the Temperance people of the city are falling down on their job.

From what we see in the "Daily Press," re Police records, it is a fact that very considerable liquor is passing back and forth to individuals and places of public resort. Moreover, men are coming home to their families drunk, and from your article in last night's Examiner re "Auto Load of Whiskey from Hastings," certainly there are law-breakers engaged in the night running of bringing in liquor.

In view of these things I wonder if the law-abiding people of this city are backing up the Government in the enforcement of this Act, as they should? If we fail now this very lack of vigilance will come back on us as a boomerang when the vote for repeal is brought on later.

Where is our 'City Temperance Society' and the 'Representatives of the Committee of One Hundred?"

Have we taken it for granted that the "Whiskey Business" is dead? If so it is moonshine. Why not fuller publicity given in the press to those who are breaking the laws, and the name of any hotel-keeper published who is charged with breaking the laws? Is our City Inspector being stirred up and backed up to do his duty in this city by the moral force of public opinion, and are we commending and supporting Chief Thompson in his efforts to make effective the law of the Government and people of this Province?

Let in the light on the ways of evil doers and let us have a great and vigorous enforcement of this law, as the people have a right to expect.

Yours truly,

"One Interested."

MISS HELEN A NEW FACE FOR EXAMINER READERS

Miss Helen, is a new face to Examiner readers. She appears to-day for the first time, and announces her coming in a short letter, that is the first of many to follow. With each letter there is a catchy picture, in which Helen is the central figure, and the series will be continued through the year 1917 on Friday of each week. Her messages are chatty talks, written to a friend and incidentally in them she refers to her appreciation of the service and goods she gets from Harry Zacks, furniture and house furnishing store.

The Examiner is confident that the series will be followed with interest by a large circle of readers.

Children Will Be Taken Care Of

Arrangements have been made with a farmer in Belmont township to care for the wife and five children of George Emery. At first it was proposed to make the children wards of the Children's Aid Society, but as Emery has shown some inclination to provide a proper home for them, this course was not adopted. The case was heard in Havelock before County Police Magistrate Langley. Mr. C. A. G. Spence, inspector, appeared for the Society.

LAST HARRIMAN GEM IS RECOVERED

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The last of the gems composing the $65,000 collection stolen from Mrs E. H. Harriman was recovered when it was turned over to the police by a Pennsylvania woman. She, the police learned, purchased the diamond said to have been valued at $10,000, without knowing it had been stolen or ever was the property of Mrs. Harriman. She paid $1,800 for it, making the purchase in September from a Broadway jeweller while she was in this city on a shopping trip, it is said.

It was not until several weeks later that the police received a report from Mrs. Harriman that her jewelry had been stolen from the vault of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, at No. 475 Fifth avenue. Eventually the police arrested Arthur J. Daggett, an employe of the trust company, accusing him of theft. Daggett's brother also was arrested, accused of having aided in the sale of a ruby worth more than $15,000.

On information supplied by Arthur Daggett the police traced the diamond through the person to whom Arthur Daggett sold it. They learned it had been sold several times before finally it went into the Pennsylvania woman's possession. She willingly gave the gem to the police, asserting, however, that she would endeavor to recover the money she paid for it from the jeweler from whom she made the purchase.

Miss Dell Bascicocco, of Cincinnati, who was injured in an automobile accident, has been unconscious for three weeks.

The Geisha A Triumph

History repeated itself at the Grand Opera House last night when under the direction of Mr R. J. Devey the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society scored a most gratifying success in a sparkling presentation of Sidney Jones' comic opera, "The Geisha". Six years ago in connection with the Earl Gray competition an amateur company directed by Mr. Devey delighted Peterborough by producing this operatic gem and last night Mr. Devey showed his ability to borrow a term from the sporting page, to come back. Few of the original company were in last night's caste but it speaks highly for the efficiency of the director's training efforts that the success of half a dozen years ago should be repeated.

In spite of a chain of misadventure illness among members of the caste and other difficulties that interfered with rehearsals, the presentation last night was carried through smoothly and artistically. A splendid list of principals and a well trained chorus, made the most out of the humour of night. Mr. Devey showed his ability, delightful music. The costumes had been carefully looked after and the scenic investiture was adequate. Altogether the production was a most enjoyable one and the big audience enjoyed every moment of it judging by the storms of applause.

Miss Clara Horne of Toronto who sang the part of "O Mimosa San" the chief Geisha scored heavily, showing splendid histrionic ability as well as a voice of rare sweetness and purity. Her song numbers, notably "The Amorous Gold Fish", "A Geisha's Life", and "The Jewel of Asia" were delightfully sung and rapturously received. The clearness of her enunciation was a particularly pleasing feature of her singing.

To Miss Lila Waterman fell the important part of Molly Seamore and Miss Waterman's splendid work showed that the choice was a happy one. She acted the role most effectively and won many laurels by her song numbers, "The Interfering Parrot", "Chon Kina" and "The Toy Monkey" being delightfully rendered. Miss Annie Bickerteth was charming as Juliette Dramant giving a finished portrayal of the part. Miss Leila Smythe was natural and pleasing as Lady Constance Wynne, playing the role with a charming ease. Miss Agnes Hornfield as Nami, the Misses Lillian Melton, Ethel Sheppard, Amy Rathbone and Annie Pollard, as the Geisha girls and the Misses Dolly Evans, Grace Evans and Margaret Rae as the English visitors were all successful in their roles.

Mr. Fred Hartshorn, who did such splendid work in San Toy last season scored another triumph as Reginald Farifax last night. He was nonchalant and free from awkardness in his acting while his singing was delightful. His number, "Star of my Soul" in the second act was one of the big things of the night and was enthusiastically encored while his rendition of the rollicking nautical song, "Jack's the Boy" was another gem. Mr. William H. Barry gave a masterly interpretation of the role of the pompous marquis Imari, making the most out of a part full of possibilities. The comedy role of Wun-hi was well handled by Mr. Vernon Dredge, whose pranks and "pigeon" English kept the audience amused. His duet with Miss Bickersteth in the second act was cleverly given. Mr. James Liddell was likable and effective as Dick Cunningham, displaying a very pleasing voice while Mr. C. A. G. Spence as Takemine, sergeant of the Governor's Guard, was very amusing in the auction scene. Mr. Harold Lee who was in the caste of the Geisha in 1910 was captain of the Guard and his rich tenor voice was admirably displayed in the chorus "Pearl of the Radiant Eastern Sea" near the close of the first act. Messrs. Cyril Devey, Alf. Marshall and Dick Runnells were effective as the English officers.

Any notice of last night's success would be incomplete without a tribute to the splendid singing of the chorus. The ensemble numbers were delightfully rendered, the chorus of lamentation in the first act, the "Happy Japan" chorus and the finale of the first and second acts being particularly enjoyable. There is volume and balance to the work of the chorus and Mr. Devey is to be congratulated upon his splendid material and the use he has made of it throughout.

A pleasing feature was the fact that the Governor's Guards were all returned soldiers, the audience showing their appreciation by hearty applause.

The presentation was under the auspices and in aid of the Peterborough Progressive Club and will be repeated to-night. By all means don't fail to see it. "The Geisha" is thoroughly up to the Devey standard.

The caste and chorus were as follows:

Printers Require 20 Per Cent. Increase From County Council

Mr. J. G. Keefer, of the Norwood Register, and Mr. T. P. Lancaster, of the Havelock Standard, brought home to the County Council this morning a realization of the high price of newsprint. Their offices print the council minutes, announcements and similar matter, and because paper has increased 300 per cent. in price, they asked for an advance of 20 per cent. over their existing contracts with the county.

Reeve Anderson alluded to the pulp wood in Burleigh, suggesting that the county might install a mill and turn out its own paper. Of course it was only a facetious reference.

Mr. Lancaster stated that prices are going up steadily, and there is no assurance as to where they will stop. Just this week one kind of writing paper had advanced from 17c to 21c. The manufacturers were not eager to offer quotations.

Mr. McIntosh moved, seconded by Mr. Northey, that no action be taken with the request.

It was handed over to the 1917 Council for consideration, when next year's printing is being arranged for.

INQUEST HAS BEEN ADJOURNED

Body of Lorus Smith Was Removed to Havelock Last Evening—Many Floral Tributes

Last evening the jury empanelled to enquire into the death of Lorus Smith, met in Comstock's undertaking parlours. After viewing the remains, an adjournment was made until Tuesday evening next, when further enquiry will be made respecting the fatality. The twin brother of the deceased was present last evening. He bore a striking resemblance to the brother who, some time early Thursday morning, was asphyxiated while asleep in his bedroom at 336 Water Street.

The following is the jury: Messrs. J. Maher (foreman), J. Drain, J. Deicher, J. Picard, C. Woods, J. P. Bryson, S. Houlihan, N. Andrews, M. McIntyre, G. Evans, and J. Fitzsimmons.

Coroner Dr. Greer summoned the jury to appear Tuesday evening next in the Council Chamber at eight o'clock.

The body was taken to Havelock, where the parents reside. The death of Lorus Smith has occasioned deep regret at the Empress Hotel, where the deceased was employed as a bell-boy. Many beautiful floral gifts were sent by friends of the deceased, including a cross from the management of the hotel, a wreath from his fellow-employees, and an anchor from the guests.

ACCUSED ACTRESS GETS CHURCH AID

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The Social Service Bureau connected with the Church of the Ascension intervened to aid Miss Elizabeth Scanlan, arrested last Saturday after the police, accusing her as a shoplifter recovered property worth more than $25,000 from an apartment she occupied in West Sixty-ninth street, near Central Park West.

As a result of the interest of the church workers the woman's examination again was postponed being set for this afternoon. The church organization, it was announced had decided to aid the young woman after being informed she was not responsible for the alleged acts that caused her arrest. The league arranged to provide counsel for the young woman, who is well known as a motion picture actress and who lived at the house where she was arrested under the name of Miss Marion Clark.

The police announced that representatives of eighteen department stores had identified articles found in the prisoner's apartment. At the same time they set in motion an investigation to determine the contents of trunks held in the name of Miss Marion Clark in storage warehouses in Minneapolis, Minn., and Philadelphia, Pa.

WHERE "UNCLE SAM" GOT HIS NICKNAME

A nickname is not always applied to a person, but sometimes to nations. In fact nearly every nation has some sort of a nickname. Two of the most important examples are England and the United States.

For many generations England has been nicknamed "John Bull." "John Bull" means beefy, brawny and obstinate. It is a popular personification of the English people. He is represented as a bluff, corpulent, irascible old fellow, clad in leather breeches and top boots, and carrying a stout oaken cudgel. The nickname is derived from Dr. Arbuthnot's satire entitled "The History of John Bull," a political skit on the subject of the Spanish succession, first published in 1712 and afterwards reprinted complete in Pope's "Miscellany" in 1782.

Arbuthnot thus describes John Bull: "In the main he was an honest, plain dealing fellow, choleric, bold and of very inconstant temper. Very apt to quarrel with his best friends, especially if they pretended to govern him. If you flattered him you might lead him as a child."

But with no less distinction is "Uncle Sam" the type of an American, and the fatelary genius of the United States. The phrase "Uncle Sam" arose during the war of 1812. An army contractor named Elbert Anderson had a storeyard at a small town on the Hudson. A government inspector named Samuel Wilson, who was always called "Uncle Sam," superintended the examination of the supplies, and when they were passed each cask, box or package was marked "E. A.—U. S.," the initials of the contractor and of the United States. The man whose duty it was to mark the casks being asked what the letters meant, replied that they stood for Elbert Anderson and "Uncle Sam."

The story was retold, printed and spread throughout the army and the country.

MEDICAL RESPECTS OF PREPAREDNESS

16,000,000 Pupils Suffer from Physical Defects Which May be Amenable to Training

NEED TO LEARN OBEDIENCE

MILITARY DISCIPLINE ALSO FOSTERS SELF-RESTRAINT AND SELF-SACRIFICE, A PHYSICIAN WRITES.

The Medical Record discusses the question of universal military education chiefly from the viewpoint of it medical aspect. The statement made in its current issue, quoting from a recent work of Dr. Lucien Howe, that three-quarters of the 20,000,000 pupils in the United States, suffer from physical defects that require attention and menace health. It is also pointed out that the American boy lacks defesence to his elders and also lacks self-restraint and self-sacrifice.

Military discipline will correct these faults, in the opinion of the writer, as well as teach obedience to American citizens.

"In all the great amount of discussion which has been going on about 'preparedness' and compulsory military service or education," says the writer, "the arguments have largely centred around the legality of the procedure, and the possibility of the development of a militaristic party which would endeavor to force the country into war. Advantages which would accrue to the individual in the way of physical and mental development have been mentioned, but not we think, with sufficient emphasis.

"While this country may excel in a competition of trained athletes, or in certain kinds of mental ingenuity or shrewdness, it is certain that the average man is far from being a picture of perfect physical development, and the lack of self control and the extreme contempt for the law of the American have become proverbial. A casual inspection of the crowds on the streets of any of our large cities will reveal pale, under-nourished, and poorly developed youths, and gaudy, flabby men in large numbers, and will convince the open-minded observer of the desirability for the individual of some form of regular physical training. That the country bred moreover, are not greatly superior to those brought up in the city has been the experience of most military men who have had occasion to handle large numbers of troops.

"In addition to this physical handicap the country is cursed with the presence of a very large group who confusing liberty and license, confess allegiance to no constituted authority. These individuals demand from society every protection and the opportunity for material gain but deny the right of that society to exact any return. It is particularly in respect to these points that Dr. Lucien Howe develops his discussion in his recent book on Universal Military Education and Service. He points out the position of the United States in world politics and our need for adequate protection and outlines briefly the Swiss and the Australian systems and their applicability to this country.

"The many advantages of universal military education to the nation are so evident as to need little discussion, and he devotes most of his attention to the development of his chief argument, the advantage of such education to the individual. Education should include the development of the pupil in at least four different directions—health, knowledge, character and efficiency. He points out that of twenty million pupils in this country about three fourths have physical defects sufficiently grave to require attention and seriously to threaten their health. Partly as a result of this poor start the standard of health of the average American is so low that over 50 per cent. of the applicants for the army and the navy were rejected for physical disabilities in 1914, and in the following year less than 10 per cent. of the applicants for the Marine Corps were found to be physically fit.

"Most certainly any system of military training would necessarily include gymnastic exercises and these regularly performed and accompanied by the regular routine physical examinations would inevitably rapidly raise the standard of the physical health of our youth. In the matter of knowledge America does not rank so low as she does in military strength yet there is still room for improvement. In all countries the percentage of illiterates is much less in the army than in the civilian population and in Germany the most militaristic nation of our times there is but one illiterate for every 385 in the continental United States.

"In its effects on character and efficiency a military training would have no less striking and important results. The lack of deference shown by the American boy to his elders is notorious and parallels his lack of self-restraint and self-sacrifice, qualities out of which character is developed. As logical consequences of our slackness in early training America stands high among the nations in intemperance, divorce, disobedience to law and crime. The most sure way of correcting these fundamental faults in our youth is shown to be some form of military discipline.

"Universal military training would also provide trade instruction for the youth and thus increase his efficiency as a unit in the country's productive strength. The girl also would receive better prepared to share in governmental responsibilities and in the education of the young. The attitude of the so-called 'pacifists' and their apparent number afford strong support to the disgraceful accusation that many Americans rank low in loyalty and in readiness to sacrifice personal interest to the good of the country.

"The one great lesson taught by military service is the one great lesson most needed by the citizens of the country—obedience. The attitude of the 'anti-preparedness' adherents is strongly reminding of that of the anti-vivisectionists, who are always perfectly ready to receive the benefit of any medical progress which is founded directly on animal experimentation, but who from either a silly sentimentality or gross ignorance, deny the right of the profession to use the means by which such knowledge is obtained. It is a sad commentary on the condition of things in the United States that such a book as that of Howe's should be necessary. It is a hopeful sign for the future that such a book has been produced."

EGGS DROP ON BOYCOTT

New York Housewives Stop Buying Eggs and Prices Fall.

NEW YRK, Dec. 1.—Between 25,000 and 35,000 housewives started the egg boycott in Greater New York yesterday. As a result, the retailer sold all grades 2 cents cheaper a dozen.

When the New York Mercantile Exchange closed yesterday the wholesale price had dropped on April storage eggs from 2 to 2 1-2 cents a dozen.

Uptown retailers have sent out word that they will not real in April storage eggs unless they can be sold at 35 cents a dozen. This is the figure that investigators say should be the legitimate price for the storage product.

The New York City housewife, in taking the initiative in the egg boycott, has made it a national movement. Word comes from all over the country that boycotts are being inaugurated, not only against eggs, but against butter and turkeys.

TRAINED FOR MOTHERHOOD.

Three Million Details to Develop Better Wifes and Mothers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The will of Mrs. Lizzie M. Palmer, widow of United States Senator Palmer, filed recently, provides for a form of benefaction hitherto wholly unknown.

Mrs. Palmer left an estate of $4,000,000, and of this she directs that $3,000,000 be used to establish and maintain an institution "where girls and young women of the age of ten and more can be trained and developed with special reference to fitting them mentally, morally, physically and religiously for the discharge of the functions and services of wifehood and motherhood and in the management, supervisson and inspiration of homes."

The institution on which the aged woman set her heart shall be established, she specifies, in Detroit, or Greenfield Township, Mich., and is to be known as the Merrill-Palmer Motherhood and Home Training School. Girls unable or unwilling to pay are to be trained free of cost, she directs.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

JOHN L. SULLIVAN WILL GET BACK HIS OLD GOLD MEDAL

Jack Sheehan, the Boston referee, displayed a gold medal at the White-Britton fight in Boston last week:

"I picked this up in an old gold shop the other day," said Sheehan. Just take a peek at it. The medal here this inscription: John L. Sullivan, twenty years champion of the world, presented by the Metropolitan Athletic Club, of Columbus, O., Jan. 15, 1893."

"I'm going to send it to the old boy because I am sure that he will want to keep it now that it has been recovered after all these years. I don't know how it got out of his possession, but you know that John L. was a careless fellow in his youth. I saw the thing in an old shop so I went in and bought it, so that Sullivan can come into its possession again. I know nothing of its history."

CALL HIM SLACKER DARCY NOW

What will the old folks at home think of their pet, "Slacker" Darcy now? Few men have been as popular in Australia as the young black smith. While there has been an undercurrent of dissatisfaction among the mothers of other youngsters who went to the trenches, for the most part Darcy has been an idol in his own country. Now that he has deliberately shirked when a duty due to his country faced him, it will be interesting to read what men like W. W. Cowan and Sidney Ellison will say of their pride and joy. Darcy has surely taken their breath away with his sudden skipping off to America with a whole hide.

FREDDIE TAKING NO CHANCES.

Freddie Welsh isn't taking chances with being out of condition on next Thursday night. He raced back to New York from Montreal on Friday night after his bout with Eddie Wallace and repaired to Douglaston Inn to work for the Dundee bout. Welsh can't possibly be in the condition for this fight that made his bout with Bonny Leonard the surprise of the year. If Dundee ever had an opportunity this will be his chance. Welsh is carrying a load of extra weight just now, and is bound to be slower than is usual with him.

PROPOSE TO PLAY TENNIS ON SKATES

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Tennis on ice may become a popular sport if the idea of Fred Alexander, the noted tennis player bear fruit. An exhibition game of doubles is planned by Mr. Alexander to occur some time in December at the Ice Skating Palace. Well-known players will take part.

None but the best skaters could hope to play the game. It requires more prompt and decisive action even than hockey, and hockey is the most exacting of all ice sports so far as surefooted, quick-turning and speedy skating is concerned. Further, the players must be expert at handling a racquet, for unless they are familiar with the different strokes and the part the feet play in making these strokes they are certain to come a cropper.

Five of six years ago one tennis match on ice was played, and it aroused a great deal of interest. At the time there was much talk of forming an ice tennis matches throughout the Winter. But it was late in the season when Mr. Alexander conceived the idea, and it was probably because of this that the proposed tourney never materialized. Ever since Mr. Alexander has been nursing the idea. He is sanguine that the coming match will lead to the forming of a tennis tournament on ice this Winter.

The same rules will govern the game as govern lawn tennis. The court will be laid out in black paint on the ice surface, but because of the additional height skates give a player, it is probable that the net will be raised somewhat.

It may be figured that the ball would have a tendency to skid on the ice rather than bound, but this skidding does not obtain to any more pronounced degree, it is said, than in play on the board floors in the armories and clubs. The players are able to employ all the cuts known to the outdoor game.

NO MARK OF INSANITY TO LEAVE ALL TO WIFE

WINDSOR, Dec. 1.—John Martin, a former Windsor Alderman, did not succeed in his attempt yesterday to prevent the will of his brother, Joseph Martin, a wealthy Essex county farmer, from being probated. Mr. Justice Middleton, sitting at Sandwich, made an order on application of Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, widow of Joseph Martin, to have the will set for probate.

John Martin, in contesting the will, alleged that his brother was mentally deranged when he bequeathed his entire estate, valued at $25,000, to his wife. Mr. Justice Middleton found there was no testimony to show that Joseph Martin was of unsound mind when he left his property to her. Costs are assessed against the plaintiff.

HUDDLED ON DERELICT FOR 23 DAYS

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The story of the rescue in mid-ocean of the captain and five men of a British schooner after they had suffered twenty-three days of hardship on their waterlogged vessel was told by the officers of the rescue ship, the American oil tanker Gold Shell, which reached this port yesterday. Her arrival here marked the end of a six months' voyage, during which she struck a mine in the war zone and was nearly sunk.

The shipwrecked vessel was the schoner Arthur H. Wight of St. John's, Nfld., Captain Diamond, bound from Alicante, Spain, to her home port with salt.

According to Captain Hayes of the Gold Shell his lookout sighted distress signals on a low-lying hulk in latitude 42.47 and longitude 56.38 on the morning of November 28. Although a heavy sea was running a boat was sent over to the side of the distressed vessel.

The rescuers found the schooner waterlogged, the bulwarks, deckhouses and lifeboats swept away and the sails and upper spars gone. In the shelter of the mainmast the captain and crew were huddled exhausted. The rescuers set fire to the schooner to prevent her from being a menace to navigation.

FINANCIERS CAN'T STOP WAR.

War Would Proceed Without United States Loans.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—"The financiers of Europe couldn't prevent the war. The financiers of America have no foolish idea that they can stop it."

One of the biggest bankers in the United States gave this as an answer to reports that Wall Street is behind he present peace talk in America.

"What could we do to stop the war, stop lending money?" asked the banker. "Germany hasn't borrowed any money, and although it is a puzzle to me how she is financing herself, she is doing it somehow. One thing is true, apparently, and that is that Germany still has the money with which she began. On the other hand, the allies still have their own funds. They've been fighting on borrowed capital, and would still have their own capital to fall back on if United States loans were shut off."

EXISTENCE OF THE NATION GIVEN AS A BASIS OF GERMANY'S NEW PEACE BID

Imperial German Chancellor Makes Another Speech Outlining the Terms Sought—Ready to End the War, But Unbeaten—Guarantees For the Future Demanded in Speech Advocating the Man Power Bill.

NO TRANSLANTIC IMPORTS

BERLIN, December 2.—In an address to the Reichstag introducing the Man Power bill the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, again announced that Germany was ready to end the war by a peace guaranteeing the existence and future of the nation.

"The war continues, with its destructive forces," the Chancellor said. "Accordingly, our enemies desire it. They celebrated the past summer as a period of victory. But did they obtain what they wanted?

"Our lines are unbroken and Roumania, through which a great change of events was expected, is now atoning for what she did. God has helped us up to the present, He will help us further.

"The almost superhuman heroism of our troops, which cannot be expressed in words or thanks, and our clear conscience—since we, the first and only ones, were ready and are ready to end the war by a peace guaranteeing our existence and our future—they give us moral right to such confidence.

"But, gentlemen, this right ought not to make us forget duty. Our enemies do not yet desire peace. They have superior numbers at their command, and almost the whole world delivers war material to them."

The Chancellor urged the necessity to do everything in Germany's power in order to manufacture the necessary war material, saying:—"Hands that are idle assist the enemy."

The Man Power bill, he continued, had been discussed with the interested trades and in the Reichstag Main Committee, and was in harmony with the patriotic spirit shown by the whole nation since the beginning of the war.

PROVIDING NECESSARY MATERIALS.

"On behalf of the confederate governments," the Chancellor continued, "I ask you to assist in the work which will bring us new strength and guide us toward victory and peace."

The War Minister, Lieutenant General von Stein, called attention to the paramount role of war materials during the present conflict. He said the heroism of the troops at the front imposed upon every German at home the necessity of providing the requisite materials, and added:—

"The enemy has suffered appalling losses from our artillery. For a long time a very energetic French general stood opposite my sector. We found on prisoners and on the dead documents which mostly were incomprehensible to us. From them we learned how many death sentences were passed by the general on his own soldiers.

"At the time of our victorious attack on the much talked of wire hedge at Thiepval, behind which our machine guns were placed, the order was given:—'whoever retreats will be shot.' At the time of the attack on the heights south of Avricourt soldiers captured there stated they had received the order:—'Every one who retreats will be shot.'

"To use such an order is incomprehensible. The heroism and sense of duty of our soldiers justify our confidence that they will never be found wanting, even when fighting against numerically superior forces."

Dr. Helfferich, Minister of the Interior, said:—"The home army and field army in this war join hands for an indissoluble union. Underneath the German soil are rich treasures, but they must be lifted to the daylight."

STRIPPING BIG PLANTS OF THEIR MACHINERY

Germans Raid Belgium Factories and Ship Machines to Germany—100,000 Are Deported—U. S. Minister Reports Deportations Are at the Rate of 3,000 a Week.

PARIS, December 2.—The Belgian Government at Havre states it has received the information that the Germans have ordered suspended the work of Campine and have caused a stoppage of work in other industries in the Belgian district. The workers, thus deprived of their occupation, it is said, have been classed among the "unemployed," and have been deported with others for service in Germany.

The Germans, according to information received by the Belgian officials, have just dismantled the Meeus distillery and other establishments of the same kind at Wieneghem. The engines and machines were taken to Germany. Systematic raids on machine tools are said to have been resumed at Cockerill and Seraing, where quantities were seized and shipped to Germany.

In the communes of Luxemburg Province it is declared employed men have been deprived of their usual occupations of mending public roads. The Germans ordered this work stopped, and, treating the men thus made idle as "unemployed," it is asserted they gave them the alternative of deportation or voluntary engagement to work in Germany. The pretext given for the stoppage of work in Belgian mines and the deportation of the miners was that "miners are needed in Germany."

DEPORTING 3,000 A WEEK.

WASHINGTON, December 2.—More than 100,000 Belgians have been deported from Belgium by German military authorities, according to information presented to the State Department yesterday by Minister Havenith.

Deportations, the Minister said, are continuing at the rate of 3,000 a week, and are especially severe among railroad workers taken to man military roads now being laid. Some have been taken into the occupied part of northern France and some into Germany itself.

Burgomesters, he said, and other city and village officials, were ordered to supply lists of workers, whether unemployed or not, and those refusing were thrown into jail.

The United States, the Minister said, was being looked to by the Belgians to secure an amelioration of the situation.

Minister Havenith said he had not received confirmation of reports from abroad that King Albert had sent an autograph letter to neutrals on the subject.

CATTLE MARKETS

Cattle trade in the Toronto markets continues strong and active, with a keen demand particularly for anything of good to choice quality in the butcher line. Canners, cutters and fat cows also met a good steady demand all through the week at steady prices. The bulk of the receipts included a large proportion of common stuff, thin, rough steers and heifers, and common light eastern stockers, for which the market slackened off during the latter part of the week, and prices in this class inclined easier, while for all the choice butcher cattle available the tendency was towards firmer prices. With cool sharp weather and a better average quality of cattle offering, prospects are fair for a good, active, strong market for the Christmas cattle trade for the first two or three weeks.

Sheep and lambs continue strong a few lots of black-faced lambs selling at the end of the week up to $11.80.

Hogs are firm, with prices firmer and higher at the end of the week than at the beginning.

CATTLE RECEIPTS.

Toronto Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 713 cars with 10,232 cattle, 1,020 calves, 16,082 hogs, 6,184 sheep and lambs, and 599 horses.

City Cattle Market—92 cars, with 1,244 cattle, 902 sheep and lambs, 501 hogs and 35 calves.

No Let-up in the Terrific Offensive Launched by the Czar's Legions in Dobrudja and Bukowina

A SERIOUS MENACE

Special to Examiner:

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Russia is striking with a giant's force, blows which it is hoped will smash the Teutonic ring of steel gripping Rumania. Dispatches to-day indicated no let up in the terrific offensive launched by the Czar's legions in Dodrudja and southwest Bukowina.

The flanking movement directed at the Jablonitza pass is the most serious menace to German positions in Rumania.

Surrender of the Austro-German forces at Kirlibaba to-day would not be surprising in view of Russian claims of domination of this important strategic position and railroad centre.

More Effective Blockade Needed Says Beresford

Admiral Beresford Declares New Strategy and Tactics Are Necessary—Enemy Subs. Expected Along Every British Trade Route

RESOLUTION ADOPTED

LONDON, Dec. 2.—"We are in a position of unparalleled gravity," said Admiral Baron Beresford in an address yesterday at a meeting to support a stronger naval policy. "The crisis of the war is now.

"Since enemy submarines have transferred their activities from the headlands and shallow waters to the blue sea, the menace requires new strategy and new tactics to deal with it, but so far as definite and systematic methods have been taken for suppressing the menace.

"The Germans are now going to send submarines to the Pacific, and to wherever British trade routes are."

Baron Beresford advocated continual aerial attacks on the German base at Zeebrugge and the arming of merchantmen, and continued:

"It is a most unsatisfactory state of affairs. Thousands of tons of food which were waiting to come to England have been diverted to Germany."

The meeting adopted a resolution calling for a more effective blockade and for more efficient measures to deal with the submarine question.

TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT EASILY AND QUICKLY

If you are overstout the cause of your overstoutness is lack of oxygen carrying power in the blood and faulty assimilation of food. Too little is being made into the harder tissue of muscle and too much into little globules of fat. Therefore you should correct the maldssimilation and increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. To do this, go to any good druggist and get oil of orlieve, only sold in original packages and in capsule form, and take one capsule after each meal and one at bedtime till your weight is reduced to what it should be on all parts of the body. The effect of oil of orlieve in capsule form is remarkable as a weight reducer and it is perfectly safe.—E. J. T.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00 postal note or money order. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

Armistice Has Been Effected

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Dec. 2.—An armistice has been affected between the Allied troops and Greek reservists at Athens.

A Reuter despatch from the Greek capital to-day asserted that King Constantine had agreed to the delivery of six mountain batteries to the Allies.

In return it is said, Admiral Fournet agreed to withdraw Allied troops from the city, pending a reference of the agreement to the Allied Government. London regarded this despatch as indicating a clearing up in an admittedly tense situation.

Discoloured or Spotty Skin Easily Peeled Off

The discoloring or roughening to which many skins are subject at this season may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the discolored skin; Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing chaps, blotches, pimples, freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process itself doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather, worry or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, one ounce dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvelous transformation.

"Could I only have music on my own terms, . . . whenever I wished."
—EMERSON

If Emerson Lived Today

IF Emerson lived today he could sit in his study at Concord and realize his wish to have music on his own terms whenever the spirit moved him.

One cannot imagine Emerson sitting in his study listening to a talking machine, but one can readily believe that Emerson would have listened with delight to Edison's new invention, which the New York Globe refers to as "the phonograph with a soul."

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul"

THIS new invention marks the achievement by Thomas A. Edison of his ambition to produce an instrument which would Re-create all forms of music so perfectly that the Re-Creation could not be detected from the living artist's voice—or instrumental performance.

Great artists have appeared in public and have sung—or played—in direct comparison with Edison's Re-Creation of their work.

More than 200,000 music lovers and the music critics of more than 200 of America's leading newspapers have heard and seen these astounding tests, and one and all concede without reservation that the New Edison's Re-Creation of an artist's work positively cannot be detected from the artist's actual performance.

Will there be real music in your home at Christmas?

A TALKING machine cannot give you real music. It gives you only a hollow imitation.

The New Edison is not a talking machine. The New York Tribune says of it that "Edison has snared the soul of music."

It will bring into your home at Christmas and every other day of the year the literally Re-created art of the world's greatest artists.

We want you to hear this wonderful new invention in our store at your earliest opportunity.

There is no obligation to buy. We merely want you to hear "the phonograph with a soul."

Dr. Mainprize Advises Iron For a Run-Down System

Will Make You 100% Stronger In a Few Days

Dr. Mainprize of Saskatchewan, advises people who are weak, run-down, anaemic and nervous to start to-day to strengthen themselves by taking iron for their blood. It has always been an understood fact that iron was an excellent remedy for the blood, but owing to its constipating, nauseating effect it has been eliminated from use. Doctors have overcome this by combining the iron with phosphorus which forms a new iron and at the same time the phosphorus used acts as one of the greatest nerve tonics known to medical science. You now have what is known to your druggist as Bonimel Phosphorus with Iron. Dr. Mainprize finds this tonic to be four fold in action. It charges the system with new blood, stronger nerves, greater strength and a new Digestion. Your stomach will now be ready for good, big hearty meals that will be thoroughly digested. Start to-day and take Bonimel Phosphorus with Iron if you are pale, weak, tired, run down, anaemic, nervous, etc., and in ten days you will be full of pep, bright, vigorous, alert, radiating the glow of happiness. Stop taking all sorts of worthless patent medicines, cheap laxatives, for what you want is new kidney impulses, stomach pains, rheumatism, etc. What you want is good strong pure blood and strong nerves, making your system immune to all these everyday complaints.

Bonimel Phosphorus with Iron, as spoken of here, does not contain one atom of arsenic or strychnine, which is found so harmful in almost every tonic. Arsenic and strychnine act only as a temporary stimulant, making you feel better only for the time you are taking them; while Bonimel Phosphorus with Iron goes to the root of the trouble, builds you up, strengthens your nerves, giving you a new lease of life. It is dispensed only by one druggist in each city. Agent for Peterborough is F. O. Weber, Charlotte Street.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

CHAPTER VII.

Even in the days of his first, forced marches toward fortune, when besides his unshakable plunger's nerve he stood almost without an asset, Hamilton Burton's policy had been that the limelight paid, and as he had mounted from moderate success into the millionaire class, and thence into the division rated in a plurality of millions, he had always adhered to the plan of letting nothing which reflected his personality fall below the standards of superlative worth and cost.

At first, he thought of the conspicuousness of wealth as a credential tending to enlarge the scope and the standing of its possessor. In a city whose public is surfeited with a show of splendor, the man who would find himself undescored must pitch such conspicuousness to a scale of rajah like magnificence.

With thoroughness born of gigantic gambling instinct Hamilton Burton directed his policy of the outward show and trappings of wealth through every artery of his life and the lives of his family. Yet because his taste was discriminating and sound, he was able to combine the maximum effect of expenditure with the simplicity of the artistic and to shun the pitfall of the offensive.

In those earlier days when the family was fresh from the frugality of the hills, its elder members had constantly been appalled by the youth's extravagance. Yet, even then, he had overruled them with an autocratic assurance which knew no doubt. It had not at first been easy for the gentle mother, whose hands were red from decades of tub and dishpan, and the father whose fingers had gripped the plow, to adapt themselves to the idle and effortless regime of this new order.

It had for a long time been impossible for them to escape the fear of a crash in which all this iridescent and artificial seeming must collapse. But his attitude remained unaltered. "I do not mean to let money be my master," he had obstinately reiterated. "To me it shall be slave. Money conquers the man who fears it. It is an insolent, inanimate underling which if not treated with contempt becomes a tyrant. Scorn it and it serves you blindly. I must seem a rich man before I can become one. It is my wish that my family appear the family of a rich man. Economies that are apparent are confession of failure."

In the first chapters they protested, but Ham swept their protests intolerantly aside, and as the years went on he piled miracle upon miracle until every promise of his unsupported egotism had become an accomplished and undeniable reality. Then they ceased to fear and trusted implicitly in the star that led him. Gradually they yielded to the blandishments of the new life and drifted pleasantly before the breezes of luxury. The man who had been a bearded and Calvanistic countryman for almost a half-century became in less than a decade an ease loving and slothful old gentleman, dapper of appearance, rosy of face, and inclining toward embonpoint.

Now it is fundamentally written in the edicts of Truth that a man may go forward or back, and if his hands hang idle at his sides, he will not advance. Thomas Standish Burton was born to buffet the storms of his mountains, and as long as he followed his destiny he could look his fellow man in the face with the level eyes of independence. Within his limitations, he could think wholesomely and soundly. But here he was a different man, a Samson shorn, and the things which he had first contemptuously waved aside or accepted with a growl in his throat, he now welcomed. The hard brown face was rounded and pink and where there had been rawhide muscles on his torso there was now soft and fatty flesh; for Tom Burton whom men had accounted a giant of immovable resolution back there among the forests, was in these days a gentleman, and wore a gardenia or a carnation in his lapel. It was not originally his fault. The process of becoming a gentleman had pained and irked him, but he had a masterful son who could not afford that his father should wear a shaggy bark, and that masterful son had been suffocating him with opulence until his powers of resistance had become atrophied.

And the mother, too, had altered, though in her the change had been a sweeter thing. The making of a lady of this remote descendant of Alexander Hamilton's blood, had not been difficult.

Some strains of heredity can awaken from the submerged sleep of relapse as quickly and keenly as a woodsman can throw off the mists of slumber.

Ham had never feared that his mother would reveal the taint of the parvenue when she faced the batteries of criticism which guard the outposts of the social world to which his own prominence gave the entree. And Paul with his gentle love of comfort and his thoughts that strayed into dreams and music, found the perfumed atmosphere of a drawing room very congenial. He breathed the incense of praise from women who were enraptured as his long fingers stole over the piano keys. Had his road to artistic recognition lain along the broken trail of struggle, Paul would have fainted, undiscovered, by the wayside, but with every difficulty made smooth before his feet, and every puddle carpeted by Hamilton's cloth of gold, he found himself the honored pet of inner circles and the favorite of the elect.

Of these things Hamilton Burton was thinking as he left his door for the car that awaited him. From the start he had never deviated from his well-laid course of determination. Power was his goal and by power he meant no mean modicum, but limitless strength. He had picked finance as his field of endeavor because in this day the scepter that sways affairs must be the scepter of gold. But Hamilton Burton knew that he was only starting and his plans ran to the future. As he looked ahead he never forgot that the fighter must be well conditioned. With the discipline of the boxer in training, he regulated his habits of personal life and held his splendid nerves steady and above par. No man had ever seen the dimming cloud of dissipation in his eye nor any gossip-monger whispered of unwise indulgence. He was spoken of as fastidiously clean of life, and yet it is doubtful whether any shadow of self illusion found harbor in his own mind. In morals as a code inspired of conscience, he had no interest; in rigid self restraint from all that might impair the highest efficiency of nerve and brain he was as unyielding as a Trappist. To the mandate of his single deity, Ambition, he clove with unswerving sternness. His lavish generosity to his family was a strong and clannish passion, yet even that was a sort of greater selfishness and all the world outside he held in ruthless disregard—a realm to conquer. That one may conquer, many must fall—and to conquer was his one resolve.

Even now, awaited by several men who were not accustomed to cooling their heels in waterrooms, he halted at the curb, when he saw another automobile draw up and recognized his brother, Paul.

The younger Burton was not so greatly changed. On his cameo features still lingered the delicate hallmark of the over-sensitive and about his lips played the petulant expression of one who could not cope with the material. His eyes were still pools of brooding darkness, and as he glanced up and met his brother's smile his expression of pleasure was boyish and spontaneous.

"I came in for a moment to see Mary," he exclaimed, as he took his brother's hand. "How is she this morning?"

"Have your car follow, and drive down town with me. I want a word with you, and I am more than an hour late no. You can see Mary after wards." Ham's suggestions were always couched in mandatory terms, and Paul with a nod gave the necessary instructions to his own driver. When he was seated his elder brother inquired with a keen glance of appraisal, "What is the matter with you, Paul? You look tired."

"I am a bit fagged." The answer was almost plaintive. "After I went to bed last night or this morning, the scheme of an aria began running through my head and I could not sleep. I had to get up and work it out on the piano. Listen, it goes like this." Forgetful of time and place, the musician began whistling the opening bars of his latest composition.

Hamilton Burton gazed at the fatigued and dreamy eyes of the other for a moment before he broke out bluntly: "For heaven's sake, spare me! At least save it for some suitable time. Can't you fix it to do some of your dreaming while you sleep? It seems to me that for a man that has nothing to do you keep yourself unnecessarily exhausted. Why the devil are you not in bed now if you haven't slept during the night?"

"I had an appointment for breakfast at twelve."

"With some woman, I suppose;—some woman who wants to break it to you gently that when she hears your music a realization steals over her that she has a soul; that, listening to you, she knows that life holds higher and nobler things. That sort of appointment, eh?"

The young man flushed deeply. "In point of fact it is with a lady," he admitted.

Hamilton Burton frowned. The car was turning into the avenue and the traffic officer saluted in recognition of the fabulist figure, while the fellow with a single waved some chief hand. Then the smile disappeared and the frown returned.

"You say you are tired, Paul, and sometimes—I must confess—you make me tired. Your trouble is that you are stifled with boudoir perfume and suffocated by over petting. Why don't you try breathing outdoors sometime? You might like it if you ever made the experiment."

Paul only shook his head. He could never argue with Hamilton and yet on one or two subjects he was gently and immovable stubborn. So the older brother shrugged his shoulders, and changed the subject.

"What progress with the new organ?" he inquired.

The responsive face lighted and weariness gave place to the glow of enthusiasm. Hamilton was installing at the younger man's quarters, a splendid music room with such an organ as might have graced a cathedral. There the ardent composer might shut himself off with the swelling strains of his own music and fare out on the far tide of his dreams.

At Madison Square the car swung to the left of the Flatiron's sharp prow and took its course down Broadway, and when it reached Union Square the spring sunlight was shining softly on the soft which has often served as a people's forum. At the north end a crowd had gathered and from a drygoods box a speaker was haranguing them. From the violence of the gestures and the truculence of the voice whose words did not reach him, Hamilton Burton knew that it was an agitator whose burden was the hardness of the times and the inequality of living conditions. His lips shaped themselves for an instant into a smile of satirical amusement. One who held his fingers so constantly on the pulse of finance was not in ignorance of the feverish heat that burned through the nation's arteries. He knew that a rumble of protest was rising from the Battery to the Golden Gate and that this rumble might be the warning thunder that runs ahead of a panic's hurricane.

But, as his car was passing the crowd he found himself looking out across the near heads of the listeners, and upon all the faces he read a sullen discontent. Some of these men, he surmised had waited their turns in the bread line. Some of them came from lodgings where larders were empty.

The chauffeur had swung east to take the more open way and even here he had to throttle down his gas because of the scattered loungers who had overflowed the curb. One man of a tramp like appearance stepped directly in front of the radiator and at the warning of the horn made no effort to escape. He swaggered along with insolent air at a snail's pace, so that the driver, with a muttered imprecation, brought the car to a jerking halt and even then almost grazed with his fender the frayed sleeve of the trouble maker.

Railroad Men Swear By Gin Pills

RAILROAD men are especially subject to kidney disease—in fact, no class of workers has more reason to be thankful for Gin Pills than those men who are constantly "on the road."

Kidney disease often results in Diabetes and in obesity, and brakemen, conductors, engineers and firemen know they must guard against these most serious ailments by taking Gin Pills at the first sign of Kidney trouble.

Mr. Frank Ide, a Buffalo Pullman conductor suffered extremely from pains in the groins, sore back, and very severely from gravel and sediment.

A friend whose life was despaired of, before he had been relieved by Gin Pills, recommended the remedy to Frank Ide and the advice was accepted and acted upon.

Here is what Mr. Ide has to say as to the result: "The pain left me entirely. I have no trouble whatever in urinating and I feel as well as I ever did in my life. I recommend Gin Pills to everybody in any way troubled with Kidneys or Bladder."

All good dealers sell Gin Pills at 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. Sample free upon request.

How They Took It.—One day in early summer, when the 'commercials' had met for dinner, the waitress appeared bearing a small dish of peas, apologising for there being so few, the fact being that no more could be obtained. Immediately the dish was set down it was seized by the 'grabber' who emptied the whole of the contents on his plate, saying, "As there are not enough to go round it would be a pity to part them, so I'll take the lot myself." At this another traveller seated opposite took up the pepper box, unscrewed the top, and poured the whole of the pepper over the peas, with the calm remark, "As you have got all the pepper, too."

Her Simple Method.—A bachelor had courted a girl for a long time without coming to the point. One evening in Leap Year, the young lady being musical, he took her to a concert. The orchestra played No. 6, a selection that seemed to the bachelor very beautiful. He bent over his companion and whispered, "How lovely that is! What is it, do you know?" She smiled demurely, and replied in a low, thrilling voice, "It's the 'Maiden Prayer.'" "The 'Maiden Prayer'?" he repeated in astonishment. "Why—" But she handed him her programme pointing to No. 6 with her finger. He read and started, for the real name of the selection was "Mendelssohn's Wedding March." He bought the ring the next day.

They Were Irish.—An amusing story is going the rounds concerning a well-known Scottish regiment. It was suggested that the regiment should be arrayed in trousers instead of kilts to meet the rigours of winter warfare in the trenches, and by way of finding out the feeling of the men generally on the subject the colonel had a census taken. When the sergeant-major arrived on the scene with the result of the voting, he announced that only two men were against kilts being discarded. "Only two!" exclaimed the colonel sadly—for he was a good Scot "And who are these two true Highlanders? What are their names?" The sergeant-major managed to control his face. "Patrick O'Hagan and Solomon Moses, sir!"

HOW HE COULD HELP BEST.

An elderly negro had been run over by a wagon and an attorney had rushed to the hospital to get the case. The sufferer looked at him dazedly and said: "Go 'way fum me, white man."

"But I want to help you," persisted the lawyer.

The old darkey showed a gleam of interest. "Does yo'?" he asked. The lawyer volubly assured him that such was the case.

"Den," said the victim, "yo' go out an' fin' dat man dat run-ober me, an' bus' his haid open."

MIGHT HAVE HAPPENED

At a party one evening a very pretty young girl said: "Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting and kissed it because it was so much like you." "And did it kiss you in return?" asked the artist gravely. "Why, no, of course not!" was the astonished reply. "Then," said Mr. Sargent, smilingly, "it was not like me."

BELGIAN BOY AS MASCOT

"I Have Found My Youngest Soldier," Says King George

King George recently visited the Northamptons on the battle front near the Somme and became interested in their little mascot, Joseph Lefevre, a twelve-year-old Belgian boy, whom they have adopted and placed on the enrolled strength of their regiment. Joseph is the son of a Belgian soldier who fought for his country two years ago, was wounded, and taken prisoner, while Joseph's mother, so the Northamptons say, was killed by German troops.

Originally Joseph was found by some men of the Black Watch wandering around Ypres, and for a good many months now he has been with the Northants men, who have put him in khaki and conferred upon him the rank of a lance-corporal. The King approached the Northamptons, who pushed little Joseph in front of them.

"I believe," said his Majesty, "I have found at last my youngest soldier. How old are you, my boy?"

"Please, your Majesty," said a burly private of the regiment who seemed to constitute himself the personal guard of the mascot, "he don't understand much English, though we're teaching him, but he speaks French."

The King accordingly interrogated Joseph in the French language. "Do you like being a soldier?" he asked. "Oui, Monsieur le Roi," replied the boy. "And do you think you will still like to be a soldier when you are grown up?" "Ah, but yes, sir," was the answer in French.

"I want to fight the Boches." "You are getting on," said the King. "I see they have made you a lance-corporal already. You will soon be a general."

The King expressed the hope to the Northamptons that they did not lead the boy into dangerous areas. "He's quite willing to go anywhere, your Majesty," said one of the men, "but we don't let him. When we are in the trenches we leave him with the transport."

Speed of Zeppelins

"Not so many years ago a British engineering expert calculated that the Zeppelin could not attain a speed of thirty miles an hour, as he proved by figures that the ship would collapse under the air pressure! At the time this speed had been actually exceeded by a Zeppelin," said R. P. Hearne. The tendency is to attribute too high a speed to the Zeppelin vessels. In still air it is doubtful if a higher speed than sixty-five miles an hour can be reached, and by the most careful calculation Mr. Hearne has come to the conclusion that the average speed of the modern Zeppelin in war trim is about forty miles an hour with full load.

Venice Deserted

Swiss newspaper correspondents report that the city of Venice is almost depopulated. The constant attacks of Austrian fliers created a panic and drove the wealthier classes into flight. In six weeks more than 30,000 inhabitants left for the southern provinces. Most of the art treasures were removed to Rome by the government to save them from destruction by the bombs of the Austro-Hungarian airmen.

TORTURED RUSSIANS; SUPER-MEN AT WORK

Austrian Officers Testify to German Cruelties Practised Upon Hapless Russians

Sworn evidence of the cruelties practised by German officers, soldiers, and prison guards upon Russian prisoners is contained in the report of the Russian Commission of Inquiry, issued in English with photographs. Torture by the drawing of nails, cutting of tongues, and tearing of ears has been inflicted upon Russians unwilling to betray their comrades. Men have been burned alive in revenge or for sheer amusement of their captors.

Ingenious at Times

In a camp at Dunaserdagelli, Austria-Hungary, Russians have been punished by being screwed up in a coffin. This has been sworn to by many prisoners and by a Russian sister of mercy. Elsewhere men have been tied together, back to back, until one fainted and pulled the other to the ground. Some have been shot because they were too weak to work. Tied to a post, with toes barely touching the ground, and beaten with thongs, many have found death more merciful than their captors.

For two weeks, Private Paul Kreshchencko-Kravchenko relates a Georgian prisoner was compelled to live in a dog kennel in which he could neither sit nor lie down. Each time the guard was changed he was dragged out by a chain, struck, and driven back again. His crime was that he attempted to escape.

Austrian Evidence

The Commission states that Austrian officers have appeared before it and have sworn to some of the cruelties inflicted by their allies. Not far from Yaroslav, the inhabitants of a village told one such witness that the Germans drove half a dozen Russian prisoners into a cart shed and set fire to it. When the prisoners tried to get out through the opening they were thrust back by German bayonets. The witness personally saw the remains of this cart shed after the fire and several burned and blackened corpses were visible among the charred beams and ashes, including the burned body of a girl.

ON LEAVE IN LONDON

Original Requests of Overseas Men in London 'Seeing the Sights"

A London paper says: "I wish you would tell me where I should go to see suicides 'throw themselves into the Thames," was the request of a New Zealander, a cheerful, kindly lad who said he had laid there in the hospital all the way from Egypt just dreaming of the things he would see when he reached London. He seemed quite deeply disappointed that visits to Waterloo and London Bridge had failed to provide him with this sight he had apparently yearned for so long.

Then some boys' greatest ambition is to take an actress out to supper. Many of them are very anxious to hear the mob orators in Hyde Park, though they have been known to express it as "the Suffragettes addressing the crowd in Kensington Gardens." A certain South African wanted to see our best low comedians, and the next man wanted "something high class, opera preferred, as he didn't care for these vaudeville shows at all."

Another demand was for a shorthand writer—this man could not write to his mother, but if he saw her he could talk for an hour, so he thought the best thing would be to dictate a letter for an hour. Many Canadians ask to be directed to an ice cream soda fountain; one wanted to know the cost of the blouse one of the waitresses wore, as he wished to buy one like it to send to his wife in Canada; but it was an Australian who asked that someone would introduce him to a nice girl "for keeps."

This is Mlle. Tania, a Russian girl of sixteen who is serving in the ranks of Brusiloff's armies. She was recommended for the Cross of St. George for bravery on the field.

Kind To The Germans

A British correspondent writes: One strange thing is to see the German wounded and our wounded coming on after attention at the dressing station, in ambulances together. There is absolute impartiality in their treatment. I saw in one ambulance five of our men and three Germans; in another two Germans and the rest all ours—these all being slightly wounded and able to sit up side by side. In another I saw a British and a German officer together.

Wear Those Comfortable Old Shoes This Winter

And Show Your Patriotism and Thrift—Inexpensive Rubbers or Overshoes Will Protect Your Feet

The spectacular rise in leather prices has a significance far beyond its painful effect on our personal expenses—it is becoming a serious matter for the Government and our soldiers at the Front.

The war is using up leather much faster than it is being produced. The reserve, particularly of high-grade leather, is steadily diminishing. If the soldiers are to have plenty for shoes and equipment, and if the Government is to be able to procure it at prices within reason, civilians must economize on it to the limit.

This is the reason well-worn shoes are no longer a discredit, but an honor—an evidence that the wearer puts patriotism before pride, thrift before vanity.

Fortunately the prevailing low prices of rubbers and overshoes make this practicable. In most cases they cost little more than before the war, and a very small expenditure for either will protect the old shoes perfectly through the winter, keep the feet dry and comfortable, and guard the wearer's health. Many are following the sensible course of getting a pair of rubbers or overshoes to exactly fit each pair of shoes, for rubbers that conform closely to the shoes they cover wear much longer as well as look neater.

This is one of the rare cases where virtue brings its own reward, for in addition to the very considerable money saving, what is there that affords such solid comfort as a well-worn pair of shoes?

Saving Shoe-Leather Is a Public Service as Well as a Private Economy

TELEPHONING FOR BULLETS

Aid to X-rays Unique Idea For Locating Bullets

War certainly stimulates scientific research, and this is strikingly brought out in the case of relief for the wounded. Searching for and extracting fragments of shells is by no means a simple task, but endeavors of this kind are greatly helped by the X-rays. The "rays" alone, however, would be insufficient.

A bullet is, of course, speedily located, but its exact position has to be discovered by probing, or lancing. At present, however, a new discovery has been perfected—namely, "telephoning for bullets."

Telephonic receivers are clamped over the operating surgeon's head, and one wire is led to a carbon plate, the second being wound round the knife, probe, forceps, or whatever instrument is being used. The search is made with this implement and so soon as it comes into contact with a bullet a distinct click is heard on the telephone.

If the instrument is rubbed across the surface of the buried object a rattle is heard. Following up this clue, the obstruction can be located exactly and removed.

A SCOTTISH HERO

Fighting Hector, Who Won Commission at Bayonet's Point

Undoubtedly the most famous example of a British officer who rose from the ranks was that of the brilliant and popular General Sir Hector Macdonald—the man who saved the day at Omdurman and who succeeded to the command of the Highland Brigade when the gallant Wauchope was shot down at fatal Magersfontein. "Fighting Mac" had the rare, if not unique, distinction of having served under the same officer as private and general. In the latter capacity he held command under Lord Roberts, from whom he likewise received his commission.

The future hero of Omdurman literally won his promotion at the point of the bayonet. The occasion was during the Afghan war, when the British, under Roberts, were marching to Cabul to avenge the murder of Cavagnari. Macdonald, then a young non-commissioned officer, was stationed in a hill fort at the time. There a rumor reached him that a large force of Afghans intended to waylay the British commander and his staff. Successfully locating this force, the intrepid young Scotsman, with all the coolness and craft of a veteran, gallantly attacked and dispersed it. For this notable feat he was offered the "V.C." or a commission, and chose the latter. Further promotion came rapidly to Macdonald, and at the age of forty-seven he held the rank of a general.

Austrians Learn Cost

Joseph Hargarter, an old farmer living near Laibach, was informed by the Austro-Hungarian war ministry that his seventh and last son had been killed on the front of the Isonzo. Of the other six two fell fighting in Galicia, two in Poland and two in Serbia.

WHEEST, WHEEST.

"Only for the Teeth Have We Learned to Take Precaution in Advance of Pain."

Experience has taught us that to wait for the toothache warning is to allow irreparable loss to be done.

But why do we not apply this lesson in caring for the general health, and by keeping the blood rich and the nervous energy at high-water mark, reduce sickness to a minimum and prolong life?

There are many symptoms to warn you of the weak, watery condition of the blood and exhausted nerves, and by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food it is not difficult to restore richness to the blood and feed the starved nerves back to health and vigor.

But just as the tooth cannot be saved after decay has gone too far, so the nerve cells can never be replaced once they are dead.

On this account it is a thousand times better to be warned by sleeplessness, headaches, indigestion, tired feelings and muscular weakness rather than to neglect treatment and allow nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia or paralysis to develop.

That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest of nerve restoratives is being proven every day, and you will find the evidence in the daily and weekly papers.

The SILENT THIRD DEGREE

"THE third degree must go," said Deputy Warden Miller of Sing Sing Prison recently, and he cited the cases of three men who had made "confessions" under what Mr. Miller declared was a third degree system of questioning and who later repudiated their statements. These men were Ohni Tallas, Charles F. Stielow and Thomas Bambrick, who were sentenced to death and reprieved because of doubt cast upon their "confessions."

With the third degree the public is well-acquainted through short stories, articles, novels and the drama, but there has developed of recent years a fast more grimly nerve racking, more crushing and relentless—the "silent third degree"—to the study of which penologists and psychologists are giving much time and thought. In the opinion of some it is more unjust than the older form of bullying questioning. Others declare that it is a true test—one which wrings the truth from the subject more certainly than all the questioning in the world.

One of the most notable cases of the practice of the silent third degree was in the Los Angeles Times dynamiting case. James B. McNamara was on trial. The prosecution had developed a strong case against him, but the man's nerve was wonderful. He steadfastly declared his innocence and resisted every effort to force a confession from him. This was desirable not only to fasten the guilt upon him but to get evidence against other conspirators.

It was Samuel L. Browne, chief of the Los Angeles Secret Service Bureau, who directed the gruelling daily presentation of witnesses who spoke not, nor were spoken to, but who merely filed into the court room, caught the eye of J. B. McNamara, shot him a glance of recognition and then, unquestioned by counsel for either side, left the room.

Women with whom McNamara had associated, hotel clerks who had seen him register under false names, cabmen who had driven him to places where detectives contended he had met fellow conspirators in the dynamite plot—all these were marshalled by the Secret Service men and paraded before the prisoner.

Vividly, realistically, almost as if with a moving picture film, each step in the accused dynamiter's journey from Indianapolis to Los Angeles, each stage of development of the plot was called to his mind, and, what was worse, there was the suggestion that the prosecution knew all. Every time three or four witnesses who J. B. McNamara knew could testify damagingly against him entered the court room and bowed to him in recognition the thought was crushingly impressed upon his mind that another step in his career was known.

Forging the Chain.

One of these silent witnesses was the mail clerk who had time and again handed mail to McNamara at the general delivery window and had known him as J. B. Bryce. [illegible] effect on the guilty man when he saw that the mail clerk recognized him.

There were cabmen who had driven McNamara about, and one of them had quarrelled with him. Those who knew him by name knew him as Bryce and Bryson. When the man with whom he had quarrelled confronted him McNamara knew that he need expect no mercy from him.

One man who by his silent presence recalled a step in the progress of the scheme was he who stood in the street in front of Mrs. Lavin's house in San Francisco and had seen the man he knew as Bryce drive up in a taxicab with a man named Schmidt. After Schmidt got out of the taxicab this man leaned in and spoke to McNamara. The accused man knew this witness could identify him with certainty.

All these were little things, brought up only to crush the iron nerved man with the knowledge that his every movement, however trivial or important, was known.

Finally a woman, plain and rather shabbily dressed, white and timid, was ushered into the court room. She sat in one of the front seats and gazed at J. B. McNamara. It seemed as if he was conscious of a force dragging his eyes toward her and was struggling against it, for several times he swung around almost until he faced her, but with the expectant catching of the breath by those who knew what awaited him McNamara would glance quickly away again.

At last he met her gaze fully. There was a little jerking back of the woman's head, a slight intake of the breath—that was all. But J. B. McNamara stared and stared, and it seemed that his eyes would bulge from their sockets; then his face resumed its habitual half grin, half sneer, but his fingers twitched in agitation.

That woman had sold him wrapping paper in her store, and in her presence he had wrapped sticks of dynamite in it.

The Last Blow.

As the supreme test, the crushing denouement, McNamara was confronted by the last living person who had seen him before the dynamite explosion. He was a rather short, pudgy man, with little character in his face, a brisk, businesslike air and dressed in a black derby hat and a black suit. Those who watched closely to see the effect on the prisoner said he was almost stunned when this man caught his eye and smiled a greeting. It was the bartender who had sold McNamara a drink just before he slipped through the swinging door of the saloon back into the alley and placed the dynamite which destroyed twenty-one lives.

"I don't know that the 'silent third degree' is a good name for this system," said William J. Burns, who was in charge of the McNamara case, "but it certainly has a very strong effect on the criminal's mind. It is a very simple matter—nothing mysterious. When a man who knows he is guilty sees that you have turned up every possible witness who could testify against him and that they all recognize him fear begins to tug at his heart. Fear is a great accomplice to the conscience, for when a man fails prey to physical fear he soon feels the pangs of moral or religious fear. He weakens, his mind is preyed on and finally, to relieve the uncertainty and the pain, he confesses."

"I'll tell you what this 'silent third degree' does—it awakens a man's conscience. That's the underlying principle that makes it effective," said George E. Dougherty, formerly in charge of the New York Police Detective Bureau. "Look here, I'll tell you how it works.

How the Silent Third Degree Works.

"A man is arrested for a grave crime—murder perhaps. He sees no witnesses when he is arrested. He is at bay, desperate, fighting for his liberty and maybe for his life. He steels himself and throws about him an armor of bravado or unconcern or taciturnity. His nerves are like steel fibres, and you can't shake them. If you should bully him he would become sullen and resistive. If you should threaten he would become defiant. He might be open to reason, but suppose he were not.

"When he is arraigned before a magistrate there may be several witnesses there whom he recognizes and who he knows will recognize him. When he has been first arrested he has told his mother and his wife and his friends that he is innocent. The lie means nothing to him then, but when he sees all these witnesses who are connected with his crime in different ways he begins to realize that he may be forced to admit his guilt and that these persons are going to make him out a liar before the friends and relatives who have stuck by him. That is the beginning of the break, and it reaches a type of man you can't bully or hoodwink into a confession."

On July 27, 1911, William H. Jackson, a broker of New York, was found murdered in his room at the Iroquois Hotel, in the heart of the club district of New York city. He had been beaten and strangled, and a bottle which had contained chloroform was found on the premises.

About the only information the police were at first able to develop was the fact that the murderer must have entered the room from the fire escape. There did not seem to be the slightest evidence as to the identity of the intruder. The bottle which contained the traces of chloroform bore a label, however, and detectives working on the case traced it to a druggist in Newark.

This man stated that he had sold the drug to a Mrs. Kane, and gave her address in New York city to them.

Meanwhile police working in the city had become suspicious of Paul Geidel, a bellboy, who had been discharged from the Iroquois a few days previously. When they learned that he was living in a room which he rented in Mrs. Kane's apartment their suspicions were strengthened, but there was as yet nothing on which to hold the boy. He had not been seen by any one on the premises where the crime was committed since his discharge; still, certain information which came to the hand of George E. Dougherty, at that time Deputy Police Commissioner in charge of the Detective Bureau, led him strongly to believe that Geidel was the murderer.

Setting the Stage for Geidel.

The Deputy Commissioner himself, together with Detectives Thomas Van Twister and Dominick Reilly, went to the apartments of Mrs. Kane, a pretty woman, who earned a living as hairdresser. As they entered Mrs. Kane's sitting room Geidel and Patrick McGrane, another bellboy, were sitting with her.

Dougherty told Mrs. Kane that he wished to speak to her alone on an important matter. The other men said nothing, but two of them went into adjoining rooms, each with one of the boys. Each attempted to question his custodian, but he would not speak, not even admitting that he was a detective, although the youths must have known it, and this silence multiplied their fears.

Mrs. Kane in a very frank manner admitted that she had bought the chloroform and said that she used it in the treatment of hair.

"Have you still got that bottle of chloroform in the house?" asked Dougherty.

"No," she said; "it has gone."

"Where?" asked Dougherty. Mrs. Kane at first hesitated, but by adroit questioning the Commissioner learned from her that it had disappeared from the shelf in the bathroom. After learning all that he cared to Dougherty produced the bottle.

"Was that yours?" he asked.

Mrs. Kane said that it was and became very much alarmed. The detective reassured her. "All I want you to do," said Dougherty, "is to answer my questions again. Just the way you have this time."

Then he sent for McGrane, who was in the next room with Geidel. After a few unimportant questions he said to McGrane, "Now, all I want you to do is to sit here quietly. Don't say a word, and if Geidel looks at you make no sign or sound unless you want to get into trouble yourself."

McGrane, thoroughly frightened, took his place on a chair the detective offered to him.

Stepping to the table, Dougherty turned down a [illegible] lamp, which had a red shade. Then he drew the curtains, shutting out the twilight, which [illegible] the effect of the red shaded lamp. Every bit of furniture was placed by the detective so that the effect he was striving for would be enhanced. No stage director could have exercised greater care in the arrangement of details.

He sent for Geidel. Reilly came in with him. The bellboy was seated in a chair which directly faced the door to the bathroom, where Dougherty had already replaced the empty bottle of chloroform.

"Mrs. Kane," said Dougherty, "did you purchase a bottle of chloroform from a druggist in Newark about ten days ago?"

"Yes," said the woman.

"Why did you get it?"

"I use it in dressing hair," Mrs. Kane replied.

"They filed into the court room, caught the eye of McNamara, shot him a glance of recognition and then left the room."

"Did Paul know that you had this drug?"

"Yes, he did," admitted Mrs. Kane, who was so seated that the light from the lamp shone on her head and features, making them the most distinctive things in the room, and Geidel seemed unable to take his eyes from her face. He smiled with a certain amount of bravado as the questioning continued.

"Did Paul ever say anything about the drug? What were his words?"

Mrs. Kane looked imploringly at Geidel, but either she did not dare to answer or her wish to tell the truth was stronger than her sympathy for the boy.

"He asked me if there was enough chloroform in the bottle to kill a man," she said. "I told him there was, and asked him why he wanted to know. 'Oh, I might want to take some if things don't go right with me,' he replied, laughing, and I thought that he was merely joking in a grim way."

"Is that bottle still in your possession?" asked the detective.

"It is," said Mrs. Kane. "At least I have not used the drug, and it must be there."

"Where?"

"On the shelf in the bathroom."

Turning to Dominick Reilly, the detective asked him to look for the bottle.

Geidel's face showed the first signs of alarm.

"Here's the bottle," said Reilly, "but it's empty."

"I thought you said you hadn't used it," said Dougherty to Mrs. Kane, sharply.

The bellboy's eyes started from their sockets. He had believed the bottle destroyed or lost. He sank in his chair. McGrane did not return the glance of inquiry his friend shot toward him. How much did the detectives know? Geidel looked first at one face, then another. The reddish glow on Mrs. Kane's features showed the anguish she was in. Paul knew she was fond of him. She must be suffering so because she had been obliged to tell all she knew about the chloroform. McGrane's features were stolid. Geidel knew what he had told his friend, and to him this meant that the friend had betrayed him.

Reilly handed the bottle, not to Mrs. Kane but to Paul Geidel. His tongue clave to the roof of his mouth—he tried to speak but could not.

"So that's where you got the drug to kill Jackson with, is it?" queried Dougherty. "You are under arrest."

Every glance, every movement of the prisoner told of his guilt, yet he did not speak. The detectives did not press him with questions. Dougherty was content to let the setting he had arranged—the silent third degree—work on his mind.

Reilly took back the bottle which Geidel had been examining with the horror he would have shown had a deadly adder been placed, wriggling, in his hands.

They took him to Police Headquarters. All the way downtown Geidel was living again the scene in the little room, lit by the reddish gleam from the lamp. A score of times he lived again that moment when the detective, with horrible dramatic force, had stepped out of the bathroom, in his hand that bottle which the youth had forgotten to destroy.

Before he was sent to his cell Geidel said to Reilly:—"I did it. Can they hang me for this?"

Now the words "I did it" were something in themselves, but the detectives wanted a full confession while the effect they had created was still strong. Geidel had come recently from Connecticut, where hanging was still legal, and apparently he did not know that the death penalty was exacted by electricity in New York.

"No, they can't hang you," said Reilly.

Then Geidel told the whole sordid story of how he had climbed to the room of the aged broker, and when his victim discovered him how he leaped upon the man who had once befriended him, stuffing the chloroform soaked towel about his head and struggling him at the same time.

Geidel was convicted.

"Abe" Rueff's Experience.

An early form of the silent third degree, in that no questions were asked, was practised on "Abe" Rueff, the San Francisco political boss, who was convicted of graft.

Rueff was in prison awaiting trial. William J. Burns was handling the case and was making every effort to wring a confession from the prisoner.

There was a keeper in the prison named McCarthy, who was on duty near Rueff's cell. Burns discontinued his calls and instructed this man to wake Rueff every night at two o'clock sharp. This McCarthy did by banging on the wall with a heavy stool. Rueff, the first few nights, did not pay much attention to the disturbance, merely turning over and going to sleep again. At last it got on his nerves. He would jump off his cot at the first sound and demand, "What was that?"

McCarthy would make no reply, and Rueff would run to the barred door of his cell and look out, to see the keeper apparently asleep.

Sometimes he would waken the keeper and say, "Didn't you hear anything?"

"Not a sound," McCarthy would answer.

This formula was gone through night after night until on one occasion Rueff leaped from bed, to find McCarthy wide awake.

"Didn't you hear anything at all?" asked the prisoner.

"Nothin' but you talkin' in your sleep," said McCarthy.

"What was I talking about?" said Rueff, alarmed.

"The graft cases," said McCarthy.

"My heavens!" cried Rueff. "Am I going crazy? My mind must be getting unsettled. I want to see Burns to-morrow."

Next day the detective [illegible] the prisoner. Rueff tried to bring up the graft cases, but there turned to other subjects, until at last Rueff broke down and half shouted:—"Look here, Burns, you've got to listen to this! It's my confession!"

Then he told the whole story, which a stenographer took down. Afterward he repudiated this confession.

It was silent witnesses that wrung a confession from Hans Schmidt, the bogus priest, who killed Anna Aumiller. After finding a rent receipt and a key to the apartment in which the girl was killed and a photograph of the girl herself Inspector Faurot traced Schmidt to the rectory of the church where he was acting as a priest.

The Inspector and the men with him waited in the reception room while the suspected man came downstairs.

"Is this Hans Schmidt?" asked Faurot as he stepped to the side of the bogus priest.

"I am he," said Schmidt.

Faurot reached into his pocket as if searching for something. Withdrawing it, he fumbled with the rent receipt for the apartment where the girl had been murdered and with the key to the door. Schmidt saw them in his hand and must have recognized them, for he glanced nervously toward the door, and his fingers began twisting and untwisting convulsively.

Hans Schmidt Confesses.

As though this was not what he was looking for, Faurot thrust his hand again into his pocket. This time he withdrew it like a flash and before Schmidt's terrified eyes had ceased to devour the receipt and key the detective thrust in front of him a picture of Anna Aumiller.

"You killed that girl, didn't you?" Faurot almost shouted. "You not only killed her but you cut up her body, didn't you?"

Drops of perspiration stood out on the brow of the bogus priest. He staggered and clutched the arm of his accuser for support.

"Yes, I did," he stammered.

They took him to the apartment where he had killed Anna Aumiller. There Faurot made his prisoner sit on the edge of the very bed on which he had put Anna Aumiller to death. Rapidly the detective sketched the outline of a human figure, and handing the drawing to Schmidt said:—

"Now, show me how you cut up the body of the girl you killed."

The prisoner took a pencil and indicated how the body had been dismembered. The lines corresponded exactly with the parts which had been discovered. Bit by bit Schmidt detailed the crime for which he was later condemned to die.

A variation of the silent third degree was practised with results by William Allender, chief of detectives of St. Louis, in the case of Barbara Arnold, accused of setting fires in the Berlin and Windemere hotels in that city, resulting in the loss of several lives.

For two hours Allender, alone with the girl in his office, had questioned her, with no result. He himself was worn out with fatigue and exasperation, yet he knew if he lost his temper the girl would have the advantage of him.

Suddenly he wheeled and held out toward Barbara a handful of matches.

"Now, Barbara," he said, in matter of fact tones, "show us how you set fire to the Windemere."

Mechanically the girl went through motions with her hands as though scraping together a little pile of paper and waste, struck a match and for an instant held it to the imaginary tinder.

With a cry she dropped the match on the heavy rug of the office and threw her head upon her arms at the table.

When she was calm again she confessed that she had set fire to the hotel and told just how she had done it. Persons interested in the girl declared that she was innocent and that under the strain the suggestion, so subtly made, forced her to act as she did.

A Question of Hair.

YOU can tell a good deal about a man from the way his hair grows, according to a never tiring observer of the idiosyncrasies of human nature.

In the first place, a man who shaves the back of his neck, this expert declares, is bound to have passed some portion of his life as a motorman.

This is true of men who confess to a lifelong habitation in the East. In the Western part of the country this method of dealing with the back hair is known to the laity as the "saucer cut." The "profession" terms it a shaven outline, for which refinement of elegance the barber charges a nickel extra. It is therefore unjust to doubt the aristocracy of a Western man's antecedents just because the back of his neck shows a shaven outline.

"There's something wrong with the chap whose hair grows straight forward and has to be combed in bang style," declared the expert. "He is bound to be a one idea man. It will take years to make him see any side of a question except his own, and when he sees the other side he'll go completely over and won't be able to see the side he once supported.

"Then there's the man whose hair grows like thick fur. I don't mean just thick curls, but more like the fur of an animal than the hair of a human being. I believe that animalistic traits are likely to predominate in his character.

"Poets and writers generally let their hair grow longer than is common among business men, but their hair is rarely as thick as that of artists and musicians. Editors usually lose their hair early and belong also to the class of prematurely gray folks. An interesting example of the different effects upon the hair of the different pursuits in life may be noticed in a newspaper office. Almost all the artists employed on the newspapers have thicker hair than the writers and editors, and practically without exception men in the art department keep the color of their hair better than men of the editorial staff.

"The expression 'low brow' has marked out the place of the man whose hair grows low on his forehead, and it is often difficult to recall men of high intellectual attainments whose hair grows very low. And yet there are exceptions to every rule. Mr. Edison, for many persons regarded as one of the intellectual giants of the country, is still blessed with hair that grows so low on his forehead that it almost resembles a bang."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To make boiled potatoes white let them lie (pared) in cold water for two or three hours previous to cooking.

White enamelled furniture should be washed in warm soapy water, and wiped dry quickly and rubbed with a flannel dipped in dry whiting, then rubbed with a clean leather.

A pinch of ginger added to the batter of fritters or the dough for crullers and doughnuts will prevent the cooking of fat. A pinch of ginger blended with sausage meat will make it harmless to delicate stomachs.

To clean a porcelain enamel bath or china lavoratory basin which has become stained from the drip of the tap use spirits of salt on a rag and then wash. Have the tap repaired, as after a time the dripping wears the surface of the enamel.

A wire basket, known as a salad shaker or drainer should be used to dry greens after they have been thoroughly washed. Leaves of lettuce often hold water after they have been well shaken. If they are not fully dry they will not hold dressing well.

A piece of clean chamois leather wrung out of cold water is the best duster for velvet or plush furniture.

To renovate leather that has become dull and shabby looking rub over with the white of an egg well beaten.

When cleaning brass knobs the surrounding paint may be kept clean if a piece of cardboard is fitted around the knob.

To make meats or a fowl of doubtful age tender add a teaspoonful of apple juice to the water in which they are boiled.

To prevent mould from forming on top of the liquid in which pickles are kept put in a few pieces of horseradish root.

Place pieces of flannel or of blotting paper between fine china plates. This will prevent them from being scratched.

To prevent linoleum from cracking after it has been rolled and put away place it before a fire a few hours before unrolling it.

When pouring boiling milk or water into a tumbler or glass dish, stand the tumbler or dish on a knife and the glass with neither break nor crack.

Just a slight shake of salt in the coffee pot will improve the flavour, but it must be a very slight shake, as a trifle too much will spoil the coffee completely.

To make an excellent dressing for linoleum take equal parts of linseed oil and cider vinegar and mix them thoroughly together.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID R. REEDER

Goitre: An unusual demand for a practical method of treatment for goitre without surgery has caused me to investigate the methods used by some of the successful physicians that have specialized along that line. I think that of all the methods of treatment that I have investigated, that employed by Dr. David Grant Roy is the most practical and successful.

I have, inorder to give intelligent and helpful suggestions, kept under observation a number of patients that have been successfully treated by Dr. Roy, and in each case the result has been highly satisfactory.

Dr. Roy's method is simplicity itself and is thoroughly practical common sense. He uses a certain tincture of colorless iodine in the form of an inunction, but he does not, as the practice has heretofore been, simply apply the iodine to the skin over the gland, but he first, by manipulation raises the clavicles and relaxes the muscular tissues surrounding the gland, the patient prone upon the back. The inunction is then applied, after which it is driven into the deeper tissues with the high frequency current. Treatment is applied daily with the result that in cases of young girls the enlargement sometimes disappears within a couple of weeks. In cases of older girls and young women, 4 to 6 or even 8 weeks may be required.

In one case coming under my observation a woman of perhaps 45 years had a very troublesome goitre of twenty years' standing and symptoms of Exophthalmic difficulties were beginning to manifest themselves in a very uncomfortable manner. After three months' treatment, the circumference of the neck and gland had been reduced from 17 3-4 inches to 13 1-2 inches, and although the enlargement was still visible the patient was so well satisfied that she stopped the treatment. At that time there were no symptoms of Exophthalmic trouble.

In his remarkable book "Beauty and Motherhood," Dr. Ferdinand Herb, says that "The thyroid gland is one of the most important organs of the body. The functions of this gland are manifold. In some ways it supports, in other ways it antagonizes the ovaries. The intimate connection between the thyroid gland enfarges at all those occasions that serve as milestone in woman's sexual life; puberty, menstruation, pregnancy and change of life. This enlargement is but the outward sign of the increased activity of the thyroid gland during these periods. It is not desirable from the standpoint of beauty, and happily, disappears heen the wave of disturbance has passed. Only in comparatively few instances does the enlargement become permanent and then, in a way, disfigures the neck.

The characteristic enlargement of the thyroid gland is not always so pronounced as to be visible to the eye. However, observing women frequently notice it in the seeming tightening of their collars or neck bands at these specified times.

One of the most important functions of the thyroid gland is the destruction of poisonous substances in the blood. The greatly increased demand made upon it in that direction is probably the reason why in the majority of instances its enlargement is so conspicuous during pregnancy.

Another function of this gland is the regulation of fat within the body. If the thyroid gland is inactive, fat accumulates and corpulence develops. On the other hand, if the thyroid gland is stimulated and its secretion increased, accumulated fat disappears.

I will be glad to hear from anyone afflicted with Goitre and will cheerfully give any further special suggestions desired especially regarding the proper diet during treatment.

Dear Doctor; Will you please explain through the columns of the Home Health Club what is Hodgson's Disease, the symptoms, cause and whether it is incurable. Also why it is sometimes taken for tuberculosis? Thanking you in advance, I am.—M.

Answer: In the Home Health Club book, Vol. 2, I have devoted a chapter to Hodgon's Disease. Therein is given a great deal of information upon the subject and the hygienic instructions given in the same book on the Prevention of Consumption, are also according to my view absolutely necessary to follow in successfully combating the trouble. Persons in early age are the most frequent sufferers from the disease. Paleness and weakness are pronounced symptoms. The stomach generally becomes deranged and a poor nutrition is the natural result. Sometimes there will be chills followed by fever. Even a slight exertion is exhausting, stair climbing being especially difficult. The glands beneath the jaw usually first commence to swell, and the cervical gland may become involved, forming a chain of enlargements which may often become as large as an ordinary egg. The glands soften and may slowly separate and if emptied they heal very slowly. Hodgon's Disease has always been held dangerous and difficult to treat.

Poultice the swollen glands, but do not lance them. When they discharge syringe them thoroughly with boracic acid solution and keep them covered with a salve of prepared earth and glycerine, containing a little powdered myrrh. Dress them frequently. Internally may be given to advantage tartrate of iron and potassa and citric acid, one-half ounce each in eight ounces of water. Dose: ½ teaspoonful before meals. The Compound Gentian would also be valuable. Keep the bowels open, maintain a nourishing diet and the chances for recovery are good.

BRIGHT COLOURS AND CHARMING STYLES AT EVENING FUNCTIONS

The Train is Welcomed Back Again

Transparent Angel Sleeves Are Ever So Graceful

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—With all the theatres in full swing and society giving fashionable entertainments for charities and benefits, New York is alive with gaieties, and there is no dearth of festivities which afford the best of opportunities to view the beautifully gowned women who gather at the various evening performances and entertainments.

All manner of colours are thrown together in wild profusion at these gatherings, for Fashion has provided a wide range of colours this season. To enumerate each and all of the different colours and their various shades would make a very long list indeed, so let us content ourselves with some of the most prominent. These are bright greens, royal purple, blues and reds in different tones, lighter shades of pink and blue, apricot and maize, as well as all-white and all-black, which are well represented, as are the black-and-white combinations.

As for the styles, certain dominant features applying to most evening gowns are distinctly noticeable. The vogue of the train, for instance, is very evident, although all gowns do not carry trains. Some long trains, made of the material of the dress, give the stateliness and dignity that have always been associated with trains from olden days. Not so, however, the trains of tulle or net, airy nothings, which are seen on many of this season's fowns. These take on a very frivolous character. They are just bits of soft drapery attached to the back of the dress and meant to be thrown over the arms or neck in the form of scarfs.

Lacy Underskirts in Evening Gowns.

A very popular fancy, worthy of note, is the use of lacy underskirts with evening frocks, the underskirt forming part of the dress. The dress is usually cut short in front, giving place to a rich petticoat and gradually sloping toward the back. In very elaborate gowns, petticoats of silver or gold lace are worn with gowns of rich velvets, silver or gold tissues. Satins and brocaded silks combined with tulle or silk nets also fashion some very sumptuous gowns.

The loosely-fitted chemise dress

6541-7524

The Panel Overdress for Evening.

which has been so highly favoured is one of the styles frequently seen for evening, and equally popular are the dresses in Moyen Age style.

In the sketch is a very graceful evening frock that for quiet simplicity and real elegance can not be surpassed. The foundation is of lace, and the overdress, which hangs in panels at the front and back, is of chiffon velvet or satin. A beaded girdle with tasseled ends is wound twice around the waist.

Dance frocks are still worn moderately short. Even the dresses with trains are not long, though skirts in general, as every one knows, are longer this season than last.

Mention must be made of the new angel sleeves which are seen on so many gowns. These graceful flowing sleeves are of transparent tulle or net. Some of them reach almost to the hem of the skirt, while others are a good deal shorter, reaching only as far as the waistline or thereabout.

WOMEN'S AILMENTS

Come From the Heart and Nerves

Young girls budding into womanhood, who suffer with pains and headaches and whose face is pale and their blood watery, will find Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills build them up.

Women between the ages of 40 and 50, who are nervous, subject to hot flushes, feeling of pins and needles, smothering feeling, shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, etc., are tided over this trying time of life by the use of this remedy.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have a wonderful effect on a woman's system, making pains and aches vanish, bringing color to the pale cheeks and sparkle to the eye.

The old, worn out, tired out, languid feelings give place to strength and vitality, and life again seems like living.

Mrs. Alfred Winter, Carter, Alta., writes: "I would like every woman who is suffering from nerves or heart trouble to know how much Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have helped me. For two years I kept a hired girl and was doctoring all the time. After having taken four boxes of your pills I am able to do all my own work. I would especially recommend them to women between 40 and 50, as at that time they are more liable to be far from well. One of my neighbors knows how they helped me, and she is now using them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or sent direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Many gowns have transparent angel sleeves which are very graceful.

Lamp burners should be washed in wood ashes and water and they will come out clean and bright.

A good way to keep mattresses fresh is to let them have slips of their own covered with unbleached muslin.

Wipe the kitchen oilcloth with skimmed milk. This treatment is almost as beneficial to the cloth as a coat of varnish.

To clean bamboo furniture use a brush dipped in warm water and salt. The salt prevents the bamboo from turning colour.

Ices and ice cream will freeze more quickly if a dipper of water is poured over the ice and just before the turning process begins.

If you rub a little butter under the spout of the cream pitcher it will prevent a drop of cream running down the side of the pitcher.

Rub cornstarch on a grease spot, and it will absorb the grease. Rub off in two hours. If not all gone repeat until the spot is cleared of grease.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S FIVE-GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

With confidence in the knowledge that the yoke effect in the separate skirt will have a strong following for the fall season, the designers continue active in creating style that will show many variations of this feature. In the illustration a model is presented with the yoke and front gore in one piece. The effect is truly novel.

In the arrangement of a trimming field of material on each side front gore a decidedly new note is struck and one that is a forceful style feature. There is a tendency toward lavishness in trimming with buttons. A panel front is the result of the original decorative treatment, adding to the "line value" of the garment, which is cut in five gores. A seam at the left side of the back indicates where the closing is made.

To make this you will not be crowded for time and the pattern is so clear as daylight. Smart black and white check wool material will give an attractive skirt, but there are a number of weaves equally satisfactory.

The pattern of No. 7,285 is cut in sizes 24 to 32 waist measure. To make in size 24 will require 4¾ yards 36 inch material, if with a nap; without a nap, 3½ yards.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Shoe Dealers are Entitled to Higher Prices for Some Brands of Rubbers

On a great many of our lines of Rubber Footwear there have, of necessity, been small advances in prices, for these reasons:—

Since the war the price of crude rubber has fluctuated, registering as much as 40% advance and then sagging back almost to 1914 figures. But ocean and freight rates on it have doubled—marine insurance is away up—and then there is the War Tax. Moreover, cottons used in rubber footwear are up 25% to 100%, chemicals 25% to 300%, dyes a good deal more than that, and labor is scarce and higher paid. All these items must be included in our costs.

Our policy has been, and will continue to be:—

To maintain fully the quality of each and every brand of our rubber footwear, regardless of expense.

To maintain, as long as we can, stability of prices to dealers, advancing just as little as possible considering the higher manufacturing cost.

If your shoe dealer asks you a little more for our rubbers, he is quite entitled to it. To his increased cost he must also get added profit to make up for his increased expense of doing business.

The public will find any increases we make on our brands of Rubber Footwear insignificant compared with the saving that the consistent use of Rubber Footwear accomplishes. The additional cost of our brands of Rubbers is, however, fully justified, because they are backed by the same reliable quality that has won popularity for these well-known marks:—

TALES OF THE "TANKS"

A Canadian sergeant-major, speaking of the "tanks," says: Near the fifth German line one of the "Land Navy" got stuck up momentarily. "I had to laugh," he said, "for there were Germans clambering upon its back and trying to find the doors. Then suddenly it began to move again with the Germans sitting astride. One by one they tumbled off—and the 'elephant' just went on! One of the crew of a 'caterpillar' had a narrow escape," said a Londoner. "Prisoners were coming forward in large batches and one of the men from inside hopped out to tell the infantry as they approached. He was wearing what looked like a German helmet, blue dungarees, and a khaki tunic. I saw him stoop down to a wounded man, put his revolver on the ground beside him, and begin to bandage the wounded fellow's head. A man in my platoon picked up the revolver and another pointed his rifle at him. 'What's the game?' said the 'caterpillar's' man. He was such a queer mixture that our fellows wouldn't believe his yarn till he brought out his pay book. Then he got his revolver back."

Private Halford, of a London regiment, got wounded in the German fifth line. "I saw a 'caterpillar'," he said, "go clean through a house. Later it had five trees ahead. It just went on till it came to the first tree, a foot in diameter. The tree stood for a few seconds, went sideways, and just toppled over, and the 'caterpillar' went on. It would have taken three shells, hitting that tree to have flattened it as that 'caterpillar' did. I never saw Germans so scared to death before. A Bavarian sergeant told me that all the Saxons and Bavarians would give in 'when they saw the new wibbly-wobbly.'"

Jimbill (from Gippsland): "Well, these Germans may have done a lot of damage to the towns, but they've put in a few pounds' worth of good work clearing the bush round here."—Sydney Bulletin.

ZEPPELIN L-33

Was Captured Intact—Britain Can Build Duplicate

The Zeppelin L-33 proved to be one of the largest in the German service. It has four gondolas, containing six Mercedes engines, each of 240 horse-power and working 1,600 revolutions to the minute. One gondola contains three engines, the remaining three each carrying one engine. There are five propellers. It has been estimated that she carried some two thousand gallons of petrol in her various tanks and that her colossal envelope was filled with two million cubic feet of gas.

An officer said that everything of any practical value is intact, and that there is all the information necessary to construct a replica. The length of the ship is 650 feet, and her total weight, with her crew of 22 officers and men, about 80 tons. She is supposed to have occupied a year in building and to have cost anything between a quarter and a half a million sterling. She carries seven or eight guns, including five ordinary Maxims, the remainder being somewhat heavier.

NOTHING MORE TO SEE.

An old Scotsman was threatened with blindness if he did not give up drinking. "Now, M'Tavish," said the doctor, "it's like this; you have either to stop the whisky or lose your eyesight—and you must choose." "Ah, weel, doctor," said M'Tavish, "I'm an old man noo, and I was thinkin' I have seen about everything worth seein'!"

REASONABLE.

Johnny giggled when the teacher read the story of the Roman who swam across the Tiber three times before breakfast. "You do not doubt, that a trained swimmer could do that, do you, Johnnie?" "No sir," said Johnnie; "but I wondered why he did not make it four, and get back to the side that his clothes were on!"

INCREASE YOUR WEIGHT RESTORES LOST STRENGTH PREVENTS ILLNESS

Every day come new converts to that great army of men and women who rejoice in new-found health that came to them through the use of that wonderful blood-renewing preparation called "FERROZONE". Very simple how it acts. All you have to do is take two small chocolate-coated tablets with a sip of water at the close of each meal.

Ferrozone is a marvel. It contains just what thin blood lacks—lots of iron, but mark you, the kind of iron your blood is able to absorb. Ferrozone puts life and vim into the blood. Makes it rich, red and nourishing. Naturally the body is better fed and grows stronger day by day.

Of course digestion must be improved, and probably the stomach will require aid as well. Ferrozone serves the purpose admirably. Those who use it, enjoy appetite and digestive powers far beyond the ordinary.

That tired feeling is replaced by the buoyant, joyous sensation of health and vigor. Day by day as your strength increases, you feel new energy surging through your veins, and know that a great tonic of great merit is at work.

No remedy more nourishing or uplifting, no treatment so sure to bring lasting health, good spirits and contentment. Ferrozone contains just what run-down folks need; it cures because it supplies more nutriment than you can get in any other way. 50c per box or six for $2.50 at all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

While the area in fall sown wheat shows a decrease in Ontario there is an increase in the United States.

Correspondents of The Farmer and Stock Breeder report a decrease in the seeding of winter wheat in England.

American live stock operators expect a material decrease in market receipts of fat cattle during the January to June period.

The formation of ice on the surface of fields is fatal to alfalfa. This condition is most apt to occur on fields that are level or that contain pockets.

Preacher—"Let everyone in the congregation who desire to go to the Better Land to stand up." Almost everybody rose. Preacher—"Now, let everybody who desires to go to the other place stand up." No one rose. After a minute or two a man in the back seats slowly got up and said "I don't particularly want to go to the other place, but I am willing to stand up rather than let the minister go there alone!"

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema—and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning—as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WHAT A WAR SHRINE IS

A war shrine is a Roll of Honor on the tablets of which the names of those who have gone from the street in which the shrine stands into the navy and the army, and those who have died for their country, are written. The shrine contains a form of prayer for the men. There is a canopy of flags, and the whole is ornamented with flowers laid fresh upon the shrine by the women and children, who stand in silent prayer for the heroes for a few moments every day.

SCRAP SHELLS

Foreman Used Forged Die For Stamping Shells

The maximum penalty of six months' imprisonment was passed in Nottingham, England, on an under foreman named Ernest Rowland for using a forged die to stamp shells. He was formerly employed at a shell factory in Nottinghamshire and in a Government aircraft factory in Worcestershire. It was stated by the Public Prosecutor that the prisoner, while working in Nottinghamshire, had made for himself a stamp with the initials of one of the inspectors and the broad arrow, and with this he confessed to having stamped 800 to 1,000 shells. Many of the shells so stamped were only fit for scrap. Had one of these got into a gun it might have killed the gun team.

Germless Uniforms

Interesting experiments in rendering cloth antiseptic so that when carried into the flesh in bullet or other wounds it will not act as a breeding centre of germs have just been carried out by Dr. Mary Davies, bacteriologist of one of the French military hospitals. She was successful with bits cloth from the uniforms of French soldiers, which she boiled in dilutions of pyzol.

Vast Sum to Sailors' Credit

The Admiralty has decided that all such prize money from this war shall be put into a general fund, in which shall participate all those who have been engaged in the work of the navy, at the end of the war. It has been reckoned by men fairly competent to judge such matters that there must lie to-day to Jack's credit in this way a total not far short of $20,000,000.

WAR WORKERS' BETTER LOT

How the war has improved the conditions of children in the poorest districts of London by giving their parents plenty of employment is strikingly shown in a report of the West Ham Education Authority. The statement gives the number of needy children fed at the borough's school dining centres and at restaurants. For the periods from June 19 to September 16, 1916, a record of meals given to the little ones was as follows: 1914, breakfasts, 73,867; dinners, 32,466, 1915: breakfasts, 27,645; dinners, 32,296, 1916: breakfasts, 17,035; dinners, 21,854.

MEDALS FROM JOFFRE

Decoration of Heroes of Maurepas—Impressive Scene

Gerald Campbell of the London Daily Mail writes in part: Everything and everyone was curiously silent. Except for the whirring of a solitary aeroplane overhead, and one or two sharp words of command from the officers, there was hardly a sound, till suddenly the band struck up a spirited drum and bugle march, and then the "Marchons, Marchons!" of the "Marseillaise," and the general came. There was none of the ordinary pomp of a military ceremony in time of peace. He was in undress uniform and on foot, and accompanied by only two officers.

Walking rather heavily but astonishingly quickly for a man of his build, the generalissimo went straight up to the right flank of the line and then along it to the far end, without a word or a gesture except once to salute the regimental flag at the centre of the central battalion. Still all this time, and until the general had finally left the ground, there was always the same unbroken, deathly silence.

Even when he pinned the medals on the breasts of the handful of men drawn up in front of the three battalions, and when he decorated the flag of the regiment with the Croix de Guerre—the proud distinction won at Maurepas—there was not a sound. General, people, and soldiers, they were too near war and death for the ordinary noisy demonstrations of life.

THE GREAT TANK IDEA

Questions as to the Original Inventor Are Evaded

At a meeting of Parliament those who sought information about tanks found that Mr. Lloyd-George had little to tell. "They have been a very considerable success and I think they will render still more invaluable services," he contented himself with saying. If it was desired to know to whom the credit for the "tanks" was due, one or two names would have to be mentioned. There were great Admiralty experts whose services had been very valuable. In the designing of the machine the chief naval constructor of the Admiralty had probably the greatest share. He must mention, too, Sir Maurice Hankey, the secretary of the War Committee, to whom they were very considerably indebted for the first suggestion that something of this kind should be tried. But the suggestions would never have fructified had it not been for Mr. Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, who set up a committee to carry the suggestions into effect and put the whole of his energy and strength into materialising the hopes of those who had been looking forward to a machine of this kind.

Reply to Hymn of Hate

A writer in the London Chronicle says: Most of us have heard of the Hymn of Hate, and of how the British and French troops quickly learned it, and then astonished the Germans by yelling it triumphantly back to them across the waste land between. At a well known and popular seaside resort the band was asked as a favor to play it to the audience, who were curious to know what it was like. The band did so, and at the end a notice was put up bearing the words, "Our reply." Everybody, naturally enough, got ready to stand up, expecting to hear the national anthem, but were much astonished and amused when the band began to play softly and tenderly, "Two Lovely Black Eyes!"

PASSING OF THE ATTIC.

Old-Time Reservoir of Cast-offs Being Crowded Out.

An eastern newspaper laments the passing of the attic. The modern house is without this historic museum of the family. And as for the flat, why, the attic of the flat is a miserable little store-room in the basement. Where the attic once flourished in the old-fashioned mansion, with the clock on the stairs, there is now a luxurious suite for the cook, or for the boys. And the walls have paper with pink roses on it, and there is plumbing and all that sort of thing. Where are the trivial fond records of the family's long or recent past now kept?

In this section of the country we take heart of grace. A sale to aid the cause of woman suffrage reveals the outpouring, if not of the familiar attic, yet of something that must have taken its place — possibly the larger and more frequent closet with a window in it."

FORCE WOMEN TO WORK

A decree promulgated in the principality of Lippe, Germany, threatens all women who refuse to work in the fields as harvesters with punishment. Those who, as wives of soldiers at the front, are drawing separation allowances, will be deprived of them. In the event of being inaccessible to any financial forfeit of this kind, the women shirkers will be imprisoned. An almost identical decree has been promulgated in the Duchy of Altenburg.

THE WAR OF DELIVERANCE.

Dr. Helfferich then quoted an historic German song which a century ago during the War of Deliverance inspired the German troops:—"The Lord who made iron to grow wants no slaves."

"This is as true to-day as it was a century ago, as it always will be," said the Minister. "This is a war carried on not only with arms but it is an economic war of nations. England, which always speaks of protecting neutrals, has by her interference with mails, spying system and blacklists cut off necessary imports from them and has caused them more damage than ever an enemy could do.

"In this economic war we, together with our allies, stand in all essential things alone. Our enemies can continue to import from across the seas. England, as her Chancellor of the Exchequer has stated, has thus bought every week to the amount of twelve million pounds, which is twelve thousand million marks a year. France during ten months paid for the same purpose twelve thousand million francs. Half the world is at our enemies' disposal.

"We have no transatlantic imports. We must rely upon our own work and must produce what we need by our own work. The earth yields what we need for food. But we must work and once more have peace. This law mobilizes work. It does not begin, but completes the mobilization of national work."

Emperor William sent the following telegram to Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg on the Chancellor's sixtieth birthday:—

"I thank you from my heart for the loyal faithfulness with which in this most serious time you have stood at my side, giving advice and assistance. May God give you in your new year of life health and vigor for further work in the service of the King and the beloved country. May He give you and us all a final victorious end of this stormy time of struggle."

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me.' A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefitted by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from ever getting glasses. Eye trouble often disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent. in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and in one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family". Sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co., and other druggists.

The Chauffeur Had—!

A rich man one day stopped at a hotel for lunch. After finishing his meal he called the waiter and asked for the bill. "I have had two cups of coffee, three sandwiches and a cigarette. And then there's the chauffeur downstairs. What has he had?" "The chauffer, sir," said the waiter, "why he had a fried sole, lamb cutlets and peas, a cup of coffee, a shilling cigar, and two glasses of champagne!"

Had Bronchitis FOR YEARS

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold and if neglected, will surely turn into pneumonia. The first symptom is a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing and a feeling of oppression or tightness about the chest.

The phlegm raised from the bronchial tubes is at first of a light color, but as the disease progresses it becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often hard to raise.

Dr. Wood's Norway is just the remedy that you require as it loosens the phlegm and heals the lungs and bronchial tubes.

Mrs. Chas. Brean, Amherst, N. S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I found gave me instant relief. I think it is the best remedy for bronchitis that I know of. I now take care that I always have a bottle on hand."

"Dr. Wood's" is the genuine, put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

A Poser for the Teacher.—"Now, remember, children, the tares represent the bad people and the wheat the good ones," observed the teacher of the Sunday school class. "Why, Miss Mason?" exclaimed a rosy cheeked boy who had been listening through the lesson with deep interest. "Did you say the tares are the bad folks and the wheat the good ones?" "Yes, Jamie," replied the teacher, pleased at the lad's interest. "Well, that's funny, I think," remarked the matter of fact child. "It's the wheat that gets thrashed; the tares don't."

Up Sixpence a Bottle.—Sandy McPhee, who was on a brief visit to London, was having a chat with a casual acquaintance. He spoke feelingly of the terrible toll war had taken from the fair land of Scotia. "Why, mon, we're jist distractit wi' it," he concluded. "And I suppose the war has caused the price of provisions to go up in Scotland as well as everywhere else?" said the acquaintance with sympathy. "Ay, mon, ye're richt!" agreed Sandy. "Provisions has gone up in price saxpence the bottle!"

He Thought the Load Would Get Through.—To and fro marched the sentry before the gate of a certain field—so many paces this way, and then the same number the other. A gentleman, almost as broad as he was long, approached him as follows: "I say, my man, when I go through here?" The sentry paused in his perambulations to gaze at the ponderous figure of his questioner. Then he rear, but a cartload of hay managed to get through this morning.

Order Hard to Fill.—The matron of a certain hospital in France, for some reason of her own, thought that the "Tommies" under her care should not visit a neighbouring village. Passes were allowed, but they were few and far between. One day a "Tommy" applied for a pass, and the matron asked him why he wanted to go to the village. "I want to get something from a shop there," he said. "Well, as I am going to the village myself I may as well get it for you," was her reply. "Well, bring me a hair-cut and a shave!" replied the man.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sentation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying, and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then set normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

The HOME CIRCLE COLVAN

Progress in Diagnosis: It is quite probable that the greatest step forward in finding out disease conditions has been made through the careful and painstaking work of Dr. George Starr White of Los Angeles, Cal. Although Dr. White has given full credit for the first discovery of the Electronic method of Dr. Albert Abrams of San Francisco.

To be able, in the very beginning of such cases, to correctly diagnose such diseases as Tuberculosis, Cancer, Syphilis, pus formation and others of that nature without being forced to rely upon the symptoms as explained by the patient or by the observations of the physician through physical examination and laboratory tests is certainly a long step in the right direction and is almost beyond our comprehension or belief.

During the quarter of a century that I have been teaching people how to get well and how to live right I have had many letters from persons that complain of insomnia when in certain bedrooms and quiet restful sleep in others. Investigation has nearly always shown that the bed in which they could not get restful sleep was so placed that the head was toward the east while those in which they slept well was toward the north or south. The Electronic discoveries of Dr. Abrams fully explains the why and wherefore, while Dr. White's work goes on to demonstrate why I had such great success in the treatment, many years ago, of various conditions with different colored lights. I quote the last part of an article by Dr. White, published in Clinical Medicine for April.

"That colors play a very important role in the physical world, no one disputes, but it was only of late that we had a way to prove easily that colors play an important part in the human economy. We will not go into this subject of colors, except so far as it pertains to our subject, Electronic Diagnosis.

We think Dr. Albert Abrams was the first one to utilise colored screens in diagnosing disease. From the impetus given by his teaching we have tried to go farther, and the following are some of our most recent observations. We hope others will go on with this great work and reveal to the profession all the facts possible relating to diagnosis and the ramifications along the lines laid down in these papers.

Yellow, as well as photographers' 'safety-color' seems to have an entirely different effect upon the emanation of human energy than do blue or the colors of shorter wave length.

We mentioned above that the right hand of a normal female and the left hand of a normal male would produce the visceral reflex under certain conditions. How we find that the polarity of the male and the female is reversed for an hour or more if either drink a yellow liquid such as tea, saffron water, orange juice and the like. If one ingest a red or blue substance, such as red beets or a blue coloring matter, immediately after ingesting the yellow substance, no change in polarity is observed.

Since having discovered the effects of the magnetic meridian upon the reflexes, we have tested a limited number of persons suffering from tuberculosis and syphilis, and find that if they stand facing due north or south no visceral reflex is obtained. In these cases we find that if the disease be tuberculosis a yellow or a 'safety' colored light shed on the bare abdomen will produce the reflex, and a blue light will not. If the case be one of syphilis a blue light shed in the same way produces the reflex, while the yellow light will not. This discovery is too recent to be made the subject of a complete report now, but we mention it in order to aid others in working out diagnostic data.

In his book "Spondylotherapy", 5th edition, Dr. Albert Abrams mentions that the sex of an unborn child can be determined by the polarity of the mother. This we have found to be true, but we have also discovered that, if the mother ingest any yellow substance, the polarity is changed for an hour or so. In testing polarity of persons, make sure that they have not eaten or drunk anything for at least five hours prior to the examination.

Reasoning from the old writings of some observers of colors, we concluded that the colored—sunlight—water should change the reflex. We put some distilled water in an amber bottle and let it stand in the sunlight for a whole day. We then let some men and women drink a little of this ambereau. Within three minutes the polarity of each person was changed, and it remained changed from one-half to two hours. This shows what an incalculably sensitive method we have at our command for diagnosing disease and observing changes in the human energy.

The "visceral reflex of Abrams" is an epoch-making discovery in medicine, and we urge all who can to perfect themselves in this work and thus simplify diagnosis. Eventually we hope to find new methods along these lines for curing diseases."

Sir Douglas Haig in his report upon The Battle of the Somme, writes:

"First let me thank the munitions workers. This magnificent victory could not have been won without the self-sacrifice and devotion of those women and men who have so faithfully laboured to provide us with the munitions necessary to carry out our plans."

When the history of this war is written, the part played by the munitions workers will rank in importance second only to that of the soldiers and sailors.

To-day the cry is for more and yet more munitions.

So Anxious to Marry.—Together they sat in front of the flickering fire, thinking of all the happiness that might be theirs when they were married. Edwin gazed on the girl with admiration. She was very pretty, and her complexion was of that lovely, delicate kind which the poets never tire of praising. "Ethel" he whispered, wondering when his fiancee would permit of his asking her to share his life, "you are getting more lovely every day." She sighed, then murmured:—"You see, dear, I am living on milk and brown bread so as to improve my complexion. I mean to keep that diet up indefinitely." "Oh, my darling," cried Edwin taking her in his arms," "then let us get married at once!"

Not a War Summons.—Young John was an ardent volunteer, and had offered for the front. A letter came addressed to him. "On His Majesty's Service." It caused great dismay to his mother's heart. "That'll be orderin' him off to the war," she said, with a mournful sigh, and she placed it on the mantel-shelf to await his coming. When he appeared she assailed him with, "That's what ye get wi' yer volunteerin'" and from her woe-begone appearance on would have thought she already saw him lying stark through the effects of a German bullet. Despair was, however, turned to joy, and something of laughter besides, when, on opening the epistle it was found to be the annual reminder that his dog tax was due.

Very Strange.—Little Willie would at times acquire an absorbing thirst for information, and on such occasions would give his parents uneasy quarters of an hour. "Pa," he said, one evening, holding up a seed, "if I plant this will it grow into an apple tree?" "Of course it will," replied the father. "That is one of the most interesting things in nature. You see, my son, the apple is just a covering for the seed, and——" "And would it grow into a big apple-tree, papa?" went on the bright little fellow. "Of course," returned his parent, somewhat snappishly. "That is what I am telling you about." "Well, it's very strange, pa," Willie continued "for, you see, this is the seed of a pear!"

Stiff Necked Rapture.—The youthful orator came down from the platform at the close of his address, and many people pressed forward to shake him by the hand. He accepted their congratulations with a smiling face, but his eyes were on a certain man who lingered in his seat. The young lecturer pressed through the throng about him and extended his hand to the waiting man. "I want to thank you," he said to that gentleman, "for the close attention you gave to my remarks. Your upturned face was an inspiration to me. I am sure you never changed your earnest attitude during my lecture. "No," said the man; "but don't flatter yourself on that account; I have a stiff neck."

When a man is sure of a woman's sympathy he adds from 50 to 100 per cent. to his choicest hard luck stories.

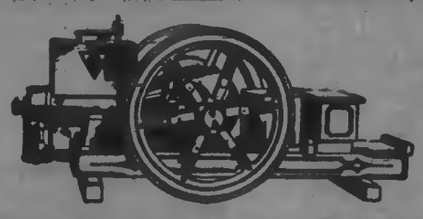
These pictures were taken during the recent sham fight in the locality of Cedarvale when 8,000 of the overseas troops stationed in Toronto divided into a "Blue Army" attacking, and a "White Army" defending, were engaged. At the top the 228th Northern Fusiliers, composing part of the White Army, are shown crossing an open space in extended order to meet the invaders. At the bottom to the left the signallers of the 228th are seen crossing Cedarvale bridge. In the right corner Lieut.-General Sir Sam Hughes, former Minister of Militia, is shown with his staff. The General is conversing with a distinguished American visitor, Col. George H. Putnam, of New York.

Thousands of sorrowing citizens lined Toronto streets to witness the impressive military funeral of Lieut.-Col. W. D. Allan, D.S.O., former commander of the 3rd (Toronto) overseas battalion in France, who died in England through an illness caused by wounds received on service. The remains were brought to Toronto for interment. The picture shows the gun-carriage, bearing the coffin, about to leave St. Andrews' Church, Jarvis and Carlton Streets. Lieut.-Col. G. H. Williams, the senior Chaplain of Military District No. 2, is in the foreground. The firing party shown with reversed arms is from the 198 (Buffs) overseas battalion, one of the units recruited by the Queen's Own Rifles; the late Col. Allan having been an officer in the popular Toronto regiment when he enlisted for overseas service. All the militia units in Toronto Garrison marched in the funeral procession.



You Get the Biggest Engine Value For Your Money When You Buy an

Alpha Gas Engine

YOU should measure the value you receive for the money you pay for a gas engine by what the engine will do for you.

Possibly you can buy an engine for less money than you can an Alpha, but you cannot buy an equal amount of good service in any other engine for so little money.

In the Alpha you get for your money more years of service, the lowest fuel cost, exceptional freedom from the need of repairs and the easiest engine to operate and care for.

The Alpha is a simple engine, with plenty of power, perfectly controlled by a Governor that keeps it running steadily and smoothly under light, heavy or varying loads. This engine has no complicated, delicate parts to require constant attention—not even batteries. It starts and operates on a single low speed magneto. You can use either kerosene or gasoline for fuel.

You need a gas engine on your farm. In a very short time the saving resulting through its use would pay for an Alpha. Buy an Alpha now. That is the quickest and best way to save the money that is to pay for the engine. Ask for a copy of the Alpha Engine catalogue. It contains a lot of valuable information about engines.

BIG MASS MEETING SUNDAY EVENING AT 8.30 O'CLOCK

Russians Threaten to Envelop the Entire Teutonic Army in Roumania

Western Part of Cernavoda Bridge is Captured by the Czar's Troops While Gigantic Smash at Enemy's Armies in Carpathian Mountains is Continuing---Uneasiness in Berlin Over the Advance of the Russians---Armistice in Greece Has Failed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Eng., December 2.—(Special Cable) — That the Russians threaten to envelop and bring disaster on the entire Teuton army of Von Falkenhayn and part of that of Von Mackensen, is indicated in to-day's Petrograd despatches.

A simple paragraph in the Russian official statement at noon to-day, Saturday, declared that the Russians had gained the western part of Cernavoda Bridge. This points to to the presence of a powerful Russian force with the Roumanians in Dobrudja, and shows an activity in that direction, entirely apart from the Russian offensive in the Carpathians, which is making a grand smash against Von Falkenhayn's troops.

Details at present are rather obscure, but the entire news, coupled with the reports of great uneasiness in Berlin regarding the Russians' new advances, lead to high hopes here that the much-feared Roumanian defeat will be turned into a gigantic coup for the Allies.

Even though Bucharest be temporarily taken by the Teutons, it is believed here that the great envelopment and capture of the Germanic forces may still be accomplished.

15 PER CENT. INCREASE FOR SOUTH WALES MINERS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 2.—The Government to-day granted demands of South Wales miners for a fifteen per cent. increase in wages. The decision follows the announcement of the "nationalization" of the mines and operation by a Government commission.

Bulgarian Counter Attacks Are Failures

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, December 2.—The repulse by the Serbians of a violent counter-attack by Teutonic troops against their positions north of Gruniata and the continuance of violent artillery combats in the Monastir region, was detailed in to-day's official statement.

British Beat Off Foes Trench Raid

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, December 2.—Two small trench raids, preceded by heavy fire of mortars, were beaten off by the British forces near Souches yesterday evening, General Sir Douglas Haig reported to-day. His report also mentioned hostile artillery firing north of Ypres and near Gueudecourt.

PETROGRAD, December 2.—"We gained the western part of the Cernavoda Bridge," the official statement declared to-day, detailing further advances in the great Russian offensive.

PETROGRAD, December 2.—Roumanian forces are successfully withstanding the Teutonic pressure toward Bucharest.

To-day's official statement asserted that all enemy attacks had been repelled in the southern fighting below the Roumanian capital and that the enemy had been driven from the villages of Komana and Gostinari, which they had captured yesterday.

ROME, December 2.—News from German sources states that there is great concern in Berlin at the incredible violence of the Russian attacks in Eastern Transylvania and on the northwest frontier of Hungary.

General Brussiloff, employing fresh troops and countless guns, is defying the season and snow, with the evident intention of penetrating Hungary and getting behind Falkenhayn's army operating in Wallachia.

Archduke Joseph is demanding large reinforcements as he fears he can no longer resist the Russian pressure.

OTTAWA, December 2.—The International Arms and Fuse Co., one of the United States concerns brought into the limelight by the fuse inquiry last spring, has secured a Dominion charter with capitalisation of one million.

LONDON, December 2.—Rumours that David Lloyd George was packing up his belongings in his office as Minister of War, were printed to-day in the London Evening News in support of the report that he was preparing to leave that post.

It has been persistently rumoured lately that Asquith would retire and Lloyd George take the Premiership. Another prominent report to-day is that Bonar Law, leader of the Unionists, is slated for the next Premier of the British coalition government.

Cabinet changes involving the resignation of Premier Asquith are predicted by the Manchester Guardian, in an article in to-day's issue. The paper says: "Rumours, perhaps one ought to say more than rumours, are going around in the lobby of imminent changes, the current rumour being that Bonar Law may replace Premier Asquith for the time being, but that a final settlement would be Lloyd George as Prime Minister."

The Guardian concludes that the coalition government has not collective prestige to resist the attacks being made upon it, and that the House of Commons has reached the mood in which it is ready to create another ministry.

The Express says that a political crisis has suddenly arisen and that the coalition government is likely to go.

The War Council should meet daily, the Chronicle says. In all likelihood it would be composed of the following members: The Prime Minister, Lloyd George, Balfour, Bonar Law and Carson. Jellicoe and Robertson will, of course, be present at all meetings of the War Council as its naval and military advisers.

Some papers suggest Jellicoe and Robertson definitely as members of the Cabinet.

PART OF ROUND UP

Chas. Perry, proprietor of the American Hotel, Hunter street, pleaded guilty in police court this morning to having liquor on his premises, contrary to the Temperance Act. He was fined $200 and $9.35 costs. The American Hotel, Hunter street, pleaded Chief Thompson's men in the raid that followed the recent haul of whiskey imported from Hastings. That particular cargo was confiscated in a private garage owned by another citizen, whose trial is pending. It was stated that the whiskey found by the police was a partly emptied flask in the proprietor's hip pocket.

COMMENT ON THE MARKET SITUATION

Grocery Trade has Been Unsettled—Sugar Dropped During the Week.

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

The week in the wholesale grocery trade has been unsettled. Flour advanced to $10.50 per barrel in car lots, but dropped down to $10.20 on Tuesday, when the wheat market continued in a sagging condition. There is uncertainty as to what the future holds in store. Millers feel there is underlying strength in wheat, but that speculative interests have perhaps succeeded in sending the price down. Sugar dropped 10c. per hundred pounds during the week. Demand for this commodity is quiet at present.

Butter, cheese and eggs are recorded advances during the week. Lard and compound are also firm. Stocks of dried fruits in wholesalers hands are becoming smaller without a chance to replenish in certain instances. Currants from Greece are on the way, but will hardly reach this country in time for the Christmas trade. Teas are firm. Package tea men in certain instances have advanced their goods 3c per pound on all grades. Beans have been in strong market, with advances recorded. Business has been fairly good during the week in the face of shortages in many lines.

Honour Roll Will Be Read

The Honour Roll will be read at the evening service of All Saints' Church to-morrow.

PETERBOROUGH RETURNED SOLDIERS' CLUB.

There will be a musical evening followed by a special attraction held in the Recreation Room at the Armouries on Monday evening at 8 p.m. All overseas returned soldiers welcome. Subscription 25 cents a month. It is important that all returned soldiers be present as there is some interesting information to be given out.

A CHANCE FOR THE RETURNED SOLDIERS

The Soldiers' Aid Commission has been asked by the Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada to supply the names and addresses of men, returned from active service, partially disabled, such as may be competent to fill positions as office hands, orderlies, etc. Vacancies will shortly occur in the public services and it is desirable to secure names of men who will apply for such positions.

The duty of securing these names has been handed over to the Local Branch, at the Patriotic Fund Rooms. Will any who would like to have their applications forwarded at once apply. Care will be taken to forward, as fully as possible, the status, qualifications, etc., of applicants.

It will be observed that here is an opportunity that should be at once availed of, and if men do not come forward and apply, it will be little use saying that opportunity has not been offered for entry into the public service. Those who read this announcement will help by calling the attention of returned men to the facts. Register at the Office of the Patriotic Fund.

O'Flynn, of the 247th Battalion, will commence at 8:30 o'clock sharp, an hour that will not interfere with the churches. The Armouries will be comfortably heated, and there will be plenty of seating accommodation. The Band of the 57th Regiment under the direction of Lieutenant Gliddon will render an attractive programme.

Hon. Martin Burrell is the first Cabinet Minister to visit Peterborough for some time, and it is expected that a huge audience will welcome the Minister of Agriculture.

The Kingston Standard says: The recruiting returns have been issued for the third military district, covering the past two weeks in the month of November, and they show a tremendous jump in recruits. For the past two weeks in November the number of recruits secured was 407, and for the last two weeks in October, the number was 286. For the last two weeks in the past month the number has jumped to 628. Brockville stands at the head with 115 recruits; followed by Renfrew with 107; and Lt.-Col. Allen of the 254th Battalion, Belleville, with an existence of only a couple of weeks, shows up with 93 recruits for his new Battalion.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman is expected back in the city from his recruiting tour in North Hastings, this evening. He has been visiting Bancroft, Marmora, and other points.

Nothing more has been heard about the 93rd Band. As will be seen in the picture in the illustrated section of The Examiner to-day, a number of the 93rd Band have been playing with the band of the 39th Reserve Battalion, at West Sandling.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—It is officially announced through the Chief Press Censor's Office that the undermentioned troops have arrived safely in England: 171st (Quebec) Battalion, partly French-Canadian, 202nd (Alberta) Battalion; 242nd (Forestry) Battalion, Montreal; drafts: artillery, infantry, Army Service Corps and Army Medical Corps.

France, Nov. 13, 1916.

Mrs. Schwier, 491 Sherbrooke street, has received the following letter:

Dear Madam,—With great pleasure I am writing these few lines to thank you for the pair of socks I received from you in the parcel that was sent to me by the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, and I can assure you that they will be highly appreciated by me. The weather out here at present is very wet, and when one has a pair of dry socks to slip on in the morning he does not mind it very much. All the boys appreciate the kindness of those at home, and know that our welfare and comfort will be well looked after by them. So I will close by thanking you once again, and wishing you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. I am,

Yours sincerely,

Quebec Deputation May Visit the City

Peterborough may be included in the itinerary of a delegation from Quebec that is expected will respond to a cordial invitation to visit Ontario to complete the preliminary inter-association in the Bonne Entente movement between the two provinces. It will likely be made early in January and more definite information regarding the plans will be forthcoming in a short time. The movement now has a permanent executive and Ald. Dobbin, who attended the Montreal meeting on Thursday, reports that good results have already been observed in the business and social inter-relations.

WANTED—First-Class General Servant, immediately for small family, good wages to a suitable person. Apply between 6 and 8 o'clock at No. 317 Reid Street.

Address By An Overseas Worker

Captain T. W. Jones, a Y.M.C.A. overseas worker and a splendid speaker, will address a meeting of the Canadian Kitchener League on Monday evening, December 4th, at 8 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. building. The League asks the assistance of all interested. Much has been done for the comfort of the Peterborough boys in the trenches, but there is still much to do and no one should be idle. The ladies have lots of yarn on hand and the boys are still calling for socks. Attend the Monday evening meeting and you cannot fail being interested.

WOULD YOU

Wear a pair of glasses that did not suit, or let not look becoming on you? Of course not, you say. Then why take chances? Dr. Lacey guarantees all his work to give perfect satisfaction. See him at his new office 430 George street.

GREAT BATTLE NOW TO SAVE ROUMANIA

CAPT. E. V. FREDERICK
Well-known Peterborough Doctor who is seriously ill with malaria fever, at the Alexandria Hospital, Egypt.

HAS BEEN A BAD WEEK FOR THE BRITISH MINISTRY

Public has been Demanding Co-operation with Roumania and is Incensed With the Apparently Slack Policy in Greece.

PEACE TALK NOT SERIOUS

Copyright 1916, Central News.
(T. P. O'Connor, M.P.)

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The aspect of affairs in Roumania was bound to have its reflection in the House of Commons. Hence, it was no surprise that the ministry should have had a bad week. There is still much talk of a reconstruction of the Cabinet, but no active steps have been taken in that direction as yet. The public on the one hand demanding active co-operation with Roumania and on the other incensed by the slack policy in Greece are engaged in a controversy as to whether the present state of affairs is due to civilian interference or to military obstinacy. In the meantime the German victories in Roumania are being more coolly appraised and to-day the feeling is practically unanimous that they will not bring the Germans one inch nearer winning the war, but may possibly bring her the respite of another year before finally losing the conflict.

Not Taken Seriously.

The peace propaganda in America is not taken seriously here where it is regarded simply as a manoeuvre initiated by Germany and encouraged by hyphenated Germans who are inspired solely by the future welfare of the Fatherland. Except among conscientious objectors to war the whole opinion in this country remains that it were better never to have entered the conflict than to stop before Germany has received such defeats as will ensure Europe against the arrogant menace of the Teutons for another half century. Lloyd George still holds to the doctrines more strongly than ever, that if the Ministry were even contented to even contemplating peace, any settlement proposed would be overthrown in an hour.

Irish affairs are still being quietly discussed behind the scenes but it will not be until April or May of next year, that any attempt will be made toward a renewal of the negotiations. It is generally understood that the matter will not be taken up again until certainty of success in the outcome is assured.

I have made the observation so often that I am almost ashamed to repeat it, that Irish politics are like a Kaleidoscope, you cannot tell what will happen the next week, the next day, or the next moment from the incidents of the present day. Thus as the Sinn Fein Rebellion burst upon an apparently calm and tranquil sky, so again the events transformed an Ireland in fierce hostility to the Sinn Feiners into a nation if not sympathizing with them, at least hating more fiercely their executioners; so the curious paradox immediately followed that the disapproval of the Ministry seemed to divert itself to disapproval of the Irish party. For a few weeks things looked very serious

A WIN FOR ROUMANIANS

(By Arthur S. Draper.)

LONDON, Dec. 1.—From the Carpathian Passes of southern Galicia to the Black Sea the great Roumanian battle is raging with hardly a break in the entire line.

South of Kirlibaba, in the face of violent fire, the Czar's troops swept forward to-day and conquered a whole range of important heights. From that district to the southern Moldavian frontier their repeated assaulted won local successes, cooperating with the Roumanians in the Buzeu Valley they swept a ridge of heights east and south of the village of Krasna, and in the Oituz Valley pressed forward.

Roumanians Triumph.

To-night's Russians statement follows:

"Roumanian front: In Transylvania in the Oituz Valley the Roumanians continue to press the enemy. In the Buzeu Valley Roumanian troops have occupied a ridge of heights east and south of the village of Krasna. In the Izborutatarashki section we encountered strong enemy cavalry.

"Danube front: On the roads to Bucharest from Babukatu, Beldiri and Kalugareni all enemy attacks have been beaten back. The village of Konari (Tzoniana) and Gostinari have been occupied by the enemy and patrols have appeared in the region of Lake Gretsh (Griaka).

Closing on Bucharest.

The forces of Falkenhayn and Mackensen are closing in on Bucharest from the northwest and southwest to attempt a final blow at the capital. While the invaders' big siege guns are being brought up for the bombardment, the military authorities are preparing to defend the city to the last shot. The population is reported to have fled. Russian troops are reported by a Berlin paper to have reached Bucharest.

The advanced patrols of the Teutons have reached the region of Lake Griaka near the Danube, to the southeast of Bucharest. This indicates that the invader will attempt to turn the position from the east as well as the north and west.

The loss of the towns of Caracana and Gostinari is admitted by Petrograd which asserts, however, that the roads to the capital are being successfully defended against the enemy's onslaughts.

Russ Impact Invaders.

Along a fifteen mile front extending from Jablonitza Pass the great gateway between Galicia and Hungary, in the southern Moldavian front, the Russians have sprung to the attack with their mightiest forces. At several points on this long line the Germanic forces have found themselves unable to cope with the furious onslaughts of the Czar's troops, and have yielded valuable ground. The Russian offensive is assuming such proportions that it is threatening the ruin of Mackensen's plans.

Drive Gathers Momentum.

A Petrograd despatch says the Russian drive into the wooded district of the Carpathians, which began three days ago with the purpose of diverting part of General von Falkenhayn's troops from the Roumanian front and preventing a further invasion of Roumania on the Transylvanian side, is gathering momentum as it proceeds. The drive, reports received here say, has now developed into operations

NAVAL CHANGES.

Superficial regard of the changes in the British Admiralty and Navy would suggest that something had been going wrong, and, perhaps, there was. Both branches of the service may have grown "stale" from a condition of inaction, with nothing for the navy to do but exercise "watchful waiting." Public opinion and even government feeling may have been affected by the enforced inactivity of the navy, and unconsciously be influenced by the need for a change in responsibility. If such a thing were needed, naval interests have been highly served by the change. We have now in the Admiralty, in the person of Sir John Jellicoe, the best possible equipment for improved strategic administration — a mind fresh from active sea service, who will obviously be the better head for directing the striking arm of the nation—the Navy. And in Sir David Beatty we have a supreme commander who is admirably equipped by experience, and with proved ability, to make every blow count, and to make the blows frequent. It will be no surprise to hear that with the new alignment of head and hand, the Royal Navy will be heard from in a new and aggressive way. It is a proud record of the British Navy that in the past it has never failed the nation in the time of need. Now is its greatest hour of stress in its history, and we have supreme confidence that in an increasing way the Navy is able to meet, and will meet, every emergency, and contribute, as it has done all through this war, the lion's share of help in winning the victory we are striving for.

HUMBUG.

A correspondent of the Mail and Empire, writing in regard to United States relations to Canada, says that, though the idea has been modified by the recent demonstration of Canada's closeness with the Empire, our neighbors have always been anxious to possess Canada and had attempted to capture it in the Revolutionary war, in 1812, in 1866? and "in 1911 by the reciprocity bill." Such absurd nonsense—is now altogether discredited. That the very government that gained power under the false pretence that war with a neighbour meant absorption, has given the lie to their declaration by their own action. When "scabs" were wanted for shells contracts offered by the British government the Canadian government no only refused Canadians a chance to manufacture them, but sent the orders to United States. No fear then that "free and trade with the Yankees" meant gradual absorption of Canada, but more than the government felt ashamed of the same kind when, without giving Canadian architects or contractors a chance, it gave the building of a $10 million [illegible] Windsor to a "Yankee" firm of contractors, who employ Canadians in all important positions, believed that greater freedom of trade with the United States would afford boundless endurance to Canada's integrity in the Empire. It was a clever trick of the politicians—the gentlemen of the government—and it in 1911 they don't succeed, as a recent meeting in Halifax, composed, [illegible] of course, of a majority of "Liberals" to chuckle [illegible] with food raves, it was unanimously voted to demand that the government "remove the tariff barriers on food required in Canada" that is, permit free importation from the United States to relieve the scarcity of some articles in Canada. Humbugging political clap trap dies hard.

BE SELF CONTAINED.

In the "public service bulletin," issued by the Ontario Government, by the way, a splendid little publication, with a good deal of valuable statistical information, we find a table showing the amount and value of the mineral production of Ontario for the nine months of 1915 and 1916. This shows that 31,048 tons of nickel matte was produced by the Mond Nickel Company and the Canadian Copper Company, a subsidiary corporation of the International Nickel Company of New Jersey, the reported intermedium of Canadian nickel reaching Germany.

The value of this nickel matte, the unrefined product produced in Ontario in 1916, is placed at fifteen and a half millions—$15,523,000 — more than one-third of the total mineral production of the province—forty-six and a half millions. The point of chief interst in this is that our nickel had its value tremendously increased by being refined out of the country. This refinement added to its value enough to make the total value as refined, much greater than the forty-six millions of the total mineral output of the Province. By not having her nickel ores treated to ultimate condition in this province, Ontario loses much more than a third of the value, besides losing the profit in the employment of labour and capital, which is a matter of much moment. It is stated that the International Nickel Company of the United States reaps profits from the refinement of Ontario nickel matte, of from twelve millions to fifteen million dollars per year. All this profit should come to this province, and that it does not do so is a reproach to the patriotism of our government. The bulletin states that refineries are to be erected in Ontario by the International Nickel Company and the British-American Nickel Corporation. This is good, as far as it provides for home refinement, if it is understood and provided that after the establishment of these plants, not a pound of nickel ore shall go out of the country, even to Swansea, in an unrefined condition; and that the Canadian Government shall have voice in, and control of, the distribution of the refined product.

This would be a practical affirmation and application of the principle that more of Canada's natural resources should be reduced to the virtually ultimate condition in this country, to the end that we shall reap the fullest measure of advantage from the employment of labour and the incidental industrial, economical and transportation advantages. We should not ship a pound of our pulp except in the form of paper, and, under present conditions, not even that, unless our own domestic needs are fully safeguarded and provided for.

We ship millions of bushels of unground wheat out of the country. We boast of our water powers, and yet they are not utilized to promote the milling industry to anything like its capacity. We lose in the employment of labour, and we lose by having the by-products of milling, so to speak, bran, etc., so important a food for cattle, sent out of the country. With the extension of electricity for power purposes, the available Candian area for profitable milling in all its branches is very greatly enlarged. We should not export oats, but oatmeal; we should not export pulp, but paper; we should not export nickel matte, but refined nickel—and should know where it goes, too.

In a word, we should not export anything that can be advantageously manufactured to virtually ultimate form in this country; and even then, we should not transport it in any but our own ships, built in our own shipyards. We should, as far as possible, be self contained to the extent of doing for ourselves all that we can do, manufacturing everything we need, and buying abroad only what we can not successfully produce, or are in need of under conditions of emergency and artificial high prices. Canada for Canadians should not be a mere copy-book headline—but should be lived up to, worked up to, manufactured up to, refined up to.

British Columbia Soldiers' Vote Went Largely Liberal

The accession to office in British Columbia of the Hon. H. C. Brewster marks the termination of a campaign in which for the first time in the history of the Dominion thousands of voters cast their ballots in the trenches and in England. The result of this soldiers' vote throws a light on the cry from some Conservative quarters that the Liberals are disloyal, and that it is mostly Conservatives who have joined the army. If there is one ultra-British province in the Dominion more than another it is British Columbia and she has given her best and bravest to back up Britain and Belgium in this fight for civilization. To these electors were sent ballots to be marked in the general election. What is the result? Of the 25,000 soldiers from British Columbia overseas, 1,000 cast their ballots, and cast them mostly for the Liberal candidates, as the men at home had done on September 16 when the Conservative party in British Columbia was wiped off the map. The soldiers' vote, taken under the auspices and direction of Sir Richard McBride in London, did not change a single seat, but set seal and ratification on the civilian vote at home. What, then, becomes of the wicked assertion of Mr. W. K. McNaught, a public man, one of the recognized leaders of the Conservative party, that the soldiers who have gone overseas from Canada were almost to a man Conservatives? British Columbia furnishes an answer, and the casualties another, even if Sir Sam Hughes had not stated, as he did state on the floor of the House of Commons, that a majority of the officers of the first contingent were Liberals in politics. Mr. McNaught and his kindred are breeding mischief. The fate of their party in British Columbia, vainly relying on the soldiers' vote, should be a warning to them. Their predictions have come to naught!—Montreal Herald.

Lack of Funds Will Not Interfere With Peterboro's Christmas

But in Many Homes There Will Be A Vacant Chair

Times Have Been Good And The Christmas Stocking Will Be Replete With Good Things---Have All Peterboro's Soldier Sons Been Looked After? There Is Still Time To Send Gifts By Letter Post To The Gallant Lads Overseas---Perhaps There Is An Opportunity To Bring Some Cheer Into A Home Whose Bread-Winner Is Overseas---Peterboro's Stores Are Filled With Suitable Gifts.

CHRISTMAS DAY is now less than four weeks away, and Peterborough residents undoubtedly have formulated all their plans for the celebration of the greatest day in the year. These plans have not been held back this year by reason of lack of funds, as was the case not very long ago. Times have been good here in busy Peterborough, and the Christmas stocking, whether actual for the little ones, or symbolical for the grown-ups, who enjoy their Christmas gifts just as much as the tots, will be replete with good things. The farmers are securing greater prices for their products than ever before in the history of Canada. The city resident must pay the increased price, but the factories and stores have been busy, and money is easy. A happy Christmas is predestined.

Will this be the case with the Peterborough men overseas? Have the lads in khaki been remembered at this happy time? Will the off-duty moments in the trenches be made happy in opening Christmas parcels, in distributing good cheer, in reading letters from home? Local organizations have been very busy during the past few weeks, preparing gifts to go overseas, and these have all been mailed. There is still time, however, for small gifts to be sent by letter post, in time to reach the soldier boys by Christmas, and there should be no further delay.

Peterborough's representation overseas is a large one. To date 2,500 men have enlisted in this city. Of these the greater part have reached the firing line. The remainder are either in the Old Land, perfecting themselves by further training, to take the place of those gallant men now actually opposed to the German hosts, or they are undergoing such training here before departing for overseas. From the time that the British reservists left here on August 17, 1914, to the present time, there has been a constant outflow of men to the Old Land—the best of Peterborough's young manhood. The price paid has been heavy. In many homes here this year there will be a seat, set apart, that is vacant. In some cases the seat will never again be filled, and while the dear ones know that death in the country's cause was an honoured one, yet the memory is a dear one, and cannot be stilled. In others, the chair is vacant, but the gifts have been sent away overseas, and in spirit there is still communication between them. In others the family group has been united, the gallant soldier having returned to his home, having "done his bit," and having been invalided from service through wounds honourably sustained and gallantly borne.

There are many homes, again, from which there is not, nor has there been any absent member. Perhaps it is not their fault, but merely their misfortune. In either case they had a duty to perform — to look after the men at the front, and the families left at home. Has it been done? Has the pocketbook been relieved of some of its plentitude to make brighter the hearts of those who have given of their best, their most valued treasure? If not, there is still time and opportunity. Undoubtedly there are a number of families whose bread-winner is at the front, who would be made happier by a hamper of good things, or whose little tots' hearts would be brightened by the gift of some choice toy, doll or games. The stores are replete with good things, the homes are waiting for cheer, and it but remains to connect the two up. The opportunity is presented. If it be taken advantage of, brightness will be radiated, not alone in the homes to which the Christmas cheer has been sent, but also in those homes from which it was sent. This is one case where it is assuredly more blessed to give than to receive. May there be many in Peterborough this Christmas of 1916 who will be so blessed.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

CITY'S BANK ACCOUNT MAY BE TRANSFERRED TO BANK OF TORONTO

Recommendation to This Effect Was Passed at Last Night's Meeting of the Finance Committee—Final Decision in the Matter Rests With the City Council Which Meets on Monday Night.

BETTER RATE QUOTED

At a meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council, held last evening, formal offers were received for the city's banking account. In practically each case the respective banks agreed to handle the city's account on a two per cent. basis, or in other words, pay interest at the rate of three and a half per cent. on credit balances, and charge five and a half per cent. on overdraft accounts. The Bank of Montreal, which now handles the city's account, in addition to the above rates, agreed to do business on a five and three per cent. basis, on overdraft and credit balances, respectively. In the latter case the city would probably save a little over a hundred dollars a year, as the account is more often overdrawn.

Payable at Par.

Included in the offer of the Bank of Toronto, was an arrangement whereby all debentures issued by the city, also debenture coupons, would be payable at par in Toronto, Montreal and New York. Debentures payable this way are preferred, as they sell more readily and are sometimes worth half a point more. The offer made by the Bank of Toronto did not specify whether the Bank would continue to take care of the city's debentures in event of the city changing over to another Bank before any of the debentures matured. If this is agreed to by the Bank of Toronto their offer may be accepted. A resolution to this effect was moved by Ald. McIntyre and seconded by Ald. Saunders. Ald. Stratton, chairman of the Finance Committee, and His Worship Mayor Duffus were deputed to wait upon the manager of the Bank of Toronto, and ascertain whether or not the Bank will undertake to take care of any debentures issued during the time the city may be doing business with the Bank, and continue to take care of them until such debentures reach maturity, even though the account is transferred to another bank.

Paying Six Per Cent.

Up until the present time the city has been receiving three and a half per cent. for credit balances and paying six per cent. on all overdrafts, while the County has been receiving three and a half per cent. and paying five and a half per cent.

Mayor Duffus did not favour the idea of changing from one Bank to another, providing the Bank of Montreal would give just as reasonable terms. He suggested that the matter be further investigated and action withheld in the meantime. The Mayor reminded the Committee of the time when it was necessary to go to the Bank of Montreal with the account, after being refused a loan of one hundred thousand dollars at the Bank of Toronto at a time when the city had seventy-five thousand dollars of a credit balance. This was during the first year of the war when the city's account was changed from the Bank of Toronto to the Bank of Montreal.

The matter will come up at Monday night's meeting of the City Council for further consideration.

COUNTY ASSUMES PAUDASH BRIDGE IN CHANDOS TOWNSHIP

The stentorian voice of Reeve Fred Sullied of Chandos vibrated upon the County Council Friday afternoon in a successful argument for the assumption of Paudash bridge by the County. This bridge is about 105 feet in length and has declined to a dangerous state of delapidation. Reeve McIntosh moved, seconded by Reeve Kitchen that Paudash bridge be assumed.—Carried.

Reeve Bullied—Now that you've got it assumed, what do you think about building it?

It was moved that this work be left with Warden Darling, Reeve Bullied and Reeve Walsh with power to act—Carried.

Reeve Anderson desired the County to take over Taylor's bridge on the road to Wallace's Point, Otonabee. At the June session the Council agreed to pay one-half the cost of its reconstruction, but Mr. Anderson declared that practically a 30 foot bridge was required, and hence the County should assume it.

When Reeve McIntosh objected that this was letting down the bars to various other bridges, Mr. Anderson switched to another tack. Following the precedent of granting Smith an extra $300 for road work, he stated that the work on the road to Hales' bridge, for which the county had granted $400, would cost about $700 altogether, and hence another $300 was required. Warden Darling moved, seconded by Mr. Square, that Otonabee be paid this $300. The township therefore pays half the cost of the bridge the Council the other half and the township is actually assisted to the further extent of $300. Children's Shelter Had To Be Entirely Refurnished At Inauguration Of New System and Management

The Children's Aid Society entered upon a new regime yesterday under the matronship of Miss A. L. Colson. The change of management found the society thoroughly prepared for practically the re-establishment of the Shelter. For several weeks past the ladies of the committee have been busily engaged in purchasing all the requirements of a household due to the fact that the entire equipment, with few minor exceptions, was the property of the late management. Hence the change of officials at the Shelter necessitated a complete refurnishing of the building from kitchen to dormitory.

It is unnecessary to detail the purchases the ladies made. A new kitchen range and utensils, new beds and bed supplies, window blinds, furniture for the various rooms, linoleum, cutlery, dishes and various other household minutiae were all ready this morning to replace the "meubles-ments" of the departing laeres and penates. The dishes alone represented an expenditure of $80, and the total outlay will exceed several hundred dollars. But, the Society now owns the entire equipment, and, as it were, takes on a new lease of life with the new system under which the Shelter will be conducted.

Mrs. Stocker, Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Gibbs and Mrs. Howard have not only been busy during the past week or two, but spent all of Friday until late in the evening in arranging the new furniture. The purchases were carefully distributed among local merchants and there remains the buying of linen and some other articles to complete the equipment.

MADE FINE IMPRESSION.

Miss Colson has made a very favourable impression upon the committee. At the very outset she inaugurated certain changes which it is stated will have a beneficial influence upon the children in a very desirable direction. Of course the business methods recently effected by the Society, such as the purchase of supplies by requisition, are in full operation, and the entire re-organization begins work under very promising and auspicious conditions.

Not only have the committee planned with Miss Colson the details of the Shelter management, but they recently visited St. Vincent's Orphanage and went over that institution with the Mother Superior. One of a number of appealing ideas they noticed was the system by which the children are taught, what might be termed, self-help. And this will be followed at the Shelter. The children will be directed in the performance of many little duties which will place a burden on none of them, but which, it is believed, will foster and develop a habit of neatness and tidiness. Deportment will not be overlooked by Miss Colson, and every attention will be given to the moral training of the children. Her former experience is a valuable asset to the new matron, and the Society has every confidence in the success of her supervision and direction.

a large scale on a line of 200 miles from Korosneso, in the Carpathians, to the River Dovtian, on the Roumanian-Hungarian frontier.

The important line of communications from Kirlibaba to Maramaros-Sugot, which possesses especial value on account of the scarcity of railways and good roads in this region, is now under control of the Russian guns on the neighbouring crests.

Say "Tanks" Are There.

The battering of the Russo-Roumanian forces against the enemy's lines in the Dobrudja has likewise been resumed, and with increased fury. In the desperate hope of breaking the Teutonic defence Sakharoff is using British armoured "tanks" in the support of his columns, according to a Berlin official report.

Make Teutons Speed Up.

Although neither of the great counter-movements has achieved sufficiently big successes to turn the invaders from their drive on Bucharest, both are offering the first real menance to the consummation of Hindenburg's sweeping plan of campaign. The initial victories of the Russians on the northern front have caused the German Commanders to redouble their efforts on the Wallachian Plains in the hope of ending that phase of the campaign with despatch.

It is realized undoubtedly, that any considerable delay in the capture of Bucharest would give the Russians time to carry through their offensive to a point where the invaders might be exposed to grave danger. Nothing could so effectively turn the tables than a sweeping Russian success, comparable to those obtained by the Czar's hosts in Galicia and Volhynia. Apparently the allied staff is preparing for a powerful stand in Bucharest, with just this idea in view. The Cologne Gazette publishes to-day an unconfirmed report that Russian troops have reached the Roumanian capital. The forces referred to are probably units from Sakharoff's Dobrudjan army, come to reinforce the garrison of Bucharest.

No matter how little we may love our neighbours, we can see no good reason why they shouldn't have a kindly feeling for us.

A RECORD OF NOVEMBER WEATHER

Average Temperature for the Month was Higher than Usual—Rainfall Amounted to 2.91

Although November, on several occasions, bore a wintry aspect, the average temperature for the month, as a whole, was somewhat higher than usual. The warmest day was the 8th, with 65 degrees. The lowest temperature was on the 26th, 6 degrees. The first snowfall was on the 4th, which, however, soon disappeared. Another snowfall on the 15th, gave a few days' sleighing. The total rainfall amounted to 2.91, of which .90 was in the form of snow. Last December winter set in on the 9th, and good sleighing was had from the 13th onward.—W. P.

THE WARDEN'S VALEDICTORY

To the Council of the County of Peterborough:

Gentlemen:—I take this opportunity to express to my colleagues of 1916 my appreciation of their loyalty to me as Warden in carrying into effect the various affairs of the County.

This is the greatest crisis in the history of the British Empire, and I trust the ratepayers of the County will co-operate with the different Local Councils as well as the County Council in an utmost endeavour to leave nothing undone that would be conducive to the satisfactory achievements of the Entente Allies. Very true the taxes are added and will be added, but when we consider the necessity of such expenditure it is but a small part to take in the great conflict, compared with the sacrifices made by our brave soldiers that have been and are now in active engagement.

The part taken by the County Council is only an evidence of the feeling entertained by them.

All undertakings have been carried out during the year satisfactorily, and the credit is all due to the whole Council who in harmony worked together.

Permit me to again say that I am deeply indebted to you all for your undivided support and I will always cherish remembrances of the many pleasant and profitable hours spent among you.

C. J. Darling, Warden.

NOVEL CHRISTMAS CLUB OPENS TO EXAMINER READERS ON MONDAY

Club of 50 to Secure Victrolas with Unusual Privileges---Membership only $1.00

An Invitation That Emanates From The Cressman's Home of the Victrola

On Monday morning a unique Christmas Club will be opened to Examiner readers, based on the power of co-operative buying.

It is a Victrola Club with a limited membership of 50, the members of which will enjoy attractive privileges and advantages not possible at any other time or to anyone but a member.

When a large number of people buy the same thing, at the same time, from the same source they profit by co operation. So it is with this Club. This Club is an actual form of co-operative buying, through which attractive privileges and advantages are made possible in the purchase of the world famous Victrolas. Any responsible person may apply for membership, the membership fee being $1, but this fee is refunded to you if you do not buy, or if your application is rejected, and is credited to your account if you do buy.

Anyone paying the $1.00 fee, and joining the Club; has the privilege of selecting his instrument before December 15th, 1916. After making his selection he commences the small Club payments, and the Victrola is delivered to him a few days before Christmas.

Members do not have to make a cash payment, excepting the membership fee; they have the complete variety of Victrolas carried by The Cressman Co., Limited, to choose from.

Members secure their Victrolas at the cash price, but with time payment privileges. The payments are arranged from $1.00 to $5.00 weekly, and the amount members pay weekly depends upon the Victrola which they select. These terms are, in most cases, lower than the regular terms. The Club members do not have to pay the usual interest charges for time payments.

If a Club member is taken sick or is temporarily unemployed, the privilege of half payments is granted for as many months as he has previously paid in full. If at any time within ten days after the Victrola is delivered a member becomes dissatisfied with it he can return it and get back every cent he has paid, less cartage charges or necessary repair costs.

Every instrument is guaranteed to give entire satisfaction, but if at any time within three months a member desires a better Victrola, he can exchange his for any new Victrola or other make of equal value. Records are usually sold for cash, but the Club members get six, for which they pay in the regular Club payments.

All anyone has to do to join this Club is to phone or call at the "Christmas Club" Headquarters, and they will supply you with membership blank and illustrated catalogue. By signing the membership blank and returning it to them with the Club membership fee of $1.00, you will be entitled to all the Club privileges, provided you select your instrument before December 15th.

Although you may possibly have until December 15th to join the Club, the Club will be closed immediately 50 members enroll, so the wisest plan is to call early in the week, and get full particulars and membership blank for the Club.

Qualified Teachers Must Be Engaged By Rural Sections That Are Able To Pay Their Salaries

Mr. Richard Lees, Public School Inspector, visited the County Council yesterday afternoon to remind the members that he was awake to the interests of rural education, and remained to explain certain points regarding the necessary engaging of qualified teachers in preference to those who have not the qualifications required by the Department.

Reeve Anderson asked why S. S. 14 and 15 of Otonabee had been cut off from receiving the usual grant.

Qualifications Demanded.

At midsummer, Mr. Lees replied, the trustees of No. 14 had advertised for a qualified teacher and sixteen applications were received. But the teacher engaged left at the end of september, and, instead of selecting one of the remaining applicants, the trustees employed a teacher who was not qualified. For that reason the Department regards No. 14 as if it were closed; as if there were no teacher there, as the law defines a qualified teacher. Hence, it is illegal for the Township to pay to those trustees the money required for that school. In fact the trustees are liable or responsible for the money paid such teacher. Had they advertised and been unable to engage a qualified teacher the case would bear a different complexion, and the Department would make allowance therefor.

This year, Mr. Lees, continued, the Department felt that there were plenty of teachers who had the required training, and in the interests of the children it was desired that these teachers be engaged. Mr. Lees said he had no power to forbid the payment of money to trustees. He simply reported that such action was illegal, and duly reported to the Department. "I m not making the laws and regulations," he added.

Can't Treat All Alike.

Warden Darling enquired about S. S. No. 5, Dummer. Mr. Lees reported that the trustees of that school could have engaged a qualified teacher, but they chose one who was unqualified. All the school sections whose assessments showed that they could pay a qualified teacher were expected to do so. This was the attitude of the Department. But there were sections in poorer districts that manifestly did not belong to that class, and special provisions were made to allow them to engage teachers of inferior standing. On that basis of assessments alone it was obvious that all the school sections were not on an equal financial basis, and should not be treated alike.

The school in No. 15, Otonabee, was a small one, Mr. Lees said, and the trustees apparently felt that it was not as necessary to pay a salary on the scale for larger schools. But in that idea, he intimated, they were mistaken. In short, the Inspector left the impression that the Department has developed capable teachers in sufficient numbers for the demand, and it requires that they be engaged by the sections that can afford to pay them.

Has Been Bad Week For British Ministry

—at least on the surface. I have held —and subsequent events have proved that I was right—that the stable elements of Irish life had been touched but little by the Rebellion, and remained anchored to the Constitutional movement and to Redmond as its leader and representative. But on the surface there was a great deal of hostility. This hostility was fanned, of course, by factionists always seeking the opportunity to break up the party and Home Rule; by the provocation by the military authorities continued long after the Rebellion had been suppressed; and there was a steady stream of complaint and of excitement from the men who were interned in British prisons. And there came also that constantly recurring tendency in Irish life that there was a curse over Ireland and that when her hour of freedom was at hand, either some misfortune or the perfidy of a British Ministry would dash the chalice from her lips. The breakdown of the negotiations for the settlement was added as the final straw to all these causes of discontent; on the surface at least it looked for some weeks as if the constitutional movement were to go down again as it went down in the days of O'Connell.

Return to Senses Rapidly.

But though the Irish people may be driven by the acts of British administration now and then into unwarranted conduct, they yet are a shrewd and sane people, and the majority of them return to their senses pretty rapidly. The first indication of this transformation was seen in the visit of Mr. Redmond to Waterford. All kinds of dark prophesies were uttered as to the perils of such a visit. Redmond was told that if he ventured to Waterford he would not be allowed to get out alive. At least a riot was anticipated; except for a few shrieking women who were tenderly dealt with, and one or two men, every voice of the thousands in Waterford was raised in praise of Redmond. The same thing occurred when a little later he paid a visit to Sligo.

These things belong to the recent past, but at the moment there are things which have done much to swell the tide which has begun to rise in favour of the Party. The main factor is the curious position in the House of Commons; for that position has once more restored to the Irish party that dominating position which it has so often held before in the conflicts between the different British parties. Though nobody outside seriously wants a change of Government—indeed in that respect the feeling is so universal that the Government might be said to be stronger than ever —though all this be true, there is undoubtedly a strong section of the House who are ready to make constant war on the Ministry and especially on Mr. Asquith. His upset might mean many perilous things; but politicians often become reckless enough to forget everything but their personal ambitions or personal enmities. Besides, there are always errors; there are more frequently disappointments in a great war; we have had our share of them in this war; and as disappointments intervene between moments of success and exaggerated optimism, so the tide against the Ministry begins to rise again.

The Ginger Committees.

A strong indication of the unsettlement of the House of Commons is to be seen in the existence of so many committees. There are the two "ginger" committees, as they are called. There is a pension committee; there is an air committee; there is a committee to restrain dealings with the enemy; and so one might go on. These committees are not avowedly anti-Ministerial—but they are so severely critical that it is hard to see the distinction. Thus they always present a danger to the government, for any night there may be a combination of these forces, and such a combination, if it does not destroy, has at least the power of weakening the government.

This is what happened, for instance, in the fateful division on the question of whether neutrals should be allowed to bid for the enemy property in Nigeria. The Government had a good case; for such a restriction as Sir Edward Carson proposed might mean the delivery of the properties and of the interests of the natives to a powerful Liverpool group of traders with Nigeria. But the feeling against Germans is so bitter that anything which seemed to be aimed at them, even indirectly, was bound to obtain a large amount of support; and for some time during the debate it looked very much as if the Government were going to be beaten and a Ministerial crisis created in the very midst of the war.

It was then that the new Parliamentary situation of the Irish party came in. They had resolved to abstain from voting; but when, as the debate went on, there seemed to be an opportunity of striking at the Ministry that had failed to carry out the settlement and that still maintained martial law, the policy was adopted of supporting the Nigerian motion, although it had the backing of all the Die-Hard Tories and was led by Sir Edward Carson—the two forces most inimical to the Irish National demand. So a hasty meeting of the party was called at half past nine o'clock, and after a short discussion it was resolved to vote against the government. It is hard to say whether the presence in the same lobby of Tory Die-Hards and Irish Nationalists was more distasteful to the Irish Nationalists or to the Die-Hards; but anyhow the result was to increase the Tory minority to respectable proportions and to afflict a serious wound on the government.

Meant Business.

Then at last it dawned on the members of the Ministry that the Irish meant business, and that from this time forward they had to be regarded as serious, for it was clear that on some evening or other the opportunity might come to them of making a combination of the anti-Ministerial groups of the House, and thus produce an anti-Ministerial majority. A change in the Ministerial situation was the immediate result, and people began to talk confidently of that change in the system of government in Ireland whose persistence after the rebellion is the chief cause of the continuance of the unrest in Ireland.

This growing menace of the Irish Party in the House of Commons had even before this faithful division produced some satisfactory results. It was a great triumph—greater than anybody but an Irishman can realise—that the police are for the future forbidden to join the Freemason Society. Freemasonry takes its colour from its environment; in England it is non-sectarian; in Ireland, the action of the Tory Chief Secretary is one of the most marked symbols of the growing domination of the Nationalist Party and the rapidly descending power of the old Ascendancy Party in Ireland. How do these things affect the supreme question of Home Rule? Not immediately, it must be said at once. Any attempt to renew negotiations with any government would excite strong disapproval in Ireland and might be hopless even in England; although the fact remains that 90 p.c. of the House of Commons are in favour of an Irish settlement, and especially Lloyd George who, apart from his strong sympathy with the Irish claim, is also anxious to get more of the brave Irish soldiers to help him in the fight-to-the-death with Germany. But so long as Ireland is still weltering in the heavy after swell of the Irish rebellion and the executions, it is difficult to get her to look at negotiations for Home Rule. We must wait for some months yet.

But never-the-less, the effect on Home Rule is there.

A PRESENTATION AT BENSFORT

Items of Interest from Bensfort—Rice Lake Again Open.

BENSFORT, Dec. 22.—On Wednesday evening, Nov. 15th, a number of the young folks of this community spent a very enjoyable evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Dodds.

Having been apprised that Miss Eva Fletcher of this locality was soon to be married and leave her old home and friends, it was planned to meet and in some way show her the appreciation felt for her work in Church and Sunday School. Everything being done quietly Miss Fletcher was very much surprised when, early in the evening, the friends assembled and presented her with a miscellaneous shower, among which were many gifts both useful and ornamental. The evening was spent in games and music, suitable songs were sung, after which refreshments were served.

As Miss Fletcher leaves her old acquaintances and takes up her work in a new home, they send with her their best wishes for a happy and useful future.

The Bensfort Methodist choir, of which Miss Eva Fletcher has been organist for some time, met at her home and they, along with their pastor, the Rev. W. T. Wickett, presented her with a cut-glass jelly dish and silver spoon.

Rice Lake Open.

Rice Lake, which has been closed to navigation for some time, has again opened up and the steamer Geneva has made two trips to the city this week.

CAR COLLIDED WITH WAGON

Accident on Charlotte Street Street Yesterday Afternoon

Yesterday afternoon, between 4 and 5 o'clock, a street car, travelling west on Charlotte street, collided with a delivery waggon belonging to J Longo and Company, fruit dealers. The accident occurred outside of the Snowden House. Both the street car and the vehicle were travelling in the same direction. The driver of the delivery waggon turned out to pass another vehicle that was standing at the curb. This threw his waggon in the path of the street car and a collision resulted. The driver was thrown backwards into the waggon, while a portion of the contents, which consisted of oranges, was distributed over the roadway to the delight of an aggregation of juveniles that quickly gathered on the scene.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

Friday evening, December 8th at 8.15 o'clock in the Collegiate Auditorium, there will be a recital, which should prove, not only enjoyable from an artistic standpoint, but interesting and unique. Many of our citizens, who were so fortunate as to hear Miss Elizabeth Spencer last May, will doubtless still remember with pleasure, the vocal tone test, with the "New Edison"'. This year we are to be privileged to hear a Violin Tone Test with Miss Mignon Telgmann as the artist, assisted by Miss Dorothy Allan. Miss Telgman's playing, which is ever a source of delight to music lovers, will doubtless be listened to with added interest in this connection while Miss Allan's vocal numbers, will, as always, add greatly to the evening's pleasure.

Through the courtesy and generosity of the J. M. Greene Music Co—the Silver Collection, which will be taken, will be donated to the funds of the local Red Cross Society. It is to be hoped that all music lovers will keep this evening open and that a large audience, will be present to enjoy what promises to be a rare treat.

Sir William Paterson, President of McGill University, Montreal, has recently visited France and describes some of his experiences in the October number of the University Magazine. Speaking of the Canadian Red Cross Headquarter's stores at Boulogne in France, Sir William says:

"Here are stored all the multifarious supplies which reach Boulogne, both from Canada and from London. What an amount of loving care and foresight on the part of the workers and contributors throughout the world is represented in these stores! Nothing seems to be lacking, either in the way of medical and surgical supplies or creature comforts. The need is so great that in the month of July the contents represented a value of half a million dollars. And no matter how full the warehouses may be, their whole consignment is cleared out and have to be renewed on an average once a month. Let the workers in Canada and elsewhere continue their angelic efforts in the full confidence that every ounce of the goods they supply reaches its mark, and that here, as in everything else I was privileged to witness, the work of administration is above criticism."

Since Sir William saw those warehouses, the Battle of the Somme has been fought, draining nearly dry the accumulated stores of the Society.

An American lady, working in a French hospital writes in the November number of the Red Cross Bulletin of many amusing incidents, which occurred among the Senegalese patients, from the French colony in Africa. The Senegalese speak little or no French and the sign language proves very useful, though often with laughable results.

"One day one of them motioned he had a headache and was given a wafer filled with aspirine. The nurse explained by signs mixed with French that the wafer would do his head good, to which he smiled a happy smile, and put the wafer on his black head much to the amusement of the French boys in the ward. The Senegalese joined in the laughter, probably thinking the cure was almost completed, and no doubt the effect would have been the same, so great is their faith; instead, however, he was given a lesson in swallowing a wafer. Again a young boy was moaning, his foot giving him great pain. The nurse found a very gay green cushion and arranged the foot comfortably. The gay cushion worked a charm, for he said, "The pain is gone," and taking my hand said as a means of thanking me, "Toi, bon camarade!"

According to their lights the Senegalese are a very religious people, and the patients spend many weary hours of the day in chanting their prayers in a monotonous undertone, which sounds very strange and weird to European ears."

CITIZENS ADVISED TO PURCHASE COAL ONLY AS REQUIRED

That the citizens of Peterborough are responsive to suggestions for the common good is one of the facts that stand out in the announcement of the Robert Hicks Co., Limited, in another column. Some time ago this fuel company advised householders to purchase in small quantities, covering their immediate needs. His advice was to counteract an anticipated rush to load up cellars for the entire winter's requirements. A result of that action would have meant the unequal distribution of immediately available supplies. Some homes would have bought more coal than they needed, thereby temporarily cleaning out the market and leaving nothing for less fortunate consumers.

It is with the hope that the citizens will maintain their present purchasing for immediate necessities that the R. Hicks Co. renew their advice and request to the public. When the local supply largely exceeds the demand, a consumation devoutly hoped for, the restrained buying will doubtless be restored to the usual methods of ordinary times.

Professor Sherman, of the Columbia University, states:

"Those who are able to spend 30 to 40 cents per person per day for food are practicing true economy when they buy and use liberally the best milk obtainable, even at a price of 15 to 20 cents per quart.

"Especially in the feeding of children should milk be used freely, because of its many advantages as a tissue-building and growth-promoting food.

"A quart of milk a day for every child is a good rule easy to remember.

"In no other way can the food habits now prevailing especially in the cities, be so certainly and economically improved as by a more liberal use of good milk."

Be sure to give your children plenty of PASTEURIZED milk. They need it more than any other food. To be sparing with milk is not only false economy, but may have serious consequences in the development and growth of the bodies and minds of your children.

And grown folks, too, fare better by using milk and other dairy products far more liberally than heretofore.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad, and smothering feelings came on till I thought that I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

St. John, 11th chap., 1st to the 4th verse.

The village of Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about 15 furlongs off. The village at the present time is small, and appears never to have been large, but it is pleasantly situated near the south eastern base of the Mount of Olives, and has many fine trees about it and above it. Bethany has witnessed the most affecting scenes in the history of our Blessed Redeemer. It was in connection with Bethany and the Mount of Olives that the Divine One chose to reveal more of his human nature than anywhere on the earth. How often after the fatigues and the temptations of the day in the wicked city did He retire in the evening to Bethany to enjoy the hospitality and affectionate sympathy of Lazarus and his family. There he laid aside the character of prophet and teacher to rest his weary steps in the bosom of this happy family. And such was the freedom of intercourse between these chosen friends that Martha could even come to Him with her little domestic troubles. There are many Marthas who are careful and troubled about the minor things to the loss of the spiritual—anxious about the entertainment of their guests, about their standing in society, anxious about the advancement of their children in society, anxious about getting wealthy and attaining distinction in the world to the exclusion of choosing the better part, like Mary, who sat at the Master's feet, and learned of Him. What a touching exhibition of lowliness and divine condescension does this reveal! He who is the Lord of the Universe, selects of choice the humble poor for His dearest friends and most intimate associates. In this happy home sickness came. Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upwards. Sickness goes around to the rich and poor alike; it spares none, old and young and those of middle age. We often ask, Why does God send sickness on His people when He is the author of everything that is good. Well, God sends sickness (or He allows sickness to come to save the soul. When we have good health and fortune smiles upon us, when we are enjoying the gaities and pleasures, when we are captivated; when the heart and mind are carried away by worldly pleasures we forget God and the world is all to us. Then God draws us aside to a sick bed and shows us our sins, the vanity of worldly pleasures, and leads the soul to seek a sure resting place for eternity in Christ. Sometimes our sickness is in the interest of our friends. I have a quaint little book, entitled "Gleanings among the Mountains in Scotland." In one of its chapters it says that when the Covenanters went out to battle, they kneeled down on the field and prayed, and this was one of their prayers: "Lord, take the ripe, and spare the green." Asking God to spare the unsaved, and whoever fell in battle that they might be the saved ones. Sometimes God is angry when He sees worldly people go along in a course of sin against the light of the Bible and its warnings. God sometimes frowns down upon them, and they are suddenly cut off. Prob. 29th chap., 1st verse. He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy. But this case that is now before us—that of a child of God sick, and the answer is that Christ might be glorified in him. Lazarus was a child of God, and yet he was sick.

How he had been converted we are not told; his name is not mentioned before. According to our judgment we would say that Mary was the first convert, then Martha, and last of all, Lazarus. They were all children of God, one in nature and one in grace—a happy family, going hand in hand to glory, yet here the hand of sickness entered in. He was peculiarly loved by Christ. He whom thou lovest. Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus, but he was sick. We would likely judge Lazarus as Job's three friends did him. They tried to show Job that he was afflicted on account of some secret sin. They did not know that God afflicts his own dear children. Lazarus was sick and the beggar Lazarus was full of sores, and Hezekiah was sick even unto death, and yet all were dear to Jesus.

Christ bends His eye most tenderly upon us in the time of our affliction. David said it was good for me that I was afflicted. I went astray but now I keep Thy law. The father corrects the son whom he loveth. A goldsmith when he puts the gold into the crucible stands over the fire until he sees his image reflected in the purified gold, so God does with his own children. They have His promise, I will never leave you nor forsake you.

The Place: Bethany is a sweet retired village two miles from Jerusalem in a ravine at the back of the Mount of Olives. A traveller who visited the Holy Land says it is at this day embosomed in fig trees and almond trees, but it had a greater loveliness in the eyes of Christ. It was the town of Mary and her sister Martha. Likely they lived in a humble cottage under the shade of a fig tree. Probably the rich and worldly people of Jerusalem knew Bethany by being the home of some rich Pharisee, who had his country village there, but the cottage of Mary and Martha was dear to Christ. Often as he came over the Mount of Olives and drew near, the light in that cottage window gladdened his heart. Often He would sit under the fig tree with them, telling them things concerning the Kingdom of God. His Father loved that dwelling for these were His justified ones and angels knew it well, for day and night they ministered there to three heirs of salvation.

It was no wonder He called the place the town of Mary and her sister Martha; that was its name in heaven. So it is still. When worldy people think of our town they call it the town of some rich merchant, leading man, politician, or wealthy nobleman but in heaven our town is known as the town of our Marthas and our Marys. Perhaps some poor garret, where a child of God dwells gives the town its name and interest in the presence of God. How great is the love of Christ towards us. He knows the town where we live, the house where we dwell, the room where we pray. Often he stands at the door, and knocks. "I have graven thee on the palms of my hands." Like a bridegroom loving the place where his bride dwells, so Christ says, There they dwell for whom I died. So we should love the place where believers dwell. So when Lazarus was sick the very first thing they did was to send the message to Jesus. He whom Thou lovest is sick. They had faith that He who could heal the soul could heal the body. He had taught them that one thing was needful, and Mary had chosen that good part which could not be taken from her.

I would like to continue this subject and say something regarding the "Message and the Answer."

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

The Geisha Repeated With Splendid Success

"The Geisha" was presented at the Grand Opera House last night and an even larger audience than on Thursday was present to enjoy the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society's splendid presentation of the delightful comic opera. The performance surpassed the first night's effort. Running with more smoothness and vim, and the result was an evening of pure delight. All the principals again won triumphs, while the work of the chorus was even better than on Thursday. During the evening Miss Clar Horne and Miss Lila Waterman were presented with beautiful bouquets, while there was a burlesque one for Mr. Fred Hartshorn, the presentation of which caused much amusement. Miss Horne, who is a pupil of Signor Carboni of Toronto, and who came down to Peterborough without any remuneration, to assist in this effort as a recognition of Mr. Devey's work last spring, in helping to stage the play in Toronto, electrified the audience with her singing of "A Geisha's Life." Much credit is due to her and to Miss Lila Waterman. The latter, who is suffering from a strained throat and is under a doctor's care, was working under a bad handicap, but pluckily went ahead through the exacting strain of the two performances and brought grace and charm to the role or Molly Seamore.

There were so many good things in the play that it is impossible to refer to them all in one newspaper report. Such delightful gems as the "With Splendour Auspicious," number by the four Geisha girls; the "Jappy-Jap-Jappy" duet by Miss Sheppard and Mr. Liddell; the "Toy Duet" by Miss Waterman and Mr. Hartshorn; "The Kiss Duet" by Miss Horne and Mr Hartshorne, and the concerted piece "We're Going to Call on the Marquis" are just a few of the hits that were not especially mentioned in the report in last evening's Examiner.

Great credit is due to Mr. Ted Crowe and the stage crew of the Grand for the splendid appearance of the stage, and to the Grand Opera House Orchestra, Mrs. Foster, Mr. Chas. Seymour, violins; Mr. J. Minnecola, cornet, Mr. Cunningham, bass; Mr. Robb, Beach, drums, and Mr. Devey, pianist, for their delightful handling of the score.

The funds of the Peterborough Progressive Club will be enhanced by a considerable sum as a result of the liberal patronage and the Peterborough boys overseas will reap the benefit.

"Pinafore" will be the next offering of the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society.

ADVISORY NOTICE TO PUBLIC

We wish to thank our customers for so promptly adopting our suggestion, in ordering coal in small quantities during the present temporary falling off in shipments, and suggest the same course be followed for the next two weeks, particularly in the smaller sizes of coal.

With continued consideration and co-operation on the part of our customers, we expect our stock to carry us over until shipments are again normal.

To those who have become alarmed at the situation, we would say, we hope to have a fair supply of coal at about present prices.

In this connection some of the coal companies, who sell at circular prices have advanced their prices. Should the other companies follow in order to hold their labour from going on munitions, it will tend to increase the production and the increased cost of coal to the consumer, (if any), would be very small.

We are hopeful that Peterborough will not be disturbed by prices beyond the present, with a reasonable supply.

From the time we receive increased shipment we strongly advise our customers not to fill their cellars, as the situation is largely in the hands of the consumers. If their demand on the dealer is excessive, and the dealer is forced to buy outside his regular source of supply, or from those who hold coal for speculative purposes, an unnecessary condition would be forced on the public and only the independent or speculative dealer would profit by such condition.

It would seem to us good judgment, when the supply is normal to buy only a month's supply, and not allow the bin to get too low, as storms or freight congestion may delay shipments for a few days at any time.

It would seem to us unwise and unfair for the person who has money at hand, and who usually buys coal as required to store coal in December they will not require until March, as this shortens the dealers supply and during the interval, it could be supplied to some one less fortunate.

From a general view of the situation we feel there is no cause for alarm.

93rd Men On the List

Pte. Edward Harran Shell-shocked and Pte. A. J. Turner Suffering From Contusion

Two Peterborough members of the 93rd Battalion apepar on the casualty list to-day, making a total of thirty-three reported so far from the Peterborough battalion.

Mrs. Margaret Harran, corner Charlotte and Stewart Streets, received official notice from Ottawa that Pte. Ed. Harran is officially reported admitted to No. 10 Field Ambulance, suffering from shell shock. Pte. Harran is one of two Peterborough brothers who joined the 93rd Battalion early in its organization. He was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front.

Mrs. Mary Turner, 569 Bethune street, was informed by Ottawa today that Pte. Arthur Joseph Turner, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was admitted to No. 10 Field Ambulance on Nov. 11, suffering from contusion. He enlisted here with the 93rd, last spring.

ARE BATHS NECESSARY?

This looks like a foolish question in this enlightened age but there are nearly a million Americans who knew nothing of Internal Bathing a few years ago and are now eager to testify that they are fully as essential to health as External Baths.

By a purely natural process of properly using warm water, the "J. B. L. Cascade" removes ALL the poisonous waste from the Lower Intestine, which physicians agree is the cause of 95 per cent. of all human ailments.

It instantly relieves constipation, promptly regulates the bowels and prevents all the dragging down which Biliousness and Liver Troubles always create.

E. F. Southall, M.D., of Gaines, N.Y., writes:

"I challenged the doctors in this town last week in regard to what I can do with your 'Cascade.' I can say for a truth that I know the potency for my success with many serious illnesses was due to having the bowels washed out once and sometimes twice a day. I only wish I could make the people in general believe in the efficiency of a good bowel washing. Sincerely yours."

The Wagon Sees Co. will show and explain it to you on request. A free and interesting booklet on Internal Bathing—"Why Man of To-day is only 50 per cent. Efficient," can also be obtained for the asking. If you prefer write to Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell, 280 College street, Toronto, and the same.

BICYCLES STORED.

HARDWARE AND METAL MARKETS

The outstanding feature in hardware lines during the past week has been the advance of 20c. per gallon in all mixed paints, for both colours and white. This is a condition that has been referred to repeatedly in Hardware and Metal for several weeks past as likely to come about. Advances in linseed oil and the high cost of other materials that enter into paints has been responsible for the increase. Advances have also gone into effect on varnishes and painters' sundries. White lead in oil as yet has not advanced, but there is a firmness in this market and advances are anticipated.

There have been numerous price changes during the week, all in the upward direction. Turpentine, wire nails, wire, American ammunition, black wire cloth, galvanized poultry netting, wood screws, tire bolts, stove bolts, iron rivets and burrs, wrenches, boxwood rules, steel squares, poultry netting staples, cordage, sisal clothes lines, Potts and asbestos sad irons, cow ties, shellac, charcoal, waste and valves. There is a firmness in all iron and steel products and further advances can be looked for.

POTATOES COME DOWN TEN CENTS PER PECK WHEN SHIP LOAD CAME

15,000 Bags of Potatoes, Which Arrived from Prince Edward Island, Cut Ten Cents Per Peck Off Retail Price Bringing Price Down to 55 cents in Many Stores—Boycott on Eggs May be Declared to Help to Bring Them to a More Normal Level.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—Some interesting developments are due in connection with th potato situation in Montreal. Fifteen thousand bags of potatoes arrived from Prince Edward Island on board the Cascapedia consigned to various merchants in this city. The first visible effect has been that the firm of Matthews-Blackwell, Limited, announce that in their nineteen retail stores throughout the city they have placed on sale 2,500 bags of these potatoes at twenty-five cents per peck, and that they will sell as much as any customer desires for his or her own use at this price.

This is a drop of ten cents per peck on the recent average price in Montreal or this commodity.

Yesterday Matthews-Blackwell officials declared that in their opinion there was no necessity for potatoes bein at their present high level. They declare that while there was probably a shortage in the crop over the past two or three years, yet it was not so serious as to put potatoes at their present excessive cost to the consumer.

"Who is to blame for the congestion of cars of potatoes that now occupy the railway sidings in this city and resulted in so many of them being frozen and lost?"

Both to Blame.

"Well, in certain cases the railways have undoubtedly been to blame in that they have had shipments delayed and that the confusion resulting from the congestion of many cars coming at once can be laid to their account, but there is also no question that many merchants who have had large quantities consigned to them have purposely allowed them to lie on the sidings so that the present high price may be kept up."

"Do you think the price of potatoes will go up or down this winter?"

"They should certainly go down. There is no real reason for them being at the present high price and with this new arrival of 15,000 bags in the city the price should certainly take a large-sized drop."

"You will sell to any customer as many pecks as desired at twenty-five cents per peck?"

"Yes. Any customer may have what they desire, although, of course, we would not deliver too large amounts, as we desire that everybody have a chance to secure their potatoes at a reasonable and just price."

Others Drop Also.

In other stores in the city, especially in the east end there was a drop of several cents per peck reported, but so far no general drop in prices among the other stores has yet been reported.

The boycott is proceeding well and hundreds of more signatures were secured by the ladies of the Montreal Housewives' League to the petition that no potatoes be bought until the price had come down to a reasonable one.

It is expected that the next boycott that will be established will be on eggs in an endeavour to force the price on this commodity down to a normal level also.

Eggs Drop in New York Following Strike.

New York, Dec. 2.—The campaign against the high cost of living entered another stage yesterday when the presidents of nearly a score of retail grocery associations and representatives of several delicatessen association met with Joseph Hartigan, commissioner of weights and measures, and secretary of Mayor Mitchell's food commission, to consider remedial measures. Mr. Hartigan was prepared to place before the representatives statistic relative to foodstuffs and to the methods of the so-called cold storage trust. A series of boycotts on poultry, butter and other foodstuffs similar to that now in force on eggs, is proposed, the butter boycott to begin Dec. 12, when the egg ban will have run two weeks. Whether the latter will continue or not after that depends, it was said, upon the price at which eggs are selling then. The wholesale price of eggs has dropped from 3 to 4 cents a dozen on all grades since the inception of the boycott.

The egg boycott, while not at its height yet, is gaining ground fast," declared Comissioner Hartigan. "It is proving an effective weapon to decrease the demand and lower prices. It helps to establish prices. It promotes economy in the use of eggs and it contributes in the stoppage of waste."

Reports from various cities yesterday are to the effect that thousands of turkeys were left on the hands of the dealers Thanksgiving as the result of the refusal of housewives to pay high prices.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting health.

MR. CHAS. NOYES HIT BY AN AUTOMOBILE

Mr. Chas. Noyes, the veteran gateman at the G.T.R. crossing on Water Street, was struck by an automobile driven by Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, at six o'clock last night. The street railwaymen have been accustomed to stopping every night in front of the gateman's cabin on Charlotte Street for Mr. Noyes' benefit, and conveyed him to the George Street transfer corner. It was stated that he was in the act of boarding the street car when the automobile hit him. Dr. McCulloch gave him every attention, and it is expected, and his friends hope that he will soon be able to resume his duties. This morning it was reported from his home that he was not feeling well. He came through the accident with no evident injuries.

QUARTERLY MEETING OF THE LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

Important Matters Were Discussed at a Meeting Held Yesterday Afternoon in the Public Library—Care of the Feeble-minded

The Local Council of Women yesterday held one of the most interesting and best attended meetings since its formation at the Public Library. A resume of former meetings was read by the secretary, Mrs. Morris, including an address by Dr Brown to the Mothers' Clubs of Peterborough. Dr. Brown spoke highly of the work done by these clubs, which, she said, were in advance of most others in Ontario, including Toronto. Miss Ferguson's address on food values was also discussed, and Dr. McMurchil's address on one of the most outstanding questions of the present day, 'The Care of the Feeble Minded.

A communication was received from Hon. S. Foster concerning the adoption of Canadian toys and a committee was formed to look into the matter. Mrs Morris requested that the executive of the National Council should petition the government for a fixed price on grain, the sale of skim milk and skim milk cheese, also the manufacture of a substitute for butter, which the dairy people are naturally adverse to. This matter was referred back to the Mothers' Clubs to get more definite information about the laws forbidding these and to find the attitude taken by the housewives in town.

Report Adopted.

The President, Mrs. Neal, read a report of the executive meeting which took place in Kingston in Convocation Hall, at which a resolution approved by the secretary of Queen's was passed concerning recruiting. The resolution passed in Montreal by the Council of Women. Whereas the present system of recruiting was unsatisfactory, be it resolved that the National Council of Women be permitted to present to the Dominion Legislature that the present military law recruiting home defence be extended to overseas service, giving special attention to cases where exemption should be considered.

Prepare For Peace.

Dr. Jessie Birnie spoke on equal franchises, which she strongly advocates. Moved by Mrs. Morris, seconded by Mrs. Mowatt, that it should be endorsed. In endorsing this, Lady Aberdeen's words were brought before the Council, 'We were unprepared for war. Would it not be terrible if we were not prepared for peace.' These words, used in connection with the manner in which women had fallen in to take their rightful place as equals to men.

The executive of the National Women's Council will be asked to come to Peterborough in February or March.

A resolution was also passed to ask the Ministerial Association for a series of prayer.

There are Mothers' Clubs doing splendid work in all the schools but South Central and Queen Alexandra, and an effort will be made to have one in each of these.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

BERLIN, via Wireless, December 2.—Fighting between Teutonic and Russian and Roumanian forces in the Carpathians and on the Transylvanian frontier, is still in progress with the enemy suffering heavy losses, the War Office announced to-day.

On Field Marshal Von Mackensen's front a big battle has developed.

The first Roumanian army which offered an engagement, southwest of Pietal, has been broken through and defeated, the statement declared.

The official statement declared the number of Roumanian prisoners taken since December 1st so far as possible to estimate now, was about 6,000.

PETROGRAD, December 2.—Most violent combats are marking the progress of the Russian offensive in the wooded Carpathians and along the Transylvanian frontier.

To-day's official statement declared that the battles for domination of the heights east of Kirlibaba were continuing.

The enemy is stubbornly resisting, by vigorous counter attacks, the Russian onslaughts in the Valley of Trotus, the Sulta, the Tcherboniach and the Uza.

"The combats are exceedingly bitter," the statement asserted.

LONDON, December 2.—That the armistice, reported to have been arranged in Athens in settlement of the Greek-Ally controversy has failed, was reported in a despatch received to-day by the London Evening Star dated Athens, Friday, 7:45 p.m.

The despatch declared the battle on the hills south of Athens had been renewed with an artillery attack by Franco-British naval forces.

The same correspondent was authority for the statement that ships in the Allied fleet had fired toward the hills and that two shells had fallen near the centre of the city.

It is feared, the Star's despatch declared, that thirty-five French marines have been taken prisoners by the Greek forces.

The Cabinet Crisis Is Still In a State Of Uncertainty

Small Compact War Council Will Be Formed In Britain

Asquith Consents To The Formation Of Compact War Council

Whether the Cabinet Crisis Has Been Definitely Passed Was Still Uncertain To-day—Unionists' Representation Which Threatened to Resign Will Remain—Prime Minister Will Consent to Reconstruction of Government With a View to the Most Effective Prosecution of the War.

THE NEW "WAR COUNCIL"

LONDON, December 4.—(By Ed. L. Keen) — Whether the Cabinet crisis had been definitely passed was still uncertain to-day — but there was indications that Premier Asquith was maintaining his reputation as one of the greatest political "placaters" in British history.

The best information to-day was that David Lloyd-George, Minister of War, did not resign his place, as rumoured Sunday—nor did he actually threaten to step down. But he did firmly express his belief in the absolute necessity of a small, compact council with full authority to conduct the war. Apparently Asquith acceded in this belief. It was circumstantially reported to-day that the Unionist Cabinet members had advised the Premier to resign, intimating if he did not take this step the whole Unionist representation in the Cabinet—ten of the twenty-three members—would. The nature of Asquith's reply was not revealed, but it is understood the Unionists have now decided to remain. Sir Edward Carson, to whom reports attribute a place on the new "war council" of four or five members supposed to be in the making, said to-day he had not been offered a place so far, but indicated he would accept such a proffer. "The man who will not serve now in whatever way he can is a traitor," he declared. Asquith is supposed to be scheduled for a conference with King George to-day, and was expected later in the Commons to make a formal statement revealing the situation. All the specific information London had on which to base its reports, was the formal statement of yesterday that the Prime Minister, "with a view to the most effective prosecution of the war would consent to a reconstruction of the Government."

Petrograd officially announces that Russian troops have arrived on the front south of Bucharest, Russians and Roumanians capturing prisoners and much booty including twenty-six guns. Further successes on the northern frontier is also reported. The Russians have gained a footing in the Town of Kirlibaba, which controls an important pass in the Carpathians, which, if taken will open the way for an advance into Hungary. The Roumanian Parliament is to meet at Jassy, the new capital.

BATTLE WON BY THE NINTH GERMAN ARMY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 4.—Berlin despatches to-day said that the battle of the Arigeshu, in Roumania had been won by the ninth German army, and that the Kaiser, in celebration, had ordered all church bells rung.

The Arges or Airgeshu River was reported in previous despatches to have been the line of defence adopted by the Roumanians south and southwest of Bucharest. The lower reaches of the river are within fifteen miles of the Roumanian capital, but northwesterward of this point the river flows farther away from the city.

BLEUCHER'S ESTATE IS PUT ON BLOCK

WILL BE SOLD BY AUCTION BY ORDER OF GERMAN OFFICIAL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—A New York Times despatch from Berlin, via Sayville, says: In compliance with the ruling regarding the liquidation of British business undertakings in Germany, the residue of Prince Von Bluecher's estate will be sold at public auction by order of the Chancellor. Thus the irony of fate will have it that just about one hundred years after his grandsire and the first bearer of the title, Prince Von Bluecher, better known as Marshal Vorwarts by his timely arrival at Waterloo, with Wellington's co-operation, defeated Napoleon and won immortal fame for the German arms, his descendants are adjudged "hopelessly Anglicised" and their property in Germany is dealt with that of any other enemy.

City Markets Prosper.

One civic enterprise that is gaining ground in Toronto is the cattle market. The figures for November show a good increase over the total of the same month last year in the number of cattle, sheep, lambs, hogs and calves handled. The comparison is:

Nov., 1916	139,154 head

The city's two produce markets for retail trade are also doing well. During November there were 338 persons selling produce at the North Toronto market and 466 at the St. Lawrence market.

SCOTT'S EMULSION
STRENGTHENS PUNY CHILDREN

Conscription In Britain Was A Political Necessity

"Not So Much a Military One," Says Rev. Dr. E. Griffith-Jones, Principal of United College, Bradford, Eng., on Visit to Toronto—"Thank God! Now I Can Go," Said Many.

CHURCHES DID DUTY BEFORE COMPULSION

Conscription in Britain was not so much a military as a political necessity, according to the Dev. Dr. E. Griffith-Jones, D.D., principal of the United College, Brantford, Eng., who is in Toronto for a few days.

The political necessity of compulsory service was two-fold, Dr. Griffith-Jones explained in an interview in Toronto Saturday. In the first place it tended to hold the Government together. A very strong section favoured the measure and continued opposition might have had a serious effect. Once Lloyd-George was won over there was no longer any alternative.

"In the second place, conscription was necessary to counteract the propaganda work of the Germans among the allies to the effect that Great Britain was not seriously in the war and, not being in earnest, could not be depended upon for whole-hearted support at all times," said Dr. Griffith-Jones. "That, of course, was utter nonsense. England was never more serious than she is to-day. After the famous secret session of the Cabinet, opposition to conscription disappeared and not a word was said against it by any party. The necessity was paramount.

"What has it done?" Dr. Griffith-Jones was asked.

"It has released a large number of young men who were unable to join before because of private reasons. After conscription was put into effect many a man was heard to say: 'Thank God, now I can go.' Many men had been held back by parental objection or for business reasons."

SHIRKERS NOT NUMEROUS.

"Did conscription unearth many shirkers?"

"Yes, quite a number, but not so many as has been reported. Great difficulties faced the enlistment of business men, who stood to lose their business by getting into the army. It was therefore, and still is, a problem to determine who should go and who should not. It must be remembered that the business of the nation must be continued at a remunerative rate. A great many men were excused on the ground of necessity.

"I would like to say that conscription has made practically no difference so far as the churches are concerned. Nearly all the available young men of theh churches had gone before. My own church parish sent 80 young men, and I do not believe that a single remaining one was found when conscription was put into effect. That is a typical example of the churches in England.

"A wrong impression seems to have been created in Canada by an unguarded statement made in New York by the Bishop of Worcester to the effect that 60 per cent. of the men in the British army were members of the Church of England. The facts are that all men in the different parishes, whether Church of England or not, were swept into that category. In addition to that, at the outset, every possible difficulty was put into the way of every dissenter registering as such, and all those not absolutely determined were put down as Church of England. This grew into the proportion of a scandal and the Government finally passed a regulation to the effect that all who objected might have the matter rectified."

Rev. Dr. Griffith-Jones stated that at certain times before conscription the physical test for recruits was seriously relaxed, but the error of this was found when a great many men had to be dropped out because they could not stand the rigors of training.

Before conscription was put into effect in Britain the number of men in the army, including every part of the Empire, was about 6,000,000. Conscription added about 2,000,000 more in England, Scotland and Wales.

"As to the deep and final determination of the British people to see the war through, there is not the slightest doubt," said the speaker. "However, the conviction is growing among the British people that it will be a long business. Personally I would rather see it last ten years than that we should give in now and I believe that is the attitude of the vast majority of the people.

"Unless we win decisively we will be in the position of the Kilkenny cats—obliged to fight until there is nothing left but our tails. Anything short of a complete allied triumph would be a disaster, for it would mean that permanent conscription would have to be put into force, and increase of armament carried on to a ruinous extent. True pacifism is bound up in the cause of the allies in the war."

GOVERNMENT IN NO DANGER.

Dr. Griffith-Jones, who is a Welshman, regards Lloyd-George as one of the greatest assets Great Britain possesses. "He has had vision and the power for quick and timely decision," said he. "But whether he possesses the stamina and staying power of Asquith is not known. Premier Asquith is the only man who could keep the present miscellaneous Government together. Lloyd-George is invaluable in that he is not afraid to do things that have to be done."

Asked whether there was any danger of a Government break-up, Dr Griffith-Jones said it was extremely improbable. He considered reports of serious differences from time to time as so much "chatter." In his opinion any change would simply mean a shuffle of cards. There would be no one of any greater strength to replace Premier Asquith. "Of course, it is impossible to say what effect the Roumanian situation will have. The British Government seems to have made serious errors in its handling of the situation in the east, but these reverses, the people feel, are, after all, only temporary set-backs."

STRIKE OF MINERS NOW IMPOSSIBLE.

Dr. Griffith-Jones considers that further strikes of miners in the South Wales coal fields will be impossible now that the Government has taken over the mines. "It was a necessary step," he stated. "There is no doubt that propaganda was carried on among the miners for the purpose of causing discontent and strikes. It must be remembered that the majority of the miners are not Welshmen but are drawn from all parts of Europe, including political cranks from all nations. These people are easy prey to propagandists, whether working in German interests or otherwise."

Canadians need never doubt the determination of the people of England to be loyal to the empire, Dr. Griffith-Jones says. "Our idea is that we are fighting for all parts of the empire as well as the motherland. There is nothing parochial in the attitude of the people of England toward the war. Nothing heartens England more than the splendid response of the Dominions overseas. The contributions of men have caused her heart to flow out in a new passion of patriotism having for its inspiration the furtherance of liberty and brotherhood among all English-speaking people.

"There is no doubt that in regard to Canada we do feel profoundly her loyalty. No better soldiers have come from any part of the Empire.

WONDERFUL WORK OF CANADIANS.

"The fight put up by the Canadians in the battle of Ypres was wonderful in every sense of the word. Under pressure of terrific odds they staunchly held the key position, and although they were forced to retreat they did not give way. It was a parallel to the British retreat from Mons, and I do not think there has been anything finer in the entire war. The Canadians fought like veterans against overwhelming odds, and after one of the most heroic defences of the war came back: shame-faced, thinking they had not accomplished all that was expected of them. They did not realize what wonderful work they had done until their commander-in-chief told them. After that do you wonder that I am proud and happy to visit this country and be your guest, if only for a short time? The Canadians have won an everlasting name in history for themselves."

Pain in the Back and Kidney Trouble

SINCE CHILDHOOD

When the kidneys get out of order the back is sure to become afflicted, and dull pains, sharp pains, quick twinges, all point to the fact that the kidneys need attention.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the kidneys for they cannot get to the seat of the trouble, but Doan's Kidney Pills do, and the reason for this is that they are a remedy for all kidney and bladder troubles only.

Miss Mary M. Lanoup, St. Isidore, Que., writes: "Since my childhood I have suffered very much from pain in the back and kidney trouble. I have used several remedies but nothing did me any good. A friend advised me to take Doan's Kidney Pills so I tried a box, and before I had finished it I felt relief. I took three more boxes and am completely cured. I advise all those who suffer from kidney trouble to use them and believe that they will do for others what they have done for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills, they are put up in an oblong grey box, the trade mark a "Maple Leaf."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

In Union Square as on Riverside Drive, the foliage was tenderly green, and the sunlight was a golden smile. Push carts freighted with potted plants and fruit gave scraps of festal color, and a stand canopied with a yellow and blue umbrella offered pies and sandwiches for sale.

But the crowd itself was colorless and somber of mood, and as the car stopped the speaker pointed to it with a passion shaken hand so that its principal speaker knew that he was recognised and being made the target of a verbal onslaught. Those men standing nearest turned and gazed at him with an idle curiosity. They were seeing a multi-millionaire at close range. But from a few near the centre of the throng came jeers and shouts of insult for them an whom they chose to regard as a representative of Capital's tyranny. A black-visaged malcontent of humorless eyes made his way to the margin of the gathering, and with a pie for which he neglected to pay, opened a fusillade upon the rich man's car. After that came an orange or two contributed by some one whose position was strategically close to the fruit vender's cart and at last a sounder missile struck and shivered the windshield.

For just a moment the situation had a precarious seeming for the reviled young master of finance, and Paul's delicate face blanched a little. Hamilton Burton regarded himself as the brother of monarchs and it revolves upon the Crown to face the envious animosity of groundlings.

He leaned forward and said quietly to the chauffeur, "Swing around into the open and drive on."

But recognition of the often-photographed face was not confined to the assailants and instantly the focused humanity was being broken into scattering factors by police officers who had not hitherto been visible. The capitalist saw two struggling offenders being roughly hustled away in the custody of uniformed captors and a patrolman swung to the running board of the car and remained there as it rounded the square, with his loosened club swinging ready for service in his right hand.

"You weren't struck, were you, Mr. Burton?" he asked in the tone of solicitude to which Hamilton had grown accustomed, and which he accepted as a part of his right.

He smiled. "No harm done but a broken glass—and the less noise made about the incident the better I'll be pleased."

The car had now reached the south end of the area, where the bronze Washington stands with his hand raised as if in dignified rebuke for the noisy demonstrations he so often looks down upon, and where the Marquis de Lafayette turns his back on the square and gazes at the moving-picture posters on Fourteenth street.

For a minute or two the younger brother sat in nervous silence, and when he spoke he put his question in a voice of anxious concern. "Aren't you alarmed, Hamilton?"

"Alarmed?" The other raised his brows and smiled. His face was placid. "Don't you remember, Paul, what Charles Ega once had to say on the subject? At least he got the credit for saying it, which comes to the same thing. 'A man of power has no other such luxury as being mobbed in his carriage.'"

"I wasn't thinking of just that. I know you aren't afraid of any physical attack. I was wondering what it all prophesies. We musicians can feel the crescendo coming from the first mounting bars. Everywhere there is a spirit of unrest, of revolution. Doesn't it mean a crash—a panic?"

Again the man whose brain had turned the base metal of poverty into the gold of Croesus smiled.

"I'm not a betting man, Paul, but I'd be willing to lay a moderate wager that within the next year or two we shall see a panic that will leave many years and not a few wrecks."

"And that conviction doesn't alarm you?" The musician let his features mirror his nervous surprise. If the principal had no fear, at least the dependent was in terror.

The amusement left Hamilton Burton's eyes and into them came the harder gleam. "Paul, you know as little about finance as I know about music. I've done what I've done by following one law; the leashing of forces. Electricity is force, but electricity unharnessed is lightning which devastates. Fire, uncontrolled, ravages, but, held in check, makes power. Every force in a man's nature that is not curbed becomes a weakness. The only difference between success and failure is the twist given to the initial impulse. Every danger and peril, if foreseen and met, becomes opportunity."

Paul shook his head. "As you say," he admitted, "I don't understand these things. I thought panics were hurricanes that swept fortunes away."

The elder brother laid an immaculately gloved hand on the coat-sleeve of the younger.

"It's a thing I wouldn't confide to any one else but I trust you even if I don't give a damn for your judgment. As you say, hurricanes mean ruin—for the unprepared, but there are also men to whom hurricanes mean—salvage."

For an instant, the hard fire of ruthless conquest burned so fiercely in Hamilton Burton's eyes that Paul drew back and shuddered, then he heard the quiet voice continuing. "I am now rated among the first few in the world of American finance. There are others above me. I am one of twelve or fifteen. When this storm has taken its toll and spent its rage as then I shall be one of one, and above me there will be—no other man."

* * * * *

At the same time, though the twenty-four figured dials of Italian clocks recorded a later hour, a young man of more than ordinarily likable appearance sat alone at a terraced table of a Capri inn. Near by a company of garbed and spangled peasants danced to the accompaniment of guitars and mandolins, but he did not seem to see them and when they presented their tambourines for largesse, he roused himself almost with a start to search his pockets for hire.

Behind him were the colourful and steep vistas that lay along the zig-zag roads where ramshackle victorias clattered at crazy speed. Below him was the world's most vivid spread of sun-kissed colour; the Bay of Naples curving nobly from his point of view to Ischia's misty bulwark, in a glistening spread of sapphire. Standing guard over the picture was the great cone of Vesuvius. But of these things also the solitary young man seemed oblivious.

Against his wicker-bound carafe of pale Capri wine stood propped an old Paris edition of the New York Herald. It was folded so that a portion of a woman could be seen to the best advantage, and to the exclusion of flagstoned courtyards and trellised, overhanging vines; to the exclusion of the bay's great jewel of beauty, this picture held the eyes of the man who lunched alone. They were good eyes, of the sort that look life straight in the face, and their pupils were such as impress the beholder with a conviction of fearless integrity. Now they were preoccupied, and a little annoyed. Even in the lifelessness of black and white the face he studied was one of remarkable beauty, and it pleased him to imagine the wonderful difference and illumination which colour and swift play of expression would bring to its features.

For several reasons, the face was of more than commonplace interest to him. Years ago he had seen it by a roadside in the White Mountains, and often since he had thought of it until the thought had taken deep root in his mind and become one of the pleasant dreams of his life. But Fate had further spurred his curiosity by a serious of mischances which had prevented his meeting this girl, though often in his travels his arrivals had followed close enough on her departure to permit his hearing talk of her great charm and her many conquests.

For several years Jefferson Edwardes had been in control of that branch of his firm's business which operated from St. Petersburg. Now he was returning to New York to take up larger affairs. An uncle's death had necessitated his personal supervision of the home office.

He had heard that Mary Burton was in Naples and had decided to break his own journey there in the hope of meeting her—and perhaps returning on the same steamer. Now he learned that once there he was too late.

But what annoyed the young millionaire more poignantly was the thinly veiled hint that the Duke de Metuan had also sailed for America as one of her fellow-passengers.

The whimsical little laughter wrinkles about Edwardes' eyes radiated from twinkling pupils as he calmly asked himself what concern this was of his; this news of a woman he had never known except once long ago in a world of abandoned farms. But the laughter died quickly, because, absurd as it was by all practical standards, he knew that he had let his dream become too important for abandonment without the test of renewed acquaintanceship. He resented the Duke de Metuan. He was not unfamiliar with Continental affairs and some of the nobleman's financial troubles had sought solution through the banking house. Of course, the Mary Burton of his dreams might have no existence in reality. This woman had had ample opportunity to be spoiled—but if she had not been—There he broke off and took a long breath. If the girl's heart had worthy kinship with her beauty, she would be a miracle worth following overseas. At all events, he was sailing to-morrow and her world would also be his. It would not be difficult to learn the truth.

CHAPTER VIII

When he had stepped from the cab to the sidewalk, Hamilton Burton stood there for a while in apparent abstraction. A private policeman in cadet gray walled deferentially with his hand on the knob of the grilled bronze door which gave entrance to the office building. Burton's eyes were [illegible] but when they [illegible] were focused [illegible] red range. Their vision was of the future and empire-wide. The fire that had awakened in them with the pronunciamento, "Above me there shall be no one," lingered and the smile which hovered on the lips held a certain grimness in its curve. It was not a reassuring smile for such interests as ran counter to his own. A passing reporter who guessed himself to be the lure of the street, halted to survey and muttered to himself, "The Major wearing his fighting face! This may prove a day worth watching."

A floor representative of a brokerage office caught the expression, too, and into his memory came flooding the events of another day when this same man, wearing the same smile, hurled himself upon the Stock Exchange in a bear raid which had cost half millions.

"The Great Bear, damn him!" he exclaimed with savage vehemence. "The buccaneer's got some fresh piracy on foot if I knew that sardonic grin." Within the half-hour a mysteriously fathered rumour passed from mouth to mouth on the floor of the Exchange that Hamilton Burton was trawling his battle-lines and that somewhere his bolt would fall. Because the report was untraceable it was the more disquieting, and the Stock Exchange is ever ready to rock an alarm. Yet just now, the man whose silent smile could give birth to such sweeping potentialities did nothing more significantly than gaze absently at the tide of life which eddied through Broadway's canon and at the disintegrating tombstones which spoke of death in the shadow of Trinity.

There was something of tawny and tigerish splendour about this young man who had sprung with mushroom swiftness from nowhere into the fierce eminence of a financial conqueror. The supple grace of his movements attested ready power. The immaculate elegance of his apparel challenged notice by a flawlessness which went beyond the art of the tailor who clothed him and assumed a distinction as though it had been the buffed uniform of a field marshal. Though pronounced the best-dressed man in New York, he escaped all seeming of foppishness. Each small detail, from the flower in his lapel to his gloves and shoes, seeming a significant touch.

Hamilton Burton lent qualities from himself to everything that marked him—and these qualities seemed to go like heralds in his front, proclaiming, "This man is led by a star—his head overlooks the crowd!"

Men and women staring out from a sight-seeing car turned their heads with a common accord, their attention arrested by something intangible.

Then as the megaphone operator lowered his voice it became pregnant with importance. To visitors from Paris, Kentucky, Berlin, Iowa, and Cairo, Illinois, he confided, "The gentleman by the car with the broken windshield is Hamilton Burton." It was enough. It conjured up to memory newspaper stories of a genie to whose wand fabulous tides of gold responded. The sight-seers were beholding a man credited with the power to cause or avert panics; one of the most lauded, the most hated and the most feared men in finance and, for some inexplicable reason, after they looked at him it was no longer difficult to believe the stories of his wizardry.

Avoid Harsh Pills!

Doctors Condemn Them

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, as sure, so certain to quickly cure, as a 25c box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Suffered From Severe Headaches

FOR TWO YEARS

Headaches are many and varying, but when the head starts to ache you may be sure there is some chief cause. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that unless the cause is removed some other baneful disease is liable to assert itself.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches and has proved itself to be a remedy that cures where others fail.

Mr. I. N. Petershen, Dunsper, Man. writes: "I am only too glad to be able to state that I derived wonderful benefit from Burdock Blood Bitters. I suffered from severe headaches for two years. I was treated by several doctors but received no benefit until by chance I heard of B.B.B., and I at once procured two bottles and in a short time I was completely cured. I am and always will be grateful for what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am glad to recommend it to all who suffer from headaches."

B.B.B. is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions, instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimetary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of Limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

PREVENTION OF DISEASE.

EXPERIENCE in the control of infectious diseases brings very forcibly to one's mind that the present methods of preventing the spread of these diseases are of doubtful value. What is the ordinary procedure say in a town of 2,000 or 5,000 population? Scarlet fever for example is discovered, the physician in attendance notifies the health officer, and a placard is placed on the house for six weeks, notifying the public that none are allowed to enter the home but members of the family during that time. These directions, if followed, limit this focus of infection.

Down the street a few doors Mrs. Brown's little girl, eight years old, is a little under the weather, vomits once or twice and has a slight scarlet rash on her body with a little fever, but is not very sick. It may be that the young doctor, who is called in, regards the case as one of indigestion, prescribes a laxative and sees the case no more; or perhaps suspecting scarlet fever, he covertly or at the instance of the child's mother, who doesn't want her house placarded, fails to notify the case to the Medical Officer of Health. Consequently after a few days Mary goes back to school and no more is thought of it. Mary, however, fails to pick up as she should. She is pale, flabby looking, and complains of headache. Her mother finds she does not eat her meals, and on Saturday night while superintending her bath she notices that Mary's feet are a little swollen and her eyes look puffy. The mother is alarmed, and finding the family doctor out of town another one is called. He finds on examination of the urine that the child has nephritis or inflammation of the kidneys, and Mary is sent to bed. She is seriously ill for several weeks. She gets well for the time but her kidneys are maimed for life.

By this time there is a general outbreak of scarlet fever all over the town. Everyone is alarmed. The public schools are closed. The local board of health and the medical officer of health take stringent measures, but despite their efforts the number of cases grow. The outbreak lasts most of the winter, spreading to the adjacent townships and villages. It seems to wear itself out towards spring, returning again after the lapse of a year or two to carry on in the same way. Several fine children have died of the disease during the winter, and several mothers of families are left with aching hearts and the outer semblance of mourning for their little ones. Others have had somewhat the experience of Mary's mother.

But let us follow Mary a little further. Ten or twelve years have passed, and she has grown to be a fine young woman. She is courted and married by one of the best young men in an adjacent town. She is loved and happy. Her husband has provided a pretty home, and her mother and father are rejoiced to see that she has bright prospects before her. After a few months she writes her mother that she is not feeling well, that she is sick in the mornings, vomits a good deal and has headaches. To the mother this is not unusual. Her daughter is pregnant. Most of women have these little troubles when in this condition. But she is not improving and the mother is shocked when she visits her to find Mary with puffy swollen face and legs. The doctor must be called at once. He promises to call in the morning, but during the night Mary has some sort of a fit and becomes unconscious. The doctor comes hurriedly. He finds the patient has eclampsia. There is a consultation. A necessary operation is decided upon, but in spite of the efforts of two or three of the best doctors of the neighborhood and of a specialist from a nearby city, the poor young woman dies. What a tragedy! It is not an uncommon occurrence. It dates back to the neglected case of scarlet fever in the little school girl. The neglect has had far-reaching consequences. Every neighborhood has had such cases. Every physician is familiar with them.

Mild cases of scarlet fever are often more dangerous than severe ones. The mild cases fail to receive the careful attention which would prevent the disastrous consequences just outlined. These mild cases, because they are not controlled, spread the contagion far and wide. The same is true to some extent of all other contagious diseases. It is playing with public health and with human life, health, and happiness to deal with the most important asset of the people, good health, in such a fashion. How can it be remedied? By education; people must learn that the best and most satisfactory way to deal with these contagious diseases is to be frank about them. The slightest suspicion of scarlet fever in a family should suffice to have the Medical Officer of Health notified and the case prevented from doing any harm to others. If Mary's case had been regarded with due weight and received proper treatment she would now have been a happy wife and mother, but alas! her foolish mother and reckless doctor sealed her fate.

Fined $50 For Ringing In A False Alarm

Brigade Turned Out and Brake Hose Waggon on Useless Run.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—The large number of false fire alarms which have been turned in recently, giving the firemen useless runs and risking their lives unnecessarily, resulted in a case being brought before the Recorder's Court. Edward O'Connor was charged with pulling Box 389 at the corner of St. Antoine and Versailles Streets on Nov. 27th, when there was no fire. The apparatus from Stations Nos. 4, 12, 23 and 25 responded to the alarm, and on the way the front axle of No. 25 waggon broke and a serious accident was narrowly averted. O'Connor was arrested for turning in the alarm, and said when he appeared before Mr. Recorder Semple that he had been drinking and did not remember anything about it. But for the fact that he was the sole support of his mother, the Recorder said that he would inflict the maximum penalty as the lives of firemen could not be exposed to unnecessary risks. He was fined $50 and costs or six months' imprisonment. Chief Tremblay watched the case on behalf of the brigade.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musay and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

GERMANS DEMAND MORE BEER AND PORK

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—Beer, pigs, and marmalade are at the bottom of most of the troubles of the consumer, as well as the various food distribution commissions. Recently Privy Councillor Abel resigned from the commission whose duty is the allotment of the weekly meat rations, which attracted so much public attention that an official explanation was considered necessary.

According to the official version, Herr Abel resigned because the rest of the commission voted down his proposition to increase the weekly meat ration of 250 grams. Dr. Zuntaki, Director of the Statistical Bureau at Schoenberg, in a letter to the press, flatly contradicts the official version, contending that, knowing the result of the cattle and pig census, it was impossible that the members of pigs counted alone would justify the committee in adding 100 grams weekly to the rations of each of the 70,000,000 Germans. The number of pigs enumerated was about 18,000,000. According to other statistical authorities, the result of the cattle census would justify even a much larger increase of rations, but a sparing policy probably will prevail for a while in order to insure a comparative abundance.

The supply of Bavarian beer for Prussia and the rest of Germany again is threatened with curtailment. Fifty thousand German hotel proprietors petitioned the Government to refrain from cutting down the supplies of malt and other cereals to the Bavarian breweries, because their existence and that of hundreds of thousands of their employes depended on the uninterruption flow of Munich and similar beers. The Government will read this latter statement with great interest, as the new Civil Service bill provides a remedy for just such people as are here threatened with the loss of their jobs.

Housewives are greatly incensed at the dearth of marmalade in store in the public markets, and there are dark rumors about much of it having been concerned by unscrupulous speculaters. The Berliner Tageblatt having investigated these rumors finds they are unfounded. It was a lack of sugar that prevented manufacturing larger quantities of marmalade in the summer and early Autumn but as the sugar supply from the new beet crop is gradually increasing, manufacturers will be able to turn large quantities of raw fruit stored for this purpose into marmalade.

KRUPP'S DIVIDEND STILL BIG.

Berlin, via Sayville, Dec. 2.—The Krupp works declared a dividend of 12 per c. t., or 20,000,000 marks, yesterday, the same as in 1915. Of this sum 5,000,000 marks was paid to the shareholders, the remainder loaned to the works for ten years.

VEIL CONCEALING TURKISH WOMAN IS RENT BY WAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—War is bringing the Turkish women, feminine mystery of the ages, out of the harem and from behind the veil.

"And when she stands revealed, the world will be astounded at her superior intellect and progressive spirit," said Miss Mary Mills Patrick, home from Constantinople to-day. Miss Patrick is president of the Constantinople college for women.

"Our centuries-old curiosity about the veiled women of the harems is about to be gratified" she said. "How they live, what they think, what their dreams may be, is gradually unfolding in the general upheaval in Europe to-day. And these things will not at all be what we Americans have pictured them.

"Our idea that life in a harem is one continuous debauch could not be further from the truth. The women of Turkey, as a class are splendid women. They are not frivolous, nor pretty, nor empty minded nor dull.

"The veil and the secluded life are no more acceptable to the Turkish women than they would be to a stenographer in Chicago or a dry-goods saleswoman in San Francisco.

"They do not countenance immorality and fast living any more than millions of good women in the United States; and their standards are quite as high and noble as those of any women in the world.

"These women, particularly as to their brain capacity and self reliance are greatly understood by the men and women of America. As a class they possess an unusual degree of intelligence and initiative; and when they have fully come into their own the world will be astonished at their high station."

SHIPS OFFICER LED IN ZEPPELIN RAID

Captain Deitrich, Who Saved the Brandenburg, Commanded in Recent Flight Over England.

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—The commanders of the two Zeppelins destroyed in the recent raid on England were Lieutenant Commander Deitrich and Dieutenant Frankenberg. Lieutenant Commander Dietrich formerly was a captain of the North German Lloyd. He distinguished himself by his exploits in the early weeks of the war in eluding a British cruiser and taking the steamship Bradenburg from Baltimore to Trondhjem, Norway.

The Brandenburg put to sea late in August of 1914, after having been pursued by a war ship on her voyage from Bremen, which she completed on August 5. She escaped from a British cruiser, which was awaiting her and was last heard from on August 25, when passing Asbury Park, New Jersey.

Diseased Bear Meat Causes a Man's Death

His Wife and Three Others Ill.—Bear Probably Ate Diseased Pork.

STANSTEAD, Que., Dec. 4.—Mr. Eugene A. Baldwin of Baldwin's Mills, or better known as Judd's Mills, about two miles east of this village, died after two weeks' illness as a result of eating diseased bear meat.

The condition of Mrs Baldwin continues very serious from the same cause. A portion of the bear meat was sent to Mr. Baldwin's son-in-law and daughter. Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Heath, of Orleans, Vt. Both are seriously ill, as well as a maid in their employ. The condition of Mr. Heath is reported to be very serious.

Dr. Mackay of Sherbrooke, who was called to attend Mr. Baldwin, stated that cases of this kind were rare. He had been unable to find any record of a case of death resulting from eating bear meat. The supposition is that the bear had eaten diseased pork, and the poison was communicated to the persons who subsequently ate the bear m at.

KRUPPS' DIVIDEND 12%.

Half of Profits, However, Withheld for War Tax and Betterments.

BERLIN, Dec. 2. — The Krupp Company has declared a dividend of 12 per cent., the same amount as last year. The company, however, announces that it will withhold 6 per cent. as a ten-year loan, explaining that the war tax and extensive additions to its plant in executing war orders make this necessary.

Severe Headaches And Pains in the Back

Resulted From Deranged Kidneys and Constipation of the Bowels

It is in vain to try to regulate and restore the healthful action of the kidneys until the liver and bowels are set right.

And just here is where so many kidney medicines fail. Kidney derangements almost invariably begin with constipation and torpidity of the liver. The whole work of filtering the blood is thrown on the kidneys, and in time they fail to stand the strain. The poison in the system gives rise to severe headaches, pains in the back and tired, depressed feelings.

Because they act directly on the liver and bowels, as well as on the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are eminently successful in the treatment of kidney derangements.

Mr. William Loney, Marysville, N. B., writes:—"I am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anybody who is suffering from kidney trouble or constipation. I suffered for a long time from kidney disease and pains in the back, but have found that by using one pill a week the kidneys and bowels are kept in good order, and I do not have any more pains in the back or head like I used to have. I was also a great sufferer from piles, and could get no relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ailment is entirely cured now, and we always keep both the pills and the ointment in the house for use when they are needed."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. F. Saunders, Town Marshal, who writes that Mr. Loney's letter is true and correct.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Remember that imitations only disappoint. The genuine bear the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt oBok author.

"Meat Prices Will Not Come Down" is the cheerful news from the Department of Agriculture. Meat prices will not worry the man or woman who knows that a Shredded Wheat Biscuit will supply more real body-building nutriment than beefsteak or eggs and at much less cost. Shredded Wheat remains the same price, the same high quality, supplying all the nutriment a man needs for a half-day's work. Two shredded wheat biscuits with peaches and cream or other fruits make a complete, nourishing meal at a cost of not over five cents.

West Sandling Camp,

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—As I am a reader of the game here and always glad to hear of home news, I saw an article entitled "A Mother's Complaint" in it. I read it and was sorry to see I was the father of that little boy. Sir, I hope you can spare me a little space in your valuable paper for the following letter, to the Mayor of the town:

"To Mayor Duffus, of Peterborough.—Sir, I want to bring to your notice a case that was tried in the Police Court in Peterborough. I read in the Examiner of a little boy only six years old that was throwing stones, and there came along a man (he calls himself that) a Mr. Henry, of 612 Stewart street, and slapped the little fellow on both sides of the head. As I am the father of that little boy I want to know if there is no law to prevent any man from striking anybody's child. He pleaded guilty and got off, but if it had been a storekeeper's child it would have been different, but seeing he was a soldier's child he was of no account, but I differ in that respect. I am out here, a Medical Sergeant 93rd Battalion, and have a boy in the Red Cross, only sixteen, in France, doing a man's part, and if that is how a soldier's children are going to be treated it is time the men stayed at home. Sir, you promised, when the 93rd Battalion was in Peterborough, you would look after our wives and children. This looks like it, to let a man go free like Henry, slapping babies' heads. The next thing he will be doing is taking off their hands, and then he will be the Peterborough Hun. I would advise him to join the Army and practice on Germans; it might be more in his line, instead of children. I am.

Yours truly,
"A Citizen of Peterborough"

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S NEGLIGEE.

By Anabel Worthington.

The designer who created this negligee considered that even so simple a garment must have its touch of elegance and gave us a model quite as lovely as any among the "robes intimes," developed in exquisite French silk, sent over from Paris.

The body portion of the garment illustrated is in bolero style; the skirt section is gathered at the upper edge under the bolero, and this treatment creates the graceful folds that make the model a charming one. Ribbon is used to bind the front edges and to finish the sleeves, but bands of contrasting color goods will serve admirably to give a pretty effect when the material is not a really pretentious fabric.

Cashmere, wool batiste, challis, albatross and crepe de chine are appropriate and attractive weaves in which to develop a garment of this kind, and any woman will feel encouraged to use a pattern for the first time when she looks a second time at the negligee illustrated.

The pattern of No. 7,973 is cut in sizes 36 to 40 and 44 inch bust. To make in size 36 will require 4½ yards material 36 inches wide and 3 yards ribbon for banding.

To obtain the pattern send 10c. to the office of this publication.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.
When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

ROUMANIA ACCUSED.

Bulgarian Prime Minister Charges Pledge Was Broken.

BERLIN, via Sayville, Dec. 2. — Charges of broken faith against Roumania were made in a sensational series of disclosures to the Sobranye (National Legislature) by the Bulgarian Prime Minister, Radoslavov, according to Sofia reports issued by the Press Bureau.

The Minister said that in 1915, at the beginning of the war between Bulgaria and Serbia, Roumania had declared she would remain neutral to the close of the European war. But toward the end of August the Roumanian Minister, De Russi, who had been sent from Sofia, returned and spread the report in the Bulgarian capital, in order to maintain former good relations with Bulgaria was willing to give back Dobrudja if Bulgaria would observe neutrality in case of war between Austria-Hungary and Roumania.

"HAD BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

So Badly Man Could Not Lie Down —Cured by Vinol.

For years and years we have been telling the people of Peterboro that Vinol is a wonderful remedy for bronchial troubles. Here is positive proof:

Tilden, Ill. "For five years I suffered from bronchial asthma. In the winter time I was obliged to sit in a Morris chair all night, as I could not lie down, owing to that dreadful choking sensation. I tried nearly every known remedy, but nothing gave me any relief until one day I met the Station Agent at Willisville, Ill., and he said he had been a sufferer for years, but had been cured by Vinol. I at once commenced to take it, and the result is my cough is gone, my appetite has improved, and I can lie down and sleep all night, and my experience leads me to believe that Vinol is a certain remedy for bronchial asthma." John H. Comdell, Tilden, Ill.

The reason that cough syrups fail in such cases is because they are palliative only, while Vinol removes the cause, being a constitutional remedy in which are combined beef and cod liver peptonates and glycerophosphates. It strengthens and revitalizes the entire system and assists nature to expel the disease.

FINE CHORAL PROGRAMME GIVEN AT OSHAWA

Mr. John Allan of Peterboro' Was Solo Organist

Oshawa, December 2. — The concert given last evening by the choir of the Simcoe Methodist Church, proved to be an event of more than ordinary local importance and one which awakened interest in the adjacent towns.

Mr. John Allan of Peterboro, was solo organist, and made a very favourable impression with Morandi's "Overture of Scottish Selections." Dr. Peace's "Sonata da Camera No. 1," "Widor's Serenade," showing sound method and musical skill. He was specially applauded for his tasteful playing of Widor's "Serenade."

Dr. A. S. Vogt gave a brief address appropriate to the occasion, in which he dwelt upon the importance of cultivating the practice of choral music, as necessary to a rounded development of the art.

Mr. Stevenson was the recipient of numerous congratulations upon the admirable showing made by his choir.

West Has Raised Its Full Share of Forces

THE WAY THE OFFICIAL FIGURES ARE READ BY PEOPLE OF WINNIPEG.

Winnipeg, December 2.—The West has secured more than its share of Canada's army of half a million men. The east still needs more than 125,000. This is shown by the official recruiting returns for November compiled at the various military headquarters. The official figures as signed on and required, are:

Manitoba and Saskatchewan, signed on 76,749, required 75,980.

Alberta, signed on 34,000, required 29,118.

British Columbia, signed on 37,000, required 23,710.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan required 1,181 men at the beginning of the month, but over 1,000 of this number were secured by Manitoba, and far more than sufficient to bring the total of 2,787 have been signed on for Saskatchewan. In round numbers there are still 125,000 men needed to complete the army, and based on percentage of the population, these are due from Eastern Canada, and more than 90,000 of them are due from Quebec.

ACTRESS TO WHOM EMPORER LEFT $250,000, SEEN IN NEW YORK AS CYPRIENNE IN "DIVORCONS"

New York, Dec. 4. — Katharina, or "Katti," Schratt, to whom the Emperor Francis Joseph bequeathed a quarter of a million dollars, appeared in New York about a quarter of a century ago, and is still remembered by a few elderly playgoers.

She was Cyprienne in "Divorcons" the first time that comedy was presented in this city, and her performance in the estimation of those wise in theatricals was by far the best ever seen here, though the part has since been played to New York audiences by Chaumont, who created it in Paris; Alice Lingard, Mrs. Fiske Grace George and other actresses of repute. In speaking of this early production a veteran theatre goer said yesterday:

"Katti" Schratt was the real Cyprienne of Sardou's creation, not the sophisticated woman of the world that Chaumont made her, but what might be termed a 'married ingenue.' By this I mean that she was naive and girlish and for this very reason gave full value to the wonderful comedy scenes in the cabinet particulier of the Paris restaurant. The husband was admirably well played by an actor named Dr. Bassermann, who is, I believe, still living in Germany, and the head waiter was Adolph Link whose performance was flawless, and was carefully imitated by Max Freeman when he appeared later with Miss Lingard.

It is worthy of remark that this production was one of the late Heinrich Conried's first successes, and also that it was the first to attract English speaking audiences to the Thalia Theatre, thus creating a taste for good German stage art, that still survives. Curiously enough one of Frau Schratt's fellow players afterward became a close friend of the young man who is now the Emperor of Germany, and was deported from Berlin for reasons of state.

WAS INDUCTED AT BARRIE

Barrie, December 2, — At a special meeting of the Barrie Presbytery held last night, Rev. Geo. A. Brown, B.D., late of Campbellford, was inducted into the pastorate of St. Andrew's Church, Barrie. The clergymen taking part were Revs. Neil Campbell, Oro; A. V Brown, Allandale; J. J. Elliott, Midland, and D. A. MacKenzie, Churchill. Rev. Albert V. Brown, B.D., having resigned the pastorate of the Allandale Presbyterian Church, his resignation was accepted at to-night's meeting of the Presbytery and the pulpit will be declared vacant on the last Sunday in December.

Chaplain Searched Long For Son's Body

London, Dec. 2.—Canadian chaplains have won a place for themselves on the Somme. Two have already been decorated and several others have been recommended. Field ambulance officers pay great tribute to these men of all denominations for valuable help given in attending the wounded in the rush that inevitably follows an attack.

One of the most remarkable stories of devotion yet is that of a wounded officer tells of Canon Scott, who returned to London to-day, and says: "One of his sons was the first officer killed in leading an attack on the Regina trench. Waves of Canadians swept over where he fell. The fortunes of war caused us to retire and in the meantime young Scott's body was buried with the others. Later on the Canadians captured Regina trench again, this time to hold it.

Canon Scott's duties took him into this front line, and night after night, assisted by his faithful batman, he refused the help of officers who were overwhelmed with their own work under shell fire, and dug among the hastily made graves searching for his son's remains.

"Finally, he found young Scott and with fatherly tenderness carried him back to a quiet resting place behind the lines. There with his own hands he erected a cross, and offered up a prayer to the God of battles. Brave father and brave son were united again for a brief moment."

OBITUARY

MRS. GORDON E. WILLIAMSON

MILLBROOK, Dec. 2.—When the news spread through the town of Millbrook on Friday night, Nov 24, a feeling of sadness seemed to encircle the whole community when the spark of life had fled in the person of Jane Scott, wife of Gordon E. Williamson, only daughter of the late James Scott and Mary Crawford, born April 21, 1854, on the Boundary line of Haldimand County, Cobourg, and when young, came with her parents to the Township of Manvers, Durham County and settled on the farm now known as the Bigelow homestead, near Bethany. There she spent her childhod days, and was one of the most beloved young ladies in that vicinity. On Dec. 6, 1882, she married Gordon E. Williamson, in Cavan, where she lived almost until the time of her death, and no more energetic or active woman and devoted mother to her only Birdie, who was at Lucknow, Ont., and was summoned to her bedside at the time of her illness, going about her duties as usual, was suddenly stricken down, never being able to speak and all that medical aid could do, was called peacefully to her eternal home. Mrs. Williamson had attended Peterborough market for many years and came in touch with almost every citizen of the City of Peterborough, where she was most highly respected.

Interment took place on Monday, in Gardiner's cemetery, Cavan, when friends and neighbours turned out to show their respect. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband and one daughter Birdie, to whom much sympathy is extended in the loss of her mother, companion and friend.

Mr. Fred Scott and Mrs. L. W. Hubel of Toronto attended the funeral of their aunt, Mrs. Gordon Williamson, at Millbrook, on Monday, Nov. 26th.

NO COOLIES FOR RUSSIA.

Chinese Government Said to Have Prohibited Their Shipment.

BERLIN, Dec. 2. — The Russian newspaper Rußky Slovy, as quoted by the Overseas News Agency, says in a despatch from Harbin, that the Chinese Government has prohibited the sending of coolies to Russia.

Large numbers of Chinese coolies are being used by entente nations to make up for the scarcity of labour brought about by the war.

THEY'RE PAYING FOR IT.

Drunks under the Temperance Act are fast losing their novelty. In fact they are becoming commonplace. A young man was fined the regulation $10 and $3.75 costs yesterday for being drunk in a public place.

HAVELOCK'S MEMBER.

Reeve Matheson of Havelock, reminded the county of $50 due the village for work on one of its bridges. It was his first demand and the pressing one of finances.

JONES sometimes wakes up feeling cross and in consequence the family know it without his telling them in so many words.

Mrs. Jones attributes it to biliousness and if it doesn't wear off during the day she gives him a dose of liver medicine at night. The next morning he feels better and she gives him tea or coffee for breakfast,—and the next morning,—and the next morning. And in a few days Jones has another spell.

Dear Mrs. Jones means all right, but she doesn't seem to realize that if she didn't give Jones his morning tea or coffee she wouldn't have to give him the liver medicine and Jones would feel all right without both.

Housewives everywhere have found out that Instant Postum takes the place of tea and coffee perfectly. And that is only one of the reasons why Instant Postum has wholly supplanted the use of tea and coffee on thousands upon thousands of Canadian breakfast tables.

GREEK SITUATION CHARACTERIZED BY LORD ROBT. CECIL AS EXTREMELY GRAVE

Great Britain and Her Allies Are Considering Steps To Be Taken---Responsibility Rests Upon Greek King and the Greek Government--King George Has Approved Plans for a Re-construction of the Government.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Great Britain and her Allies are considering immediate steps to be taken in connection with the Greek situation, Lord Robert Cecil announced in the Commons this afternoon. He characterized the situation there as extremely grave. "The responsibility for this," he added, "rests upon the Greek King and the Greek Government."

David Lloyd-George, Minister of War, who is regarded as the man behind the present Cabinet crisis, was not in the Commons to-day.

An embargo on the departure of all Greek ships from Allied British ports was announced by the Government to-day.

LONDON, December 4.—The Greek Minister in London resigned today, announcing his inability to agree with the policy of his government as indicated in recent events at Athens in connection with King Constantine's refusal to surrender arms requested by the Allies.

LONDON, December 4.—Premier Asquith announced in the Commons to-day that King George had approved plans for a "Reconstruction of the Government."

The Prime Minister followed the statement with the suggestion that all questions regarding the Cabinet be postponed until Thursday, to which date he suggested the House of Commons adjourn after to-day's meeting. The announcement in the Commons followed a lengthy conference which Premier Asquith had with the King to-day, and at which it is assumed the whole plan of reconstruction was discussed.

Premier Asquith said, however, that whatever reconstruction of the Government was decided upon, there would be no departure from the policy announced at the beginning of the war. This was that Britain was in the war to compel the restoration of Belgium and until such time as German militarism was subdued, and the ontegrity of small nations assured. Current gossip to-day said that reconstruction would mean considerably more than the organization of the small cabinet which had been mentioned.

When Premier Asquith had concluded Sir H. Dalzell suggested he had understod the resignations of all members of the present Cabinet had been tendered to b ePremier. Asquith did not make any reply.

COPENHAGEN, December 4.—German artillery has already begun the bombardment of Bucharest from a range of eleven miles, the newspaper National Tidendess declared. In a despatch from Berlin to-day, the despatch asserts the German guns opened their fire on the Roumanian capital Sunday.

NEW YORK, December 4.—The announcement this evening by the Germans that Bucharest has been evacuated by the Roumanians and occupied by the Teutons would not surprise news agencies here. It is realized, however that this will by no means concede Roumania's defeat. The Roumanian army with the bulk of its equipment has so far withdrawn practically intact, and will doubtless continue to do so until the threatened envelopment of the Teutons by the Russian army has been accomplished and experts here confidently expect that the Russians will do this before Christmas.

LONDON, December 4.—The withdrawal of the proposed issue of British treasury notes in the United States was announced by Chancellor of the Exchequer Reginald McKenna, because of the action of the United States Federal Reserve Board advising the United States not to "stock up" with these notes. The Commons later was declared adjourned until Thursday without a vote on the adjournment. Irish members vainly protested this course.

AMSTERDAM, December 4.—A reduction of the potato ration from seven to six pounds per week has been ordered by German officials.

ATHENS, December 4.—Eight batteries of field artillery will be delivered to the Allies as soon as a protocol has formally been drafted between the Government and Admiral du Fournet. Those in touch with the Palace to-day said normal relations had been re-established between the Allies' Commander Vice-Admiral du Fournet and the Greek Government.

PARIS (French Official), December 4.—Repulse of German raids was announced in ot-day's official statement. There were two raids in the region of Barleux, both of which were easily repulsed. A similar attempt in Alsace near Mesteral also failed. The night was calm along the rest of the front.

LONDON, December 4.—Heavy hostile shelling around Gueudecourt and Fonquevillers, and British bombardment of German positions around Monchy was reported by General Sir Douglas Haig from the front to-day.

PARIS, December 4.—Serbian troops took by assault the hill north of Gramistat east of the Cerna, to-day's official statement declared. There was nothing important elsewhere along the Macedonian front.

BOSTON, Mass., December 4.—Captain Frosta, of the American steamship Melrose, arriving in Boston to-day, told the customs authorities that he had sighted a large submarine in the vicinity of Long Island on Saturday. The boat was outside the three-mile limit, but in the path of vessels bound for Martha's Vineyard.

LONDON, December 4.—Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent says: "Two Belgians who have arrived at Sluiskill, Holland, from Ghent, report that there was a revolt in Antwerp on November 30, in which between two or three hundred inhabitants and many German soldiers are stated to have been killed.

The reported revolt was due to a call upon the inhabitants for work in Germany. It is stated by an exchange despatch from Amsterdam that the message of the Home Army Bill in Germany caused a panic throughout Berlin last week, when it was realized that women would be forced into factories. There were serious riots and bloodshed.

PETROGRAD, December 4.—Under uninterrupted pressure by the enemy, the Roumanian forces are falling back around Pitesci and Targovistja, the War Office stated to-day. On the Oltuz region, enemy attacks were repulsed. German troops took Gradichtea.

BREWERY FINED $200 FOUR CHINAMEN PAY $84 FOR GAMBLING

Chief Thompson Collected Nearly $300, After Brief Session of Police Court This Morning

CHINESE HAD DOMINOES

This morning's police court receipts aggregated $292.60, contributed as follows:

Calcutt Brewing Co.	$208.60
Four Chinamen	84.00
	$292.60

It was like old times at the "Thompson Hall" this morning, the benches lined with old and new faces, and the Magisterial mill working smoothly and decidedly productively. The brewery pleaded guilty to delivering liquor to a local citizen contrary to the Temperance Act. Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of $200 and $8.60 costs. The old days never counted rolls as bulging as those Chief Thompson has been regularly receiving since Sept. 16th.

Chinamen Gambled.

Magistrate Dumble appeared to be interested in the result the affairs of four Hunter street Chinamen who were charged with gambling on Sunday morning. "Yu Yu, Lee Tip, Pop Lin and Wong Wing, are all these celestials here," he enquired.

"Yes, your Worship, and with smiles that are childlike and bland," replied Crown Attorney Hatton.

He stated that the Chinamen pleaded guilty. They were playing dominoes in their drying room on Saturday night and failed to note its passing to Sunday morning. Mr. Hatton suggested a fine of $10 each as satisfying justice, and the city coffers, if not the city "coppers."

Fifteen dollars each was the judgment, with $6 added to cover the costs, for a total of $84.

How Arrested.

Constables Blade and Deannard had been watching two Chinese shops for the past week trying to determine which one to raid. Unfortunately for the Hunter street laundry, it was the victim. The police state that at the Aylmer street corner they could hear the Chinamen rattling their dominoes as they played "block jack" or some such game, and all the while keeping up a running chatter in which "ongs," "ings" and "anks" were the most frequently recurring syllables. About two o'clock the game was breezing along merrily and as four Sergt. Brown and Reid, with the two constables, raided the place. One of the Chinese had the presence of mind to sweep the dominoes into the stove, but was caught as he had completed the act of replacing a kettle. Another of the quartette was hauled wide-awake out of bed and a third had squeezed himself into a clothes closet. They were admitted to bail at noon on Sunday.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO SEE THE SHELTER

Institution Will be Open Tomorrow Afternoon to the Public

Between 2.30 and 3.30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the ladies of the Executive Committee of the Children's Aid Society will be in attendance at the Children's Shelter to show visitors through the institution. The regular monthly meeting of the Society will be held at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

From now on the Shelter will be open each day to the public. This is an innovation that will doubtless be appreciated by a large number of people, as it will give them a first-hand insight into the method employed at the institution.

PETERBORO' MAN REWARDED FOR AN ACT OF GALLANTRY

An act of gallantry on the part of a Peterborough man found expression this morning in the form of a beautiful silver tea service. The recipient was Mr. William Blewett, who resides at 234 Charlotte St. The donor of the award is Mrs. E. M. Marshall, 206 Jamieson Avenue, Toronto. The incident connected with this affair took place at Stoney Lake last summer, when Mr. Blewett effected the rescue of Violet Smith, daughter of the late Private Edward Samuel Smith, who subsequently was killed in action while serving as a member of the 4th Machine Gun Brigade, 2nd Canadian Division.

Swept Over Falls.

On June 27th last a boat containing Mrs. W. Darcy, Lilian and Violet Smith, was swept over the dam at Burleigh Falls. Lilian Smith lost her life, and her sister, Violet Smith, was rescued by Mr. Blewett. The latter was fishing about one hundred yards away from the scene of the accident. He quickly portaged over the dam, and arrived in time to grab Violet Smith by the hair as she was going down for the last time.

At that time Mrs. Marshall attempted to interest a number of the cottagers in recording some recognition of Blewett's action. Failing this, Mrs. Marshall, who owns a cottage at Lovesick Lake, took the matter into her own hands and rewarded Mr. Blewett for his successful efforts to avert what undoubtedly would have been a double drowning.

An Interesting Tone Test

To hear a visiting artist's voice in a tone test with the "New Edison," such as Miss Elisabeth Spencer gave last winter, was interesting, but there is a second treat in store for Peterborough music lovers, who came to the Collegiate Auditorium on Friday evening next, when Miss Mignon Telgmann will play in direct tone test with some of Mr. Albert Spalding's beautiful violin numbers. She will be assisted on the programme by Miss Dorothy Aiken in vocal numbers, the evening being under the auspices of the Red Cross Society. Silver collection for Red Cross work.

The Duty of the Hour Pointed Out at the Big Mass Meeting

Hon. Martin Burrell, Lt.-Col. Ackerman, Major Campbell, Capt. O'Flynn and Mr. R. R. Hall in Inspiring Addresses Drive Home the Need For Men to Win the War

MUST BE NOT FALTERING

Following a canvass of the city and district to meet the eligible men, a recruiting campaign designed to fill up the ranks of the 247th Battalion was launched by a mass meeting in the Armouries last night. The meeting was largely attended. Inspiring addresses were given by the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, Mr. R. R. Hall, Lt.-Col. Ackerman, Major Campbell and Captain O'Flynn. Mr. R. R. Hall presided.

The musical programme was appreciated and consisted of selections by the 57th band and a splendid patriotic solo by Mr. D. Carlisle. The band's music before, and during the meeting was heartily applauded, and from its efficient showing last night the 57th band should be a most valuable asset in bringing the 247th Battalion up to strength.

R. R. HALL.

In the course of his remarks as chairman, Mr. R. R. Hall drew the attention of the audience to the gravity of the war situation as it stands. For two years, and a hundred and twenty-two days, Canada has been engaged in the greatest struggle in human history. A survey of what had been done during that time served to show that there was still much to be accomplished before the war was won. At the opening of the war, Germany had rushed little Belgium. To-day Belgium, every foot of it, was in possession of, and under the influence and control of the Teutonic hordes. Germany has now possession of all of Russian Poland as well as several Russian provinces, and in all no fewer than 38,000,000 Russians are under her iron heel. So far as Serbia is concerned we all knew her sad fate, and all of Serbia except 200 square miles is still in the power of the Germans and Austrians. They too, had taken Montenegro, and under the sway of the central powers were about 7,000,000 Serbians and 1,000,000 Montenegrins. France had lost 3,000,000 of her people as well as her richest coal mines and chief manufacturing district, to the enemy. In all, since the war began, no less than 50,000,000 had come under the control of Germany in spite of the utmost efforts of Great Britain and her Allies.

We should confront this problem as one of the greatest movements to our future—yes even our future existence, said the speaker. It was not for us to take life easy and say, "All is well". For as long as Germany holds Northern France, Belgium, Poland, Serbia Montenegro and part of Roumania, all is not well. We must do more than we have in the past. We must make greater sacrifices. In the speaker's opinion Canadians had but to be shown the real situation to respond to it.

We were fighting a nation of the greatest brutality. The most recent outrage of the Germans was to treat 200,000 of the Belgians as slaves, shipping them into Germany where they worked them in the munition factory, taking the place of able-bodied men who went to the support and relief of their comrades at the front. These Belgians are as effectually enslaved as the assemblage representing the citizens ago. It is only a question of time for us until our time comes unless France and Britain hold firm.

The gravity of the situation was such that the people of Canada should have one issue and only one issue—that of seeing that this war is effectually and justly won. It was the duty of the people of Canada to support the men at the front, and in Peterborough the only way to do this was to get behind and support the 247th Battalion.

LIEUT.-COL ACKERMAN.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman remarked that this was his first public appearance as commander of the 247th Battalion. To-night was being instituted

There will be a meeting of all ladies in city working for the Bazaar for the Church of the Immaculate Conception Tuesday Evening in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum at 8 O'clock.

LOCAL BARRISTER HAS JOINED THE NEW BATTALION AS PRIVATE

Mr. V. J. McElderry of Law Firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry is Now a Member of the 247th Battalion---Pte. C. Lemay of Lakefield Who Went Overseas With the 93rd Battalion and Was Transferred to Another Canadian Unit Has Been Wounded.

Mr. V. J. McElderry, barrister of the law firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry is now Pte. V. J. McElderry of the 247th Battalion Canadian Expeditionary Force. Setting a fine example to the eligible young men of Peterborough, Mr. McElderry has joined the new battalion as a private and has been attested. His action should be a spur to many young men who have been hesitating as to what their duty was at the present time. Mr. McElderry with a promising career before him has made a sacrifice in joining the 247th. It is hoped that his example will be followed by many in the near future.

Two other residents of Peterborough have been attested as members of the 247th since Saturday. Alfred Arthur Armstrong of 103 Wescott street and Fred Holden of 606 Bethune street.

During the next few weeks all the eligible men in Peterborough will be called on personally by representatives of the 247th Battalion. This will be a follow-up campaign after the recruiting sermons in the city churches and the mass meeting in the Armouries last night.

The number of experienced officers in the 247th Battalion has been added to in the past couple of days. Lt.-Col. Ackerman announced at last night's meeting in the Armouries that Capt. Hetherington of Fenelon Falls had been appointed to the 247th. Capt. Hetherington went overseas with the 2nd Battalion as a private and earned his promotion on the fields of France. He was with the 2nd Battalion until September of this year when he was wounded in the Somme fighting. Now he is going back with the new Peterborough Battalion.

93RD MAN HIT.

It is officially announced that Pte. Cephas Lemay of Lakefield who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion has been wounded, making a total of thirty-four men of the 93rd Battalion to appear in the casualty lists. Pte. Lemay who is the son of Corporal Joe Lemay of the 93rd Military Police was one of the first Lakefield boys to join the ranks of the Peterborough County Battalion, enlisting in Peterborough in September of last year. He went over with the 93rd and was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front.

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—Exactly one-third of the members comprising the Ontario Legislature are in haki, or are represented by their sons who are serving with the Canadian or Imperial forces. This, it is thought, establishes a record for any legislature in the Dominion.

Of the 110 sitting members 15 are themselves in khaki while 18 others are represented in the Empire's fighting forces by their sons. Five of the latter have two sons in active service.

APSLEY, Dec. 4.—Capt. Cleghorn is recruiting here for the 247th Battalion. There are quite a number of eligible young men left in this locality but the Captain finds it uphill work getting them to enlist. One has joined the ranks, Wm. Jones, his brother Hugh is now in France, doing his bit. As a start has been made no doubt more will follow his example Sergt Miller is assisting Captain Cleghorn

Pte. Arthur Jos. Turner of the 93rd Battalion who was on Saturday officially reported admitted to No. 1 Field Ambulance on November 11, suffering from contusion is a son-in-law of Mr. Charles Valois, 580 Bethune street who received the message from Ottawa. Pte. Turner's wife passed away on the 10th of October. He enlisted here in the 93rd Battalion and went to France in a draft for the 52nd Battalion.

THIS DISTRICT LED.

OTTAWA, Dec. 4.—A slightly upward tendency in recruiting is shown by the figures for two weeks ending Nov. 30th, 2,888 Canadian volunteers during the fortnight, as against 2,374 during the first half of the month, an increase of 324. Alberta figures still to come in, will bring the increase up to over 500. The Eastern Ontario military district, with headquarters at Kingston, headed the list during the last half of November, with 626 enlistments. Toronto district was third, with 564. London, eighth, with 216.

EX-ALD. GREEN MAY BE A CANDIDATE

Former Chairman of the Board of Works Left on Saturday for Manitoba but Will be Back in Lots of Time to Enter the Field

On Saturday afternoon ex-alderman G. Walter Green left for Manitoba, where he will visit his brother, who was stricken seriously ill. When asked prior to his departure, if he had anything to say regarding his intentions at the forthcoming elections, ex-Alderman Green replied in the negative. He expects to be away about ten days and upon his return expects to be in a position to make a definite statement. A large number of influential citizens have asked ex-Alderman Green to enter the Mayoralty contest.

Patrick Barrie of the Albion Hotel who stepped off the C.P.R. The train had stopped at the semaphore at the rear of R. C. Braund's store and just as it was gathering speed again Mr. Barrie hurried to a platform and, either not hearing or not heeding the warnings of the Conductor and brakesman who tried to stop him, walked off the steps and narrowly missed rolling under the wheels. The train crew returned from the station and found Barrie unconscious and bleeding from head wounds. He was taken to Dr. Cameron's office and later removed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

CHANGING BANKERS.

In another column is printed a letter of protest against the proposal to change the city's account from the Bank of Montreal to the Bank of Toronto. While the letter is perhaps strongly worded the contentions of the writer are entitled to consideration. It does not appear to be a question of stability or the safety of the account. That condition would be assured in either case. But it would seem to be a gratuitous expression of want of confidence in one of the strongest banks on the continent, to withdraw an account that has been carried under conditions of mutual satisfaction. Besides, it does not seem to be dignified on the part of the city, or consistent with recognized business practice, to change a bank account upon comparatively frivolous pretexts. No good business man changes his account except for substantial reasons. Refusal of accommodation, a very important consideration at times, may be considered a justifiable reason. This is not, in the case in question, pleaded as an excuse; and the ostensible excuse given for a change represents something that perhaps no bank would decline to consider and meet. With no substantial or considerable advantage to be gained by adoption of the proposal, it does not seem that, apart from violation of universal business practice, it is consistent with the dignity of a corporation with assets of thirteen millions and with first place in civic and commercial importance in the Province, to adopt a huckstering attitude.

"UP TO" THE GOVERNMENT."

The Examiner is indirectly charged with blaming the Government for the high cost of living. We do not blame the Government for that, but for neglecting to take measures prompt and effective enough to deal with the causes, prompt and effective enough to meet the demands of the situation, or to meet the approval of its own biassed party friends. There is call for the prompt and strong hand. Of course our Government, so strongly partisan in its attitude and policy, could not be expected to do big things like the non-partisan British Government that does things. Great Britain, for it might imitate a government controls the rubber supply of the world, and the prices of rubber in the raw—not, perhaps, after the combines have had their will on it in the manufactured condition—have not risen above before-war figures. This is cited as an example of the manner in which the British Government acts. Such action many not be practicable in this country, in respect of any great staple article of food. There is, however, a strong suspicion that combinesters and monopolists are elements—outside of legitimate causes, like increased cost of production, increased wages, etc.—in the high cost of living we have to face. If such conditions exist it is the government's duty to find them out, and remedy them—to apply the legislative machinery it has at its command to prevent combinations in restriction of trade, by developing conditions of high prices. Individuals, or even municipalities, can't deal with such matters. Only the Government is in a condition to do something effective and general.

BACK TO THE LAND.

Land is something solider more than in a material sense, in the equipment and development of national upbuilding. The land is literally and economically the foundation of a nation's greatness. This is especially true of Canada, which was evidentally designed primarily for agricultural operations. The wealth of Canada, that is the harvested and realized wealth, comes in great measure from the soil. We can regard Canada as comparatively settled in the matter of its industrial destiny, with only immense areas of tillable soil are vacant. To bring our land under cultivation is one of the great problems of the present and of the immediate future. Every established and productive farmer is worth a great deal to the national economy. The fertility of our soil is not, however, enough of an attraction; there is need of supplementing the popular ability of production and use. Capital for farming development is one of the great needs. With that easily obtainable, much of the hardship and initial discouragement that hinder the adoption of farming as an industry would be removed.

The Ontario Government made a move in the right direction when last session it decided to assist land holders in New Ontario in stocking their farms. The only objection to this action is that it does not go far enough; the help extended is not yet liberal enough. In no way can a government or a country like Canada invest money with more certainty of splendid national returns. Government money loaned under proper conditions to a farmer to stock his holding, and develop it, will give returns—"some thirty, some sixty and some an hundred fold."

In view of the conditions that will arise after the war, the disturbance and dislocation of economic and industrial interests, it is important to prepare for meeting such conditions. We may be put about to find employment for returned soldiers and others. The land offers the most inviting means if we prepare the soil for the occupation of tillers.

Manitoba is moving with a good deal of courage for a new and small province. The provisions of its bill to create "The Manitoba Rural Credit Association," have been thus summarized:

> No loans can be made in a municipality until the ratepayers have approved a money by-law, and the municipal guarantee is limited to 5 per cent. of the loans it has approved. All loans must be approved by a committee appointed by the municipality in which they are placed. The bill creates "The Manitoba Rural Credit Association," to be managed by a Commissioner or Chairman appointed by the Provincial Government. Two other members of the board are appointed by the Government and two by the Union of Municipalities. As a political precaution it is decreed that two shall be members of the party securing the largest number of votes at the latest general election, and two the party securing the next largest number. Half of the money of the Association is supplied by the provinces it cost. Funds are provided by the disposal of bonds guaranteed by the province to the extent of three times the paid-up capital, and by subscriptions to the capital stock, each borrower being required to subscribe to the extent of five per cent. of his borrowing. The shares are held as collateral security and pass with the property if sold or bequeathed. They are surrendered at a valuation when the loan is paid off.
> Loans range from $500 to $10,000, and are made on farm land only, to the extent of 50 per cent. of value. They are made only to farmers cultivating their own land, and only for the purpose of improving the land by erecting buildings, the purchase of live stock or equipment, or the paying off of former obligations. Loans are made for twenty, thirty and forty year terms. The payment required each year includes a part of the principal, so that the final year ends the debt. The rate is the actual cost to the Province, five per cent. at the present time, with not more than one per cent. additional for expenses. Bonds issued against the mortgages in $100 denominations and multiples will be sold through banks and brokers, thus making the farm mortgage a liquid security.

There is much of merit in the principle of these provisions, but as in the case of the Ontario government, their application is more local and limited than the larger national interests demand. Not only should people already on the land be helped to establish themselves, and strengthen their hold, but financial government assistance should be extended to those who may want to, or should, go upon the land. Make the inducement national. The Government's money is the people's money, and it can not be invested more profitably than in helping promote the enlarged employment of the national land, the foundation factor in national prosperity a new campaign for recruits, after having finished a systematic canvass of the city and surrounding country. [illegible] this manner of obtaining men who could enlist if they would, and were living to do all in their power to bring pressure to bear on them to that they would enlist—and enlist now, thus helping to prevent the introduction of conscription in Canada.

"We are going to do all we can" said Col. Ackerman, "to make the battalion as successful as the 93rd Battalion, and as efficient as any that ever left Peterborough."

The commanding officer then introduced several of his officers to the assemblage, representing the citizens of Peterborough. Capt. O'Flynn, the second-in-command, had "played the game in France if any man had ever played it." Captain Belton had served in France with the British Royal Fusiliers, Lieut. Quinn of Peterborough and Capt. Hetherington, had won their spurs on the fields in France.

Col. Ackerman expressed his warm thanks to the Hon. Martil Burrell for lending his assistance by his presence last evening and concluded with an appeal to every citizen of Peterborough for their personal co-operation and support.

MAJOR CAMPBELL.

"The birth of a new battalion" said Major Campbell, Chief Recruiting officer of this division, "is an event under any circumstances significant—and under the present conditions, especially significant. He agreed with the chairman, that all Canadians wanted to know were the hard facts regarding the situation today. In Ottawa he was talking to a man who said it would be impossible to get recruits unless by the flag-waving method, accompanied by the cry that victory was practically assured, if not already won, and the invitation "Come join with us in victory". But the speaker's experience of Canadians lead him to a very different conclusion. Canadian men did not want something easy. They do not want to be fooled. They are not looking for a free trip to Berlin. And so it was true that the situation now was one of the utmost gravity.

One of the great recent developments of the war was that the women of Canada were showing a tendency to take an even greater part in the work than they had up to the present. To many it would seem impossible that they could do more than are already doing. But the women of this division have repeatedly come to Major Campbell and asked "What service can we render that we have not rendered? What is there we can do that we have not yet been asked to do." One woman came to him a few days ago, who had sent her husband to the front. She was eager to go anywhere and do anything to take the place of any men who would go to the front.

There were business men who were employing men who are only doing women's work. They should step aside and give the women a chance. We have made great sacrifices, but when the hour comes to make a greater sacrifice we in Canada can do it. The time has come when we must ask the men and women in every walk of life to come forward and give all assistance in their power to raise this new battalion—which was a very great task.

Occasionally men were met, who said that there were no young men left. At eleven o'clock the speaker was in the Greek shoe shine parlour on George street and between 11 and 11:30 o'clock there poured out one field platoon of apparently eligible men. "I have nothing to say" said Major Campbell "as to where these men walked from or where they walked to—Only they are here".

He urged the eligible young men of the city not to wait until they were called on by the recruiting officers, but to make their way around and sign up. "I'm sure you'll find a real welcome" he said. Concluding Major Campbell expressed the good wishes of General Hemming towards the 155th battalion. General Hemming himself was absent only because of pressing engagements early Monday morning.

CAPTAIN O'FLYNN.

In a neat speech Captain O'Flynn congratulated Peterborough on the splendid start they had already taken. But we must not rest on our laurels. More men were needed and we must give our share. He told of the heavy casualties, pointed out how the British forces were continually taking over a larger line of defence in France, and made clear the urgent need of men, and more men. Capt. O'Flynn, who served many months at the front, assured the young men that conditions were very different and much better at the front now than formerly, and made a stirring plea for the white manhood of the district to rally in support of the great cause.

HON. MARTIN BURRELL

"We do not lay a great deal of stress on a speaking or speeches just now," said the Minister of Agriculture in opening his address, "because we are still in the shadow of a great conflict that is convulsing the world—that has not only put a new face on the world, but has put a new face on life itself. But there are some of us who cannot go to the front, and from those who remain behind we must expect and endure speaches."

Mr. Burrell disclaimed any idea of bringing politics into his address, but pleaded for a united support for his chief, Premier Borden at this crisis in the history of the country, when we were fighting, in a clash of death, the supremest fight that any civilized people had ever been called upon to fight. We were fighting for those grand old traditions and principals of England which had also taken root in Canada—the brotherhood of man, the liberty of the individual and the dominion of justice and right. If this war were lost we would have to yield allegiance to a power who have developed a monstrous theory of materialism, backed up by a militarism which perpetrated and countenanced before our very eyes cunies of every description.

AGAIN BELGIUM.

We are fighting, too, in order that the small nationalities might not be crushed out. A young nation ourselves this fight was purely for our benefit. One of the most tragic things of the war was the conquest of little Belgium. The allied pledge, too, were battling that the plighted word of nations should stand good, in order that the civil aim of the country should be supreme over the military aim.

We should consider in Canada what would be our fit, were it not for the supremacy of the British navy on the seas. Were it not for the control of the navy" said Mr. Burrell, "not one of us would sleep comfortably in our beds this night". In regard to how England was playing the game he told how 250,000 women in England were taking the places of men who had gone to the front.

Three years ago he had visited Belgium and found a fertile, smiling peaceful country. Now we were faced with the picture of the Belgium people being driven from their homes of Belgium men and women by the hundreds of thousands fleeing from the crimes of the brutual invader, and of Belgium women and children dropping and dying on the roadsides of their country in thousands. Even today those who had remained and had come under the power of the Germans were being marched away from their homes. The men were being enslaved to work in munition factories and to dig trenches, while women were being taken away from the bosom of their families, because they could operate sewing machines. One would think that the men of this country could not rest easy unless each day they were doing a little more than the day before to help restore these people to their own country. And the noble part of it was that Belgium need not have fought. She could have kept her property, her power, her fair lives intact by simply saying to Germany,—Here is an open road to France". But she had chosen to fight, realizing that honour is finer than wealth, and dishonour worse than war.

British Columbia, the speaker said, Province had sent 30,000 men to the front. Canada up to the present have sent 278,000 men. Besides that she had helped in other ways in fact the Dominion, the land [illegible] part. In the last two years she sent over 250,000 tons of hay, 41,000,000 bushels of oats and 220,000 tons of flour.

But this sending of men to the front was of no avail unless we got their supports. How could we face the wounded who come back and tell them they have died in vain. For those who remain at home and should go, the time was coming when they will curse themselves for their decision.

"If the young women of Canada had the right attitude to the men who were staying at home and shirked it" said the speaking, "not an able-bodied man would remain at home." The young woman of this country held the situation in their hands.

Concluding the Hon. Mr. Burrell declared that he could not help, but believes that out of this war would come a new blood, a new life, and that Canada, having stood the test and trial, would be a bigger and a better Canada.

On the platform were the Hon. Martin Burrell, Messrs. R. R. Hall (chairman), Jas. Kendry, Rev. R. G. Peever, G. A. Gillespie, J. A. Aylmer, W. H. Dunsford, A. F. Coulthard, Alex McGregor, A. H. Stratton, Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Captain O'Flynn.

Re Changing City's Bank Account

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—In your report of the meeting held Friday evening, of the Finance committee of the Council, I notice it was recommended to transfer to the city's banking account back again to the Bank of Toronto.

I have no brief from the Bank of Montreal or any other similar institution; but I wish to protest in the most emphatic manner against this action of the committee.

Mayor Duffus with commendable judgment and good sense, recorded his objections, pointing out the reason why the city's account was transferred from the Bank of of Toronto two years ago. But this was without avail, as the resolution was immediately passed.

I consider it not only very dangerous, but the height of absurdity to even think of retransferring the city's banking account to an institution that gave us such short shrift at a time when accommodation was so badly needed.

What guarantee, may I ask, has our Finance Minister received from the management of the Bank of Toronto that this will not be repeated at the next wave of depression? None.

Are we then to suppose that Sir Frederick William Taylor may again be appealed to with impunity and begged to save a place where once upon a time he resided. I can imagine the reception three officials from Peterborough might receive at his hands at the next wave of depression when it might be necessary to seek his aid. And mark my words, depression is coming just as sure as the sun sets to-night.

I appeal to the other members of the Council to rally round our worthy Mayor this evening and vote this inimitous motion down calmly and fearlessly.

Yours truly,
North Ward.

Finished Church of Immaculate Conception Will Be One of Most Beautiful In This Province

The Church of the Immaculate Conception passed the second milestone in its road of progress on Sunday, and began its third year as the centre of the religious activities of the Catholics of Ashburnham. Features of this second anniversary were the large number of communicants and the Pontical High mass in the morning and vespers in the evening, celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. In all departments of church work, the Immaculate Conception congregation, under the pastorate of Rev. Dean McColl, has, in its two first years, displayed a warmth of devotion that has been most encouraging to those to whose care it has been committed. The various societies are flourishing, the education of the children has been well provided for, and the social life of the parish has particularly developed. In this latter aspect the East Ward congregation has already established a social union that should broaden and become cemented as the early difficulties are met and overcome.

Bishop O'Brien, at the conclusion of vespers, expressed his pleasure that the past year has recorded a greater number of communions than the previous year and that Dean McColl's reports had been correspondingly gratifying. The traditions of the church were being set up by the present congregation, who, by their lives, would establish a tradition of indifference or of zeal and devotion. It was a source of happiness to him, His Lordship continued, to know that the parish was forming a tradition of piety, of frequent reception of the sacraments, and, in many cases, of daily attendance at mass. It was true that the work of God was proceeding in the incompleted Church, but he hoped that it would be entirely constructed in the near future. On a recent trip to Baltimore he had visited a church built on the same plans as those of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, which, he stated, would be one of the most beautiful in Ontario. Its completion would provide a splendid block of buildings that would be a credit to the Catholic people of Peterborough, comprising the hospital, modernly equipped for the care of the sick, the House of Refuge, in which the aged and decrepit found a comfortable home in their declining years, and the rectory. The site was an admirable one and only a short distance away was the school and parish hall.

While the congregation should be deply grateful for all the spiritual graces and blessings they had received during the past two years, Bishop O'Brien expressed the hope that they also appreciated the advantages of the possession in their very midst of their church and school and charitable institutions. As it was true in the material world it was also true of the spiritual world, there is either progression or retrogression. Nothing is stationary in this life. Hence His Lordship hoped that in the parish of the Immaculate Conception there would be continued progress that the good would grow better and that those who might have been careless in regard to their duties would become more devoted.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, preached an eloquent sermon at the vesper service on the subject of advantages of a parochial church. The anniversary was marked by special music, which was capably rendered by the choir.

O. H. A. Has Sent a Full Battalion Of Hockeyists to the Front

The annual address of the president of the O.H.A. was read at Saturday's meeting by the first vice-president, Sheriff J. F. Paxton, of Whitby, in the absence at the front of the president, Capt. James T. [illegible], of Kingston. It was as follows:

Gentlemen: The annual address of the president of the Ontario Hockey Association has in the past been looked forward to as presented by that incumbent with pardonable pride. This year the opportunity of addressing the delegates from the numerous O.H.A. districts and submitting my address personally will not be granted me as denied me.

Your association during the past year has had a most successful season. The [illegible] membership under the [illegible] of the great game which we all follow with such keen enthusiasm. The Riverside, Sarnia and Aura Lee teams who were returned winners of the J. Ross Robertson cups in the senior, intermediate, and junior series, respectively, are worthy representatives of this great association. I wish to avail myself of this opportunity to congratulate these clubs upon securing such distinguished honours.

Barring the 'Tourists'.

The question of O. H. A. teams visiting Cleveland, Pittsburg, and such cities as cater to the 'tourist' and 'professional amateur' hockey players, occupied the attention of your executive during the past year, and was dealt with in a manner that left no uncertainty as to where the association stood. It was also found necessary to forbid the clubs in this association from playing with or against Canadian Clubs, who, by virtue of having visited such cities and played against the teams under the ban of the O.H.A., automatically placed a barrier between themselves and amateur sport in Canada. In all of our rulings I am pleased to announce we had the hearty endorsation of the A.A.U. of Canada.

The removal of suspensions against the hockey players who had donned his Majesty's khaki uniform was a move in the right direction, and undoubtedly proved a great boon to hockey throughout Ontario.

A Battalion from O. H. A.

It was my privilege last winter, as your president, to have the honour of appealing to our hockeyists to consider well the call that has sounded throughout our beloved Empire during the past two years, and which might very well be termed "the call of the blood." That the response is gratifying to this association as a body may well be imagined when it is announced that at least one full battalion of Ontario hockey players have enlisted for overseas service in the various districts. To those gallant lads, many of whom have since laid down their lives, be all honour and glory. I would suggest that all secretaries of O.H.A. clubs be requested to forward to Secretary Hewitt the names of their members who have enlisted for overseas, and that an O.H.A. honour roll be printed in the association's annual book.

Heroes Every One.

In my present position overseas as quartermaster to the 1st Canadian Training Battalion I am daily meeting players who have been members of our association, and who, having been wounded and sent to the base hospitals in England, are being fully restored to health, are now with this battalion once more being trained to again enter the great struggle that is going on within a very few miles from where we are stationed. Every man in this battalion, with the exception of myself is the proud wearer of from one to six gold casualty stripes. It is not to be wondered at that amongst this gallant lot a number of the members of our association are to be found. Our pioneer sergeant, who played on a prominent Ontario team, wears the Military Medal for gallant work under fire. Of such the lovers of hockey in Canada may well feel proud. The deeds of Richardson, Davidson and many others have demonstrated the kind of men produced in this association.

Encourage the Soldiers.

Being so far removed from O.H.A. headquarters, I have had no opportunity of judging what the outlook for the coming season is, but as there are undoubtedly a number of young men in Ontario who are not as yet sufficiently trained to come overseas, I can see no reason why a very successful hockey season from a [illegible] point of view should not be the result. Every encouragement should be offered to the boys in khaki to play in our association.

I deeply regret that I cannot be with you at this time, but as your president I know you will all agree that there is no other place I could consistently be other than in the service of the Empire to which we all proudly bear allegiance. To you one and all I send my kindest wishes across the 4,000 miles of intervening space that separates us. I trust our association will have a most successful [illegible] that you may one and every happy Christmas and successful New

A. S. K. CLUB HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET FRIDAY EVENING

The members of the young men's A. S. K. Bible Class of Knox church met Friday evening and elected the following officers for the coming year:

Hon. Pres.—Rev. Mr. J. McKenzie.
President—Mr. C. H. Thurber.
Vice Pres.—Mr. S. Byers.
Teacher—Mr. A. McKenzie.
Secretary—Jas. McLeod.
Treasurer—Mr. F. Moore.
Convener Social Com.—Mr. E. Williamson.
Convener Sick and Visiting Com.—Mr. A. McLeish.
Convenor Athletic Com.—Mr. W. Jackson and the following members were appointed to assist him Messrs. G. Clarke, G. Cunningham and H. Martin.

After many compliments and good wishes were passed among the fellow members, they were invited to the basement, were a grand spread was laid for them by the over-willing ladies of the Volunteer Bible Class.

Members in Khaki.

Mr. J. H. Thurber acted as chairman for the evening. After everybody had done ample justice to the sumptuous repast that was served, order was called. A few appropriate remarks were made by the Chairman on the success of the class since its charter on Jan. 29, 1911, up to the present time.

He mentioned the fact that since their last banquet some thirty-five members of the A. S. K. class have donned the khaki, and are now on active service, or in the training camps, but in spite of this handicap, in regard to our numbers, we still have a membership of about forty, and we class our organization as second to none in the city. (Cheers). He also mentioned that one of their chartered members, in the person of Mr. Robert Thompson, was recently killed in action, 'Somewhere in France, and on behalf of the class, Mr. Thurber expressed their sympathy to his many intimate friends present.

Reports were then heard from Messrs. Jackson and Wells, who were delegates at the annual Boys' Conference, held in Toronto, recently and the boys made a fine impression on all those present.

Each officer in turn, was called upon and made his resolution for the coming year, after which Mr. Clarke, Rev. Mr. J. McKenzie and Mr. A. McKenzie gave excellent speeches.

A hearty vote of thanks to the ladies for their great help in the past year and for the excellent banquet the provided, was moved by Mr. Stanley Byers, and seconded by Mr. D. Mordern, and the boys showed their appreciation to the ladies by a hearty clap of the hands.

After singing the National Anthem Rev. Mr. McKenzie dismissed with prayer.

CALL TO DUTY IS EMPHASIZED BY THE MINISTERS OF PETERBORO'

In the City Churches Last Evening the Need of the Hour Was Pointed out in Stirring Addresses—Young Men are Urged to do Their Duty in the Crisis That is Facing Canada and the Empire—Justice of the Cause Was Gladly Demonstrated.

In most of the city churches last evening in accordance with a decision reached at a meeting of the Ministerial Association last week, the pastors brought clearly before their congregations the call of duty and the need of more men and a more united effort in this crisis in the history of Canada, and of the Empire. Through the kindness of the city ministers The Examiner is able to publish to-day some extracts from the sermons delivered in the different churches.

CALL TO DUTY IS POINTED OUT BY THE REV. DOUGALD BROWN

At Park Street Baptist Church Rev. D. Brown spoke on the subject, "The Present War." Zech. xiv., 2, 3. This passage has to do with the judgment of God in the affairs of nations. God's judgment is governed by law. This is evident from God's moral and spiritual government of the world. "The law of the spirit of life" is opposed to "the law of sin and death." In this war these two great principles are struggling for mastery, so sure is the cause of this war. For years the nations have been going on in the political, commercial, moral and spiritual activities heedless of God's law, until now the tide of cruelty runs high. Think of the drunkenness, immorality, commercial dishonesty, senseless luxury, heartless indifference to the laws of God and the needs of men. It is fair to say the body politic is now well nigh incurable. The great physician is now operating, and many parts of the body politic are being amputated. There is much blood and much suffering. That God is in this war there can be no question. "I will fight for you." God is always on the side of right. God is also supreme in nations, and He will accomplish His purpose even while He is making "the wrath of men to praise Him."

The assault is on now, and the end is not yet. It is a carnival of blood. The situation is a serious one. It is a loud call from God for us to correct our lives. It is also a call to duty. It is every man's duty, as well as privilege, to do his "bit." Let us stem the tide of cruelty. Think of the noble part that women are playing in this struggle: Red Cross, patriotic and munitions. They are saying, "We cannot go to the trenches, but we can make munitions."

The obligation is upon us. Let us see to it that we are on God's side in this struggle. We are fighting against "the law of sin and death." Think of the cities that are being destroyed, homes ruined, women dishonoured, children murdered, Belgians made slaves. These are some of the fruits of the law of sin and death.

Nations are known by their fruits. We need to fight and pray, pray and fight. Tennyson says:

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

If our cause be just, then with confidence can we ask God's help. I believe prayer is largely an unused power. Great Britain is placarding the streets to-day, asking the people so pray. The General of the British Fleet says this war is to be won by prayer. There is reason for confidence. Paul, referring to the past, said: "By faith they subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens." The victory is sure, but the obligation is heavy.

wars of ambition or mere vengeance.

I have been asked, "Did Christ forbid military service?" I answered "No," for we have it on record that at least on two occasions Christ had a conversation with soldiers, and not a word did He utter against their profession. In fact, He gave them the very highest character. In St. Matthew viii., we have an account of Him talking with a Roman military captain. At the end of the conversation, Jesus said: "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." There is not a word to suggest that he should leave the army. Once more, we have an account in St. Luke's Gospel, Chap. iii., of certain soldiers going to Jesus to be baptized. Again, not a word did the Saviour say to them about leaving the army.

According to the teaching of our Church, it is lawful and right that her sons should take up arms for defensive purposes.

Then the question is, Is this war a war of defence on our part? I answer "Yes." For one thing, it is a war in defence of our language—the English language. A writer in the Canadian Churchman lately said, "I hold in my hand a copy of a German document, which I came across in the city of Shanghai, China, about three months before the war began. In it this short paragraph is prominently printed: 'The important matter in attaining our goal of capturing the Chinese market for German industry, lies in the question whether or not we are determined to take up the fight against the dominance of the English language.'"

In the article referred to in the Canadian Churchman, it was stated that in 1891 German was spoken by about 90 millions, and by 1901 that number had increased to 84 millions. Now comes the significant fact: in 1891 English was spoken by about 30 millions of people in the whole world, and 100 years later, 1901, that number, 30 millions, had increased to 130 millions—thus while those speaking German had multiplied during the century less than three times, those speaking English had multiplied six-and-a-half times. It is calculated that to-day somewhere in the neighborhood of 200 millions of people either speak the English language or understand its use to a considerable extent. And as commerce follows the language, no wonder Germany wants to destroy our dear mother's tongue.

That question alone ought to fire every young man that loves his English language to join the ranks of those noble men who are already fighting for its existence.

Another reason why our young men should at once enlist is, the fact that this war will give a birth to a new Canadian nation.

I think it was Sir Wilfrid Laurier who said of Canada, when the first contingent left the country for the South African war, "A new power has risen in the West."

If we are beaten in this war, Canada will become a German colony, then good-bye to our English language. We shall be compelled to learn the Gentian, a language, to quote a well-known English author, has too many "aks," too many chapters in a book, too many paragraphs in a chapter, too many syllables in a paragraph, too many words in a syllable, too many letters in a word, and too many strokes and dots in a word. Or if Germany cannot conquer us, the United States will step in and make us all Yankies.

But if we come out of it triumphantly, Canada will become a new nation. Peace signed on the terms dictated by the Allies, means the birth of a new Canadian nation, and that will be an event without its equal on the pages of the country's history. Some years ago, I saw an article in a newspaper, in which it was stated that in 50 years from now, Canada will have a population greater than that of Great Britain, and that in consequence, the Empire's seat of government might be removed from London to Ottawa, for our capital would be more central for the purpose of government than any part of the world-wide Empire. To my mind, that is not impossible.

I ask the young men of the South-End, Will you not jump at the opportunity of taking part in the making of this great, and as it will be, historical event—the birth of a new Canadian nation.

Then, without delay, apply for permission to join the noble ranks of the 247th Battalion.

And when you are old and grey-headed, you will be able to recount to the delight of all around you, how you took your part in evolving this country into the great and mighty nation. If you are too old to enlist, offer your service at the ammunition works, and if you are too old for that, then help to win the battle with your money.

"OUR CAUSE IS CHRIST'S CAUSE" SAYS RECTOR OF ALL SAINTS'

At All Saint's Church, Rev. R. H. Grobb spoke from Matthew VI-10—"Thy Kingdom Come" as follows:

The golden age of the world is yet to be. It is not in the past. It is in the future. The Bible is a book of hope. It looks not backward but always forward. In one constant topic is "a best that is to be". When we open its pages we read of an Eden—a time when the world was free from pain and sorrow, because man was free from sin. But as we read on sin, comes and joy and peace vanish and in their place are discord and sorrow and death. Yet the Bible doesn't waste its time looking backward in vain regrets. There is at once a battle cry with the promise of victory. A rainbow appears in the dark sky. It is the voice of God saying, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head". Christ is coming—Thy Kingdom is coming.

And it is not a matter of merely regaining what has been lost. But something far better. The Book that opens with a garden, closes with the vision of a city. And the city stands for something better than the garden. It stands for human achievement. It symbolizes all that is strong and virile in human nature—the condition of man after he has come through the strain and sorrow of the battle. The city spells character. We are going to be stronger for the evil through which we have to pass. Our life is going to be fuller.

A MIGHTY CONVULSION.

If we are to truly catch the spirit of the great war, we must see it as a mighty convulsion destined to bring us nearer the Kingdom. This is the thing that is going to inspire us to meet the situation with heroic fortitude and to answer with calm confidence any call to service which may come.

The war is not a sign that Christianity is failing; but that it is succeeding and by the destined way—the way of the Cross. In the Bible, half-way between the garden and the city stands a Cross. It is the sign post pointing to the city. It points the way to the highest manhood and womanhood. When the cross looms up in our path and we have courage to meet it, we are not far from the Kingdom. If our life is easy and selfish, we will never reach the city that spells character. The fact that the fight to-day for right and liberty and the highest ideals of Christ, is being fought so bravely is evidence that the age is in the way from the garden to the city and that the Kingdom of which we pray is indeed coming.

OUR CAUSE IS CHRIST'S.

Ever since the war began one fact has been growing larger and larger in our minds—that our cause is Christ's cause. We felt it two years ago. To-day it is a triumphant certainty. We didn't know Germany when the war first burst upon us. We were still over-awed by German culture. But now there is no doubt as to the kind of thing we are fighting. We are fighting the thing that lifted its head in the garden. We are fighting the serpent of lust and greed and materialism. We are fighting practical infidelity and atheism, and all that would seek to convince us that God is a myth and a lie. We are fighting all that is opposed to the Kingdom of Heaven.

The war is teaching us something new about the nature of faith. Before the conflict, faith stood for a very calm, peaceful sort of commodity—a kind of religious feather bed in which a person was invited to lie down and be carried into the Kingdom, without jar or pain. To-day faith is of the nature of a high explosive. Something to blast mountains, something convulsing the life and impelling us to action. This evil thing assaulting the Kingdom must be broken. The call that comes to us a Christian is to turn our faith into action.

A DAY OF JUDGMENT.

To-day is a day of judgment. God doesn't judge us. We judge ourselves. An opportunity for the highest service is here and we judge ourselves by the manner in which we answer the call, whatever it is. There is a sense in which Christ is coming to us to-day. The parable of the coming bridegroom applies to this age. The call is sounding "Behold the bridegroom cometh go ye out to meet him" The question is, have we enough oil in our lamps? Our Christianity is being tested. Our spirituality is on trial.

What each individual duty is, let his own conscience decide, let each search his conscience in the light of a religion with a cross at its heart. If we are in the place of duty we have nothing to fear. If we are not doing our duty we have everything to fear. We ought to fear ease and luxury. The danger is,—lest we choose the easy, comfortable, material way, when the spirit calls. In the midst of the turmoil and the sorrow and sacrifice comes the voice of the Master "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life".

"THE SOONER COMPULSION COMES THE BETTER" SAYS THE REV. ROBT. POGUE

At St. Paul's, the minister took as his text: "There is no discharge in war." (Eccles. 8:8). He said in part:

"We have been requested by our military leaders to preach to-day on the Great War, in the hope that our people may be strengthened in their purpose not to sheathe the sword until victory has been won, and strengthened also to bear whatever sacrifices may be necessary in men and money, to bring this struggle to a triumphant finish. We should recall here some of the reasons which justified us in taking up the sword when war was first declared. A knowledge of these reasons should furnish the strongest motives in inducing young men to enlist. First, we drew the sword because of the imperious demands of duty. If a child is in a burning building we do not ask why we should attempt to rescue her. Reason, feeling, instinct, love, will, all cry "Go." And, without waiting to count the cost we rush in through flame and smoke in the hope of saving her. This was the motive which prompted Britain to enter the war. And it was our motive. In the presence of what we feel to be our duty, we said;

"Ours not to reason why,
Ours but to do, and die."

Then, Belgium appealed to us. She was a child among the nations. The big Goliath, Germany, went stalking through her land, killing women and little children, and aged men, as he went, piling barbarity on barbarity, crime on crime, savagery on savagery, and surpassing the devilry of the devil. Our sons sprang to arms saying as they did so that Goliath must be laid low.

Then, further, our men heard the call of honour and plighted troth. They felt that it might not be necessary for them to live, but it was necessary for truth and honour to live, that better far that Canada's sons should die than that truth should lie bleeding on the field. They went, too, to perpetuate and defend the noble traditions of the British Empire, to fight for freedom as against Kaiserdom, for democracy as against autocracy, for the enthronement of reason and conscience as against the reign of brute force, and hence for Christ as against anti-Christ. And many, too, took up the sword to break and destroy the sword It is a beautiful ideal and is worth fighting for.

"War for the end of war,
Fighting that fight may cease;
Why do our cannons roar?
For a thousand years of peace."

In view of the righteous character of this war, and of the necessity of our continuing in the struggle until victory has crowned our sacrifices, what is or duty in the present moment? Surely, first, it is the duty of prayer. The walls of old London are covered with posters calling upon the people to pray. And this call comes not so much from ministers of religion as from the Christian Generals and Admirals of Britain's Army and Navy. A second duty is the duty of faith, of optimism, of hope. Because "Omnipotence is not with sin," and "the cause of right is charged to win," we must wear a "waiting, confident face" and lift up our eyes to heaven. And, lastly, the duty of the hour is greater sacrifices upon the part of all. Some have done all that can reasonably be expected of them. Still there are many on whose ears and hearts the call of God in this war has fallen in vain. One does not know how to appeal to them. If the appeal of patriotism is in vain; if the appeal of outraged Belgium, of oppressed and suffering Serbia, is in vain; if the appeal of heroism is in vain; if the appeal of fallen heroes, who went gladly to their death for the land and cause they loved, is in vain, then there remains nothing but compulsion. For some time I have felt that we must resort to this. And the sooner now, the better.

The higher motive still makes an appeal to me, as two classes specially concerned, wives and husbands, mothers and sons. Here are two letters, one from a mother, a Russian mother to her son. The other from a British officer who was killed at the Somme. Their appeal is stronger than the feeble words of the preacher. The first letter was found on the dead body of this Russian mother's son. It reads: "Your father was killed very far from us at home, and I send you out now for the sacred duty of defending our dear country from a vile and terrible enemy. Remember that you are the son of a hero. My heart is oppressed, and I weep when I ask you to be worthy of him; but when you are sent to perform a great deed, remember not my tears, but only my blessing."

The letter from the young British officer reads:

"I am about to take part in the biggest battle that has ever been fought in France, and one which ought to help, and the war very quickly. I never felt more confident or more cheerful than I have now. I would not miss the attack for anything on earth. The men are in splendid form, and every officer and man more or more cheerful in my life before have seen them.

My idea in writing this letter is in case that I am one 'of the costs' and get killed; I do not expect to be, but such things have happened. It is impossible to fear death out here, when one is no longer an individual but a member of a regiment and of an army. To be killed means nothing to me, and it is only you who suffer, for you really pay the cost. I have been looking at the stars. What an insignificant thing the loss of, say, forty years of life is compared to them. It seems scarcely worth talking about. Good-bye, you darlings. Mind not to worry about it, and remember we shall meet again quite soon. Your loving son, Carl."

There can be no appeal to the young men of our land who have not yet enlisted finer than that. And the sacrifice of such a life may not be in vain, and that the sacrifice of millions of others who have given their lives may not be in vain, we must see that when such men as these fall others shall take up the standard and carry it forward to victory.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR. THAT CONFRONTS MEN IS "WHAT CAN I DO?"

The Rev. B. Greatrix, of St. James', spoke last evening on the subject of "British and German Ideals—Methods and Aims." It was a series of comparisons between the system of the two nations i. the matter of government,— education, army service, the spirit which animated, controlled and directed these different branches of national activities—and how they were made subservient to the national purpose, and how individuality was lost in the attempt to reach the national goal, and satisfy the national ambition.

It was in the Freitschke and Nietzsche, and stated by General Von Bernhardi in military terms, that you discovered the germ from which has sprung German hate of England and her desire for England's overthrow, and her determination if possible to accomplish the same. Drunk with inordinate pride and an imagined sense of superiority, Germany has flung to the winds all discretion, and has embarked on a war in which all military rules governing modern warfare, all respects for the rights of neutrals, all regard for international engagements, all moral objections have been disregarded, denounced and trampled under feet. Germany attempts to grasp world power, and the methods adopted to reach it are so cruel, so brutal, so frightful, have caused her to become a stench in the nostril of nearly all neutral nations. The conflict is one of dealing between God Odin and the Man of Galilee—between Despotism and Democracy, and the duty of the hour that confronts every man is what can I do to render doubly sure victory for Britain and her Allies.

DUTY AND REASON BOTH CLEARLY POINT TO THE NEED OF THE HOUR

The Rev. Canon Cornish, speaking from the pulpit of St. John's last evening said in part:

Sunday is the day for recruiting for God's kingdom, and recruiting for the present emergency could be taken up joyfully. In the town from which I came in the west I am proud to say that there was not an eligible man left. The recruiting taken up by me was all from the pulpit, and consisted of pointing out the plain duty of the hour, leaving the decision to each man. Each of you should try to influence young men with whom you come in contact, not by calling them names, but in the most kindly way. The willing ones have gone, and those who have not, at any rate think they have a reason for not going. We can surely try to show that both duty and reason point clearly to enlist in the great struggle for freedom now in the final stage. Why is our Empire in the war? Because Great Britain equally with France and Germany signed the treaty guaranteeing protection to Belgium. Had Great Britain not entered the war, the whole world would have cried shame on a professed Christian people, but not actively so in the great time of trial. Are we to emulate Germany, lost Germany, a great nation without a soul. The question is asked, why don't the Germans people rise? The answer is that the terrid

THE BIRTH OF A NEW CANADA WILL BE A RESULT OF THE WAR

The following is a brief summary of a sermon preached at St. George's Church last evening by the Rector, Rev. J. Price:

In discussing the question of recruiting, Mr. Price said that the Church of England sanctions recruiting for war purposes. In the 37th Article it is said, "It is lawful for Christian men, at the commandment of the magistrate, to wear weapons and serve in the wars."

This Article was first written in Latin. The literal meaning of the Latin is, that it is lawful for Christian men to go to wars for self-defence, or to avenge a grievous wrong done to the country, but not organization of Germany is such that the whisper from a citizen of disaffection is promptly silenced by a bullet. We surely are not willing that such a monstrous system shall be to rule the whole world, and not only the Allies and Germany are aware of the mighty obstacle in the path, but the United States and other neutral nations are convinced that nothing but the mighty British fleet will prevent such a catastrophe. The heritage of freedom for which our forefathers made such sacrifices is threatened, enough to many it may bring the supreme sacrifice. "Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friends."

TO BRING WAR TO A SUCCESSFUL CONCLUSION IS CHRISTIAN DUTY

The Rev. W. H. White, at St. Luke's, at the conclusion of an Advent sermon based on 2 Peter iii., urged his hearers to prepare for the second coming by clearing their consciences before God—and in particular with respect to their share in bringing the war to a victorious issue.

The speaker wished to put himself on record as opposed to Sunday recruiting as being anti-religious in its tendency, whereas the success of a volunteer army depended in the last resort upon religious ideals being maintained. At the same time he was in hearty accord with the recent resolution of the Ministerial Association, which declared that it was "the first duty of Christian citizenship in the present hour to bring to a successful conclusion the great war in which we are engaged." He referred with approval to the notices now hung in the city streets. With slight changes in the wording they might be given a deeper and religious significance. "God's cause needs recruits — and needs them now." "God expects every man to do his duty." Let every young man who is free give the military authorities the chance to say whether he is fit to serve with the colours. Let no one put obstacles in the way of such patriotic action. Let everyone by self-denial and by unstinted giving of time and work and money, take their full share in the winning of the war. So would their consciences be clear before the Advent Judge.

POINTED REMARKS AT S. A. TEMPLE BY ADJ. McELHINEY

Adjutant McElhiney made some very pointed remarks last evening at the Temple on the subject of "Recruiting and the Winning of the War." His text was Judges 7th Chap. 18th Verse. A rehearsal of a number of the great wars of olden days showing cause and effect and manners of warfare, together with the result, was listened to with rapt attention by the audience. His direct remarks on recruiting consisted of a splendid tribute to the Commander of the 21st Battalion, and his second in command Captain O'Flynn, and declared no man would be betrayed if they put their interests into their hands, and appealed to all eligible men to enlist. Some little reference was made to what the Salvation Army had done all over the world, and 45 names were on the honour roll at present of the Temple Corps.

The Adjutant, however, laid a good deal of stress on the moral and spiritual side of affairs, and declared that if the wives and children of the men at the front would only bind themselves together for prayer incessantly they would be doing as much to win the war as their loved ones at the front trench.

Quotations from Sir David Beatty and others competent to judge and know was given, and he hoped the Christian Church would some wake up to the responsibility and not only have one day in six months for united prayer, but that at least a weekly gathering might be instituted for all to get together and stimulate and inspire such a spirit. This would we complete "our bit" with all the other laudable things being done. The cry followed to the Sword of the Lord and the British Empire.

The meeting closed with a direct appeal for more definite and earnest prayer and one young man in khaki knelt at the mercy seat to pray.

OUR DUTY TO BRING CRIMINAL STATE TO JUSTICE NOT TO TERMS

At the morning service in Gilmour Memorial Baptist church the pastor, Rev. J. Gale, preached from Deut. 29:19, Remember what Amelek did . . . smote thy hindmost, even all that were feeble. . . . shalt blot out the remembrance. . . . thou shalt not forget it. After showing that the children were fortunate to have the direct command of God to justify them in the terrible work they had to do, the preacher claimed that Britain was fortunate in being placed in such a position that there was only one right course to take, namely to keep her word and to stand with the weak against the strong, to risk everything except her honour for right and justice. Germany professed to be willing to come to terms, but we have discovered that we are engaged in bringing to justice the most criminal state the world has yet seen. To make terms with a criminal is to share in his crime and to cease to strive with the enemy before he is placed where he can do no more than would be to betray a sacred trust. Germany is a self-accused perjurer in the court of nations, a thief on the most gigantic scale the world has yet seen, a pirate who combines the murder of women and children, of their friends as well as of their foes, with the robbery which is the essence of this breed of crimes. Murder of civilians regardless of age, sex or condition; slavery on a colossal scale and that too, of free-born men, their peers in every way; violation of women, who are not have been able to look to them for the protection of their honour as well as the judicial murder of a nurse who had tended their own wounded. A nation with such a record offers insult in seeking to come to terms. When a dangerous and lawless criminal is at large it is every man's duty to bring him to justice and those who seek to be excused are tacitly confessing that they have no claim to a place of safety in this world. It is ours to bring the criminal state to justice, not to terms.

TWO STRIKING THOUGHTS ARE DISCUSSED BY THE PASTOR OF ST. ANDREW'S

Rev. Mr. Mitchell, of St. Andrew's, spoke to a large congregation last evening at St. Andrew's Church on the question, "Does Jesus Approve of the Weapon of Force?"

The question, he said, was a debatable one, and was not easy to decide, either from the teaching of Jesus or from His example. Speaking of the teaching of Jesus, he quoted passages that might be adduced in such a discussion, and concluded that, so far as principle is concerned, the doctrine of force is not repudiated in the Gospel story.

Turning next to the conduct of Jesus, he referred to two striking incidents. The first was Christ's challenge to the officer who struck him with the palm of his hand during the interview with Caiaphas. The other was his driving out the money changers from the Court of the Gentiles.

The preacher closed by drawing two lessons in mind two things as they went away. The first was that force was not an evil in itself. God used it day by day in His administration of nature, and society used it in the administration of justice and mercy. The second thing to be kept in mind was that there was a better thing than peace. Peace was the fruitage of righteousness. The peacemakers were the men and the women who were making things right. To do this our boys had gone to France and Flanders, and to better do it more men were needed there and here.

In answering the series of questions which, it is said, all men between 19 and 45 are to receive shortly, he counselled frankness and conscientiousness. Failing in this urged appeal, he argued that the Government should adopt a form of conscription. Present methods were bearing heavily on the conscientious only, and many of these were men. His closing word was that all, irrespective of age, should take as their motto the old slogan of 1812 "Ready, aye ready," standing between the plow and the altar, ready for service or for sacrifice.

The City Treasurer will write several bond holders and ask them if they consider instalment debentures will sell at as good a price and are better than straight term debentures. The Treasurer will also report on the comparative cost of issuing the two kinds of debentures.

The request of the Peterborough Protestant Home that they be paid $2.40 per week for indigent inmates instead of $2.00 per month, was granted and an agreement will be consummated to that effect.

The expenses of Alderman Dobbin amounting to $25.45, to Montreal and Toronto, with the deputation that visited Quebec, and the expenses of R. B. Rogers, amounting to $19.00, to Montreal, will be paid.

The taxes with respect to Bull's assessment for 1916 paid by the Peterborough Club amount to $32.60, less the cash discount, will be remitted as it is claimed that under the Ontario Temperance Act the Club was not liable for business taxes this year.

An account from the Canadian Pacific Railway for a portion of the expense of the protection at the George Street crossing, will be returned to the Company as the City disclaims liability for any of the expense.

Cottage Prayer Meetings

John xv., 1 and 7.

6—"Abide in me and I in you as the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me."

7—"If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you."

Wonderful promise. What power for weak humanity, but it is conditional as we see.

RACING WILL BE KILLED IN CANADA SAYS N. Y. SUN

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Big profits from the Pari Mutuel system are not confined to the State of Maryland says the Evening Sun. Machine betting has become a craze in Canada, where racing has become a commercialized sport. In Montreal and vicinity, for instance seven race tracks were operated this year. Three were mile tracks, and the others were half a mile in circumference. It is easy Montreal for the purpose of holding races at night. From the first of May until the last of October, Montreal has continuous racing. At the mile tracks six or seven events are decided daily, while nine or ten are run at the half-mile merry-go-rounds. Machine betting is the enticement, and the track-owners are rolling in wealth. How long Montreal can stand the gaff remains to be seen. Eight one-mile tracks are operated in Ontario, three at Toronto, three at Windsor, one at Hamilton, and one at Fort Erie. Two more race courses probably will be built near Toronto before next season. All of these tracks draw the bulk of their patronage from Toronto, Detroit and Buffalo. They put on seven or eight races each day, and betting is conducted on a tremendous scale. As Windsor, recently, the bookies handled $400,000 in one afternoon. The track's take-off in commissions and 'breakage' amounted to 8 per cent. which yielded $32,000 from this source. So great is the desire for business that hundreds of free tickets are issued daily by the track managers. The admission to the half-mile courses is 50 cents, which further indicates the avarice of the Canadian turf promoters. In time it is predicted racing in Canada will be killed, either by legislation or because the public will become bankrupt.

Some men spend half their time in reading advice and the other half in dodging the consequences thereof.

Of course men are not vain, but just tell a man of 50 that he doesn't look a day over 30, and watch the effect.

TRAGIC DEATH WHILE AT MASS

Mrs. Edward La Joie Suddenly Stricken With Heart Failure Died a Few Minutes Later at Sacred Heart Church Entrance

While at prayer before mass at the Church of the Sacred Heart, on Sunday morning, Mrs. Edward LaJoie, 113 Gladstone Avenue, was suddenly overcome with heart failure and passed away a few minutes later at the Church entrance to which she had been removed. In the meantime the last rites of the Church had been administered and medical aid summoned but when Dr. Sullivan arrived the last spark of life was extinct. Following a pious custom of her exemplary life Mrs. Lt Joie had arrived early for the 8.30 o'clock mass, and had made the stations of the cross. She returned to her pew and shortly afterwards was observed to have taken ill. Ambulance carried her outside the church. When it was apparent that death was near the last sacrament was administered and the congregation assembling for mass joined in the litany and prayers for the dying as they knelt on the broad steps of the church. Seldom rarely demanded a more dramatic close to a life that, in its spiritual side, had centred so devoutly in the worship of God through the many services of the Church.

Mrs. La Joie's body was carried to the residence of her daughter, Mrs. M. H. Kelleher, 261 Romaine street, only a few doors west of the church, and the mass was begun, as usual, but with a deep gloom pervading the congregation, Rev. J. J. O'Brien returned with deep feeling to the death of Mrs. La Joie, paid a tribute to her piety, and remarked upon the preparedness for death.

The late Mrs. La Joie (nee Adeline Oaker) was born in Hastings, 58 years ago. She leaves to mourn her loss, her sorrowing husband, one son Frederick at home; three daughters Mrs. M. H. Kelleher, 261 Romaine street, Mrs. S. McGuire of Hastings and Miss Carrie La Joie of Rochester; also three brothers, John Oaker, of Hastings, Fred of Rochester, N. Y. and Joseph of Saginaw, Mich.

The funeral will take place from her late residence, 113 Gladstone Ave. at 9:15 Tuesday morning to the church of the Sacred Heart, thence to St Peters cemetery for interment.

Rev. A. Edmison, B.A. At Trinity Church

The Measure of Christian Faith Or the Man Who Like the Dog Would Rather Push Than Pull the Sleigh

Last evening the service in Trinity Methodist Church was conducted by the Rev. A. Edmison, B.A. The latter is a son of the late Rev. T. J. Edmison, B.A., who was well-known in the city and surrounding district. Mr. Edmison took for his text the words found in Ezekiel, fortieth chapter, fifth verse—"And behold a wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring reed."

Christian Manliness.

The speaker applied this text to the question of Christian manliness and the measure of Christian faith. The average man is not only aware of his shortcomings so far as Christian standards go, but he remains utterly indifferent of the fact that some day he will have to stand master. Man's belief and creed requires very careful measurement. That is especially true today, when there are so many doctrines. Paul tells us to "prove all things and hold fast to that which is good." Some people think it doesn't matter what they believe, so long as they are sincere. That is a false notion. Sin is sin, no matter what may be the form of disguise. Nearly all creeds are based and proven by the word of God, but if we want to measure our creed or standard we don't do it by the individual text but by the spirit of God. We must measure our creed first of all, because it has such an effect on our character. There are many forms of creed. It was a geographical creed that prompted Columbus to discover America. It was a political creed that plunged our country into war, and it is a political creed of another kind that keeps our neighbour at peace.

The Average Man.

It is not enough to say: "I am all right, I am as good as the average man." What the world needs to-day is men who are better than the average man. Never in the history of the Church has there been a greater need for men of that calibre. Next we should measure our thoughts and then our words. A dog hitched to a sleigh stopped in the middle of the path and exhibited a threatening manner when the sprinter, whom the boy was in charge of, came around, handed out this piece of philosophy: "Don't mind him, Mr. Edmison, he would rather bark than pull this sleigh." The speaker, concluded the speaker, who would rather bark and criticize than get to work.

And He Had All the Hall Marks of a Safe Married Man

Appearances are oft times deceiving. Chief Howard recently had an applicant for a vacancy on his staff and all reports of his character were favourable. Adjt. McElhiney had been impressed by the fact that he had frequently seen this man out with his wife and four children. In fact the family invariably went walking together, a fact that was regarded as a safe sign of a solid and trustworthy man. The Chief was convinced and told the applicant to report on Friday but Friday passed without the man appearing. When the Chief sought an explanation of the absence of his recruit his faith in manhood and accepted evidences of respectability were rudely shocked by the report that he had eloped with another woman or another man's wife.

"REVOLT" IS CRY TO GERMAN WORKERS

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Daily Chronicle says that an undisguised appeal to revolt has been addressed to the working classes of Germany through the Berne Tagwacht, organ of the Swiss Social Democracy, which has become during the war the chief mouthpiece of the so-called Socialist minority in Germany. It is in this paper that Liebknecht's manifestoes have regularly appeared. The appeal is headed "The Limit" and says, according to The Chronicle:

"From east and west trains are rolling in with Polish and Belgian slaves. Under military escort Belgian and Polish workers, torn away from their wives and children, are being driven to Germany.

"The law, commonly called the 'civilian compulsory service bill' will force many thousands of textile workers, who became unemployed and have received State relief, into the munition factories. All those rejected from the military service (cripples, children, and old-age pensioners) are to be put under the military lash. The wages question is to be settled by the sword, and woe to those who like the Hamburg workman cross their arms to show that the power of the state of seige has its limit.

"If the squeezing out of the last ounce of strength from those worn-out victims of imperialism will not suffice to make up her healthy and able-bodied wage earners, insatiable militarism will drive to its altar the last working girl or woman.

"The limit has been reached—the limit of sacrifices which imperialism can exact from German workers, the limit of reason and of Socialist patriotism. Neither the hangman or imperialism nor the Judasis of imperialistic Socialism can go further than this. It is hoped that it will also prove the limit of patience of the German proletariat.

"In the last few months that proletariat began to rattle its chains very forcibly. In the first number of Spartacus, an illegal organ of the international group which appeared in September, accounts were given of a demonstrative strike of 60,000 workmen in Berlin in July, of a demonstration strike in Brunswick on the occasion of the Liebknecht trial, the great street demonstration of August 16 in Essen, of a simultaneous demonstration in Duisburg. On November 2 a great demonstration took place in Dresden and the next day another in Berlin on the occasion of the revision of the Liebknecht trial. In Hamburg 30,000 dockers went on strike and compelled the dock owners and military authorities to yield concessions. These are proofs of a deep fermentation—indications that the tide is rising. To attempt to fetter the masses with chains in this state of affairs is a gambler's last trick.

"No one knows how great the pressure must be to make the sea of the proletariat overflow its banks. No one knows whether even the blood of its representatives can force it to fight when imperialism hurls itself with all its strength upon those ranks to tear out its last victim. But what we all know is that whosoever in this hour does not do his utmost to stir the workers is dead to Socialism. The Labor Union Socialist minority stands on the border-line of the road, leading either to decisive battle or to the lumber room of history.

FRANCE TAXES BIG STORES

Exacts 1 to 5 Per Cent. of Their Annual Profits.

PARIS, Dec. 2. — The Senate, which is debating the Income Tax bill, has adopted a clause taxing the profits of large stores of which the annual turnover exceeds 2,000,000 francs.

The tax is 1 per cent. on profits on turnovers from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000, 2 per cent. up to 50,000,000, 3 from 50,000,000 to 100,000,000, 4 from 100,000,000 to 200,000,000, 5 above 200,000,000.

An amendment proposing an all-round tax of 2 per cent. was rejected. Minister of Finance Ribot said that this would be hard on the smaller big stores. In this connection he mentional a big unnamed store which paid the State 898,000 francs as license fee on a turnover of 282,000,000 francs. Under the new scheme this store would pay 480,000 francs.

Four German Submarines Evaded Blockade And Are At Large On the Atlantic

Providence Journal Says Two Have Been Sighted Off West Indian Islands—Two Others Sunk By British Patrol—Washington Is Aware of Menace Off Coast—German Ambassador Has Been Warned That Any Repetition of U-53 Outrages Will Result in Rupture of Relations.

WILL NOT BE TOLERATED

Providence, R. I., Dec. 5.—The Providence Journal says:

"The wireless warnings recently issued to captains of merchant vessels in the western Atlantic were put out by the order of the British Admiralty, with the full knowledge that there are now in the neighbourhood of West Indian waters, two large German submarines, which have been here since the visit of the U-53, and also because of the knowledge of the British Admiralty that two other German submarines of the newest and speediest type left Kiel for the coast of the United States on November 4 and were able to evade every effort that was made to capture to sink them before they got out of the North Sea.

"The United States government has been fully informed of this situation, and President Wilson has made strenuous representations to Ambassador von Bernstorff concerning it.

Two Sent to Bottom.

"The Journal is able to state authoritatively that the plan of despatching four of the new German submarines from Kiel on November 5 was known in advance to the British authorities, that all four submarines left Kiel on that date and at different hours, and that two of them were sunk during the same day by British destroyers, the other two getting safely away.

"Advices received by the British Admiralty within the last week, it is now understood, make it certain that one of these submarines was sighted about sixty miles off the coast of Bermuda, heading northwest, on the morning of November 17, and that a small British cruiser sighted another German submarine November 28 about twenty-five miles from Port Antonio, Jamaica, but could not get within firing distance of her until she had submerged.

"It has been impossible to ascertain the nature of the correspondence that has been going on during the last week between the White House and the German embassy, but officials of the embassy have made no secret, in their private conversation, of the fact that the ambassador has been warned that the sinking of the merchant vessels in, or in the neighbourhood of territorial waters of the United States, will no longer be tolerated, and that any repetition of the exploit of the U-53 will mean a rupture of relations with Germany."

GERMANY CONSERVES COAL.

Plans Early Closing to Meet Fuel Demands of Railroads.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—The question of Germany's coal supply is being discussed in the newspapers. The German mines now are providing for more coal for railroad service than in peace time, a large number of German railway cars being operated outside of the country, in Poland, the Balkans, and other territory within the hands of the Central Powers. The consumption of coal is increased by the fact that now no German locomotives or trains are idle and because German industries are working to their utmost capacity.

To permit this increased use of coal it has been proposed to limit its use for purposes of public amusement and luxrios living. It is planned to close the saloons earlier in the evening and to limit electrical advertisements in the streets and squares of cities. It is not proposed to close the theatres.

CHILD IS COURT "PRISONER."

Little Paralysis Victim Appears in Complaint Against Father.

HEMPSTEAD, L.I., Dec. 5.— When the crier in Judge Walter R. Jones's Court cried "Prisoner to the bar," there was carried forward 2-year-old Edward Van Cott of Lakeview. He was charged with being neglected, and the arrest was technically made in order to insure his appearance in court, where he presented from infantile paralysis, which left him with a helpless arm. It was charged by Preston Chapman an agent of the Children's Society, that Robert Van Cott, the child's father, and Susie Doughty, his aunt, were not providing efficient after treatment for the child. The case is said to be the first of its kind brought into the courts in this State.

The father denied that the baby had been neglected. He said the needed treatment was given in the home, and it was as beneficial as could be administered elsewhere. Judge Jones took under advisement a motion to dismiss the case and will give a decision later.

Groener Champions The Man Power Bill

Tells Reichstag Common Sense Will Guide His Board in Its Application —Appeal For Co-operation—Compulsory Civil Service Recalls Bellamy's Socialist Dream, "Looking Backward."

HOPES FOR VOLUNTARY AID

BERLIN, Dec. 5, (via Sayville, L. I.)—The war has seen many of the fantastic dreams of Jules Verne and similar writers take shape in the form of U-boats and Zeppelins, and now the Kaiser's Government is making the socialistic dreams of Bellamy's famous "Looking Backward" as near fact as possible. The rationing of food stuffs to the whole nation, rich and poor alike, was only the first step in that direction. Compulsory civil service, as expounded before the Reichstag yesterday, seems to be a complete reproduction of Bellamy's socialistic State of the year 2000 A.D.

To judge by the illuminating speech of Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg, the logic of Helfferich and the persuasiveness of General Groener chief of the newly-created Kriegsamt —which, literally translated, is war office, but might better be termed "war emergency office"—this Groener, who formerly was chief of the military railway service, is certainly the coming man. In the Reichstag he has already arrived.

PASSES SECOND READING.

The first clause of the Compulsory Service bill, as adopted by the Main Committee, has passed its second reading in the Reichstag. All amendments were rejected. The Socialists and labor members voted in the negative.

If the bill passes the Reichstag as it will undoubtedly, it will be at a rapid rate without precedent, due mainly to the absolute confidence all parties have in Groener's ability. His speech that urged the Reichstag to accept the most revolutionary measure ever submitted to any German legislative body was a masterpiece of simplicity, straightforwardness and conviction. Little it mattered, be said, in what form the new law passed the Reichstag, the principal point was the manner of its execution. It would be a difficult, even a dangerous, law unless supplied with common sense.

Common sense was everything, Groener explained. It was far from the Kriegsamt's purpose to use irrational much less violent means in execution of the law. Germany needed men who gladly entered the nation's service; men who must be tied down were of no use. If one desired to increase production nothing was so stimulating as hearty, voluntary co-operation of employer and employe. It was desired to cover the whole empire's industry with a tremendous network so that all its efforts might be turned into one channel leading to a victorious end of the war.

HOPES FOR VOLUNTARY AID

Much has been said about closing up industrial establishments of a certain kind, Groener continued. The people seemed to think that after Dec. 1 some such orders would be issued as, "You shut up your plow; you close down your factory." That was ridiculous. The speaker hoped that proprietors of such establishments would go themselves to the Kriegsamt to see how they could be usefully employed in the great war machinery behind the lines. No cast-iron rules could be laid down; every case would be treated on its own merits. The one-man shop certainly would be spared wherever possible.

Again, the Kriegsamt did not dream of issuing such orders as "So many shoemakers will leave Pirmasens to-day and proceed to Winkeltown," or "So many textile workers will leave Plauen for Winkeltown." Such severe measures would only come as an ultimate step. The Kriegsamt would begin by taking work to laborers. Only where question of machines made this impossible would it transplant laborers necessary, but the State would see that their families lacked nothing.

Fearful stories had been told also of intended recruiting for civil service, but the Reichstag might rest assured that the Kriegsamt did not dream of taking the artist from the theatre to place him in the foundry, where the only thing he could do was to amuse other workers. Nor would it ask professors, no matter how learned, to bore guns or make ordnance bags. Not even a registry of civil service recruits would be kept, because it prevented too many men from doing work more profitable to the nation.

TO REPLACE POSSIBLE SOLDIERS

One of the principal purposes of the Kriegsamt, as outlined by Groener, would be to replace as far as possible, soldiers or men who might be soldiers, now employed behind the lines and throughout the country, with men of the civil service. Many people were shuddering at what they considered a violent incision into the nation's economic organism, but it was just this that enabled Germany to conduct the war with such splendid success. Groener said he could assure the Reichstag that no violent disturbances were necessary, but of course sacrifices would have to be made here and there. He did not know what the future might bring or what new sinister plans the enemy might lay to defame Germany in the world; therefore this thing must be done on gigantic lines.

Groener declared that it was intended to increase material efforts, increase resources of men, arms, and ammunition, and strengthen the moral power of the German people and their will to win. Such an organization would have the effect of a splendid tonic on the brave men in the trenches when they realized that the people at home were uniting with them in their efforts to win 'a glorious peace.'

"Everybody in the empire is expected to join the labor commune, (arbeitsgemeinschaft,) which, however, has no political color," were General Groener's closing words, directed to the extreme Left, the house rewarding this pun with roaring laughter. Curiously, the only partisans who oppose this most socialistic measure are a few secessionists from the Socialist extreme Left called "arbeitgemeinschaft."

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Newfoundland Heavy Sufferer In War Losses

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., Dec 5.—The extent to which the Newfoundland regiment suffered on the opening day of the British drive in July last became known when figures of its losses were made public.

In the fighting near Beaumont-Hamel about one hundred members of the regiment were killed or died shortly afterwards from wounds, and the regiment lost 150 officers and men who were listed as missing and of whom no trace has since been found.

Of the five thousand men, who went from this colony to join the British military and naval forces, about 600 have been killed. The principal army losses occurred in last summer's drive and in the fighting in Gallipoli last winter.

The men killed in the Naval service were scattered among many vessels, some of them losing their lives in actual sea fighting and others when their vessels were sunk by mines or submarines.

If They Are, Some Serious Lung Trouble Are Sure To Follow

A cold or cough, if neglected, will sooner or later develop into some sort of lung trouble, so we would advise that you get rid of it before it becomes settled. For this purpose we know of nothing to equal Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This preparation has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and has always given universal satisfaction.

Mr. Erwell Bolton, Wilson, Ont., writes: "Last winter I was caught in a storm and had to stay in a barn all night. I caught a severe cold and several medicines failed to cure. I went to some of the best doctors but these failed to do me any good. A friend advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I used three bottles and they gave me instant relief."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

He nodded to Paul and turned toward the door. Once more he repeated, "Then above me there shall be no other man," and though he said it with all the arrogant and ruthless spirit of a tyrant who would take no count of razed cities as he rode to his victory, yet he said it in a low and pleasant voice; a voice even tinged with musical gentleness.

At the twentieth floor where the elevator stopped to let him alight, Hamilton's eyes were aglow with the reflected light of his thoughts. He was still young and before him lay conquests that should dwarf those of the past. Posterity should link his name with achievements so titanic that history would be beggared for a precedent. Kingdoms would be his clients and kings his vassals.

Of late, a persistent idea had been creeping into his thoughts. The world was to know him as one of its mightiest rulers—so mighty that for him a crown would be too tawdry a toy—but some day he must die. Who then, demanded his sublimely arrogant self-appraisement, would carry on the work that had called him on to conquest from hills where the burned stumps stood up stark and black in the forest? It is the hallucination of superlative egotism to imagine that the world demands of her great sons—a succession.

Whatever gods looked on must have laughed as they read the vast audacity of this man's conceit. Never had it occurred to him that such an ambition as his own meant a mere greed for power—that no great cause or motive impelled him forward. Never had a whisper come to his soul that power is a trust which should make its recipient a crusader. The world thought of him as a man of great potentiality. He thought of himself grown to the proportions and stature of his dreams—the financial Titan expanded to the

WISE MAN— WEAR RUBBERS

Low Rubber Prices Make Possible Saving of Expensive Shoes—Many Will Wear Rubber Footgear Whenever Occasion Permits

The thrifty man or woman—those who are getting the most out of every dollar in these days of high prices—will find gratification in the fact that this year rubber footwear solves the question of how to remain well shod, in spite of high shoe prices. The wise buyer will purchase rubbers and overshoes this year to save the expensive shoes that he or she paid a dollar or so more for this season than last.

While everything else has advanced in price, rubber footwear has remained the same. In fact, rubber footwear would be cheaper this year than ever before were it not for the cost of all chemicals and the fabrics that are used in the manufacture. Even with these advances, rubber is the footwear for this winter and the wise ones will wear rubbers for economy. 23

Cash has been my watchword. There is now outside the United States Treasury another sum of unencumbered cash equal to that which I command. Any part of it is yours at any time; how much do you want?"

"Why—er—a few thousand for the present."

"Just state your figure and I'll triple it. You don't have to make explanations—or apologies." Then with a rather grim smile Ham added: "That's for Corbin to do."

Tom Burton carefully drew down his waistcoat over his rotund middle and settled his hat on his head at an exact angle. His son accompanied him to the elevator with an arm about his shoulder and as he returned to the outer office he directed, "Carl, come into my room. I want to see you."

Inside, he pointed to the bell. "I had my hand three inches from that button a few minutes back to call Corbin in here and fire him. I think I meant to sack everybody in this financial office—except yourself, Carl. I'm sick of these economists that pledge me round with unsolicited safeguards and try to defend me against myself and my family."

"If Mr. Burton had come to me—" began the secretary, but Hamilton Burton interrupted him.

"Have I failed to make myself entirely clear to my employees?" he inquired. "Do I have to tell them every day that they need not be so damned economical with my money? Haven't I ordered that my father and my brother shall always be accommodated without question?" Bristoll nodded, but made no comment.

"Carl, please try once more to make Corbin understand that one of the things I pay him for is to obey orders. Please make it plain beyond cavil that one of my most explicit orders is this: When the Governor comes for money, his job is to begin digging. Find out how much the Governor wants and give him some more."

The secretary was valuable in part because he was frank and because in his sincere loyalty dwelt no taint of sycophant fawning.

"To be entirely just, sir, I think Corbin does understand you, but a cashier who gives out money with no check on disbursements feels the burden of his responsibility. Any item that your father forgot would leave Corbin unpleasantly close to seeming a thief. Of late, your father's demands have been heavy."

"Yes, yes, I know about all that." A sudden change of mood brought a twinkle to the financier's eyes. "My father has been under very heavy expenses of late, Carl. If you had known him as I know him—back there close to 'God's immortal granite,' as you so aptly phrased it, you would agree with me that the humor of the situation is worth whatever it costs. He had to count the pennies, Carl, and when one threatened to get away he had to chase around it and head it off. He led the simple life and though his middle name was Standish, he regarded it as a sinful vanity to think of his ancestors.

Hamilton's smile was one of whimsical and naive humor as he pulled from a desk drawer a thick sheaf of papers, and laid them before the other.

"Times have changed. Cast your eye on those. They represent some of the Governor's expenses. They are bills from the Anglo-Saxon Bureau of Genealogy."

"What is this bureau?" inquired Carl, and Burton raised his brows.

"Don't you know? Why, it's a concern that outfits one with a full line of ancestors. My father is now prominent in many orders predicated on ancestors. His mail runs over with epistles beginning, 'Dear sir and Compatriot.' Such excavating of tombs and catacombs is costly." The young money baron paused and grinned.

"Once the old gentleman got warmed up, he went the full route and took all the jumps, Carl. He started out modestly enough to establish his descent from Miles Standish but when they had run the Plymouth captain to earth the trail was hot and their appetites were whetted. They had tasted blue blood. Now they're worked back to a king or two and the governor spoke recently of going to England to consult cathedral records. I believe he secretly covets William the Conqueror."

Hamilton shook his head and added gravely, "I hate to think how Corbin will grieve when he learns what William the Conqueror costs. Also father has a beautiful family crest—you may have noticed it on his walking stick. I have not yet mastered the niceties of heraldry so I can't properly describe it, but to me it looks like a rabbit leaping over an Edam cheese with sprigs of lettuce on each side. A delicatessen shop will steal it some day and father's heart will break."

Carl Bristoll filled and lighted a pipe and Hamilton Burton seated himself on the edge of the desk with his eyes fixed on a swinging foot.

"We all have our vanities," he mused. "I named myself Montagu—arbitrarily and of my own unbiased will. I nominated and elected myself a Montague. Carl, and I had an equal right to be a Capulet."

"I call that a moderately innocent offence," admitted the secretary. There were moments when these two came together forgetting the relationship of chief and lieutenant, meeting on the level of a joint affection.

Prepare This for a Bad Cough—It's Fine

Cheaply and Easily Made, but Does the Work Quickly.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effectual, pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

You Can Believe This If You Wish To.—A beautiful barefooted dancer, fingering her strings of pearls, listened over a lobster and a bottle of champagne to a septuagenarian's passionate protestations of love. "And remember dearest," the septuagenarian quavered, "remember, ere you decide, that a man is only as old as he feels." "Oh, I'm not worrying about that end of it, little one," the barefoot dancer answered, with a merry laugh. "What I want to know is, are you as rich as you look?"

What are Peps

Peps are the new treatment for coughs, colds and lung troubles. They are little tablets made up from Pine extracts and medicinal essences. When put into the mouth these medicinal ingredients turn into healing vapors, which are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes. The Peps treatment is direct. Swallowing cough mixtures into the stomach, to cure ailments and disorders in throat and lungs, is indirect. Peps are revolutionizing the treatment of colds, as their price is within the reach of all. 50c. box all druggists, or Peps Co., Toronto.

Pitt and Others Ecbhemized To Beat Napoleon

Now that the empire is looking to Cabinet Ministers to give it a lead in patriotic economizing, it is interesting to recall what was done by Pitt and others when in the war with France it was necessary to introduce a tax upon incomes. Stanhope, in his "Life of Pitt," says: "On the measure becoming law, it was thought most desirable to assist and enhance its effect by further voluntary contributions. Men in high places set the example. Mr. Pitt and Mr. Dundas subscribed each £2,000 a year in lieu of their legal assessments, to endure, if they remained in office so long as the war continued. So did also to the same amount the Speaker and each of the two Chief Justices, and so did also, though he held no office, Lord Romney. The King subscribed no less than one-third of his Privy Purse, or £30,000 a year."

Father Killed With Son

A young Army airman, 2nd Lieutenant R. Kilpatrick Muir, took his father, Mr. William Muir, England, Finchley, for a flight. When a few yards from the ground a sudden gust of wind caused the machine to lose its balance and it fell to the ground. The airman's father was thrown out and killed instantly, but the airman received only slight injuries, which were attended to at the nearest hospital. The machine was smashed to pieces.

A PIMPLY FACE OR POOR COMPLEXION QUICKLY RESTORED

Thousands of young men and women would be handsome ad attractive were it not for unsightly pimples, blackheads, and rough uneven skin. Custom seems to recommend lotions and salves, but unfortunately their effect is but temporary. These disfiguring blemishes do not originate in the skin—their birth in every case goes further back, to the blood, which must be cleansed of humors before the pimples depart for good.

A physician who has made a careful study of such cases, says that the quickest cure comes from a blood-building medicine like Ferrozone. The minute Ferrozone strikes the blood its good work begins. Poisons and foul matter are expelled. Every trace of humor is driven out, and the whole life current is supplied with nutriment and health-giving qualities. You can always tell a Ferrozone complexion when you see it—the cheeks are clear and rosy, no signs of sallowness—the eyes are bright and expressive because rich, red blood is circulating through the whole system carrying health, energy, and strength with it. Not only will all skin eruptions disappear, but an increase in vital strength, an all-round improvement will be apparent. No rebuilding tonic could be more efficient. Get Ferrozone to-day—Good for young and old, for well folks and sick ones, too. 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

HOW ONE V.C. WAS WON

Temporary Lieutenant Eric Archibald McNair, 9th (Service) Battalion Royal Sussex Regiment, for most conspicuous bravery. When the enemy exploded a mine Lieutenant McNair and many men of two platoons were hoisted into the air, and many of them were buried. But though much shaken he at once organized a party with a machine gun to man the near edge of the crater, and opened rapid fire on a large party of the enemy who were advancing. The enemy were driven back, leaving many dead. Lieutenant McNair then ran back for reinforcements, and sent to another unit for bombs, ammunition, and tools to replace those buried. The communication trench being blocked, he went across the open under heavy fire, and led up the reinforcements the same way. His prompt and plucky action and example undoubtedly saved the situation.

It is the morning after a Zeppelin raid in a north of England town. A number of women are in earnest discussion outside a certain house. There are no signs of disagreement amongst them. On the contrary, it is quite evident that the central figure of the group has the others in entire agreement with her. "An' I sames yeh again," she is saying, amidst sympathetic murmurs, "can anyone say it's done fair? T' bomb dropped in our back yard, but bobby's gen and took it away; never even give me a note for it, An' wot I sez is, it's our bomb."

WHY TREAT HUNS WELL?

Prisoners Write to Germany of Good Treatment—British Ideals

Describing the prisoners taken from the German hordes in the summer offensive a reporter writes:—One of the first things which prisoners want to do after they are taken and fed and rested, is to write home. Some thousands of letters have been written by them since this battle began, and I gather from those whose duty it has been to read these letters for purposes of censorship that there has hardly been one which has not testified to the writer's astonishment at the kindness with which he has been treated. It is probably useless to suppose that these letters will have any effect in Germany or influence in any way the German treatment of our men. There are some here who would change the method and mete out to our prisoners the same treatment as we are given in Germany. But I believe that the vast majority of Britons will hold that we are right. The German will probably remain a German; but it is best we should continue to be ourselves. It is our precedent and not that of the Hun which is going to influence prosperity; and if we fell entirely to his level the future of humanity would be dark.—London Times.

WAR TO A CONCLUSION

Best For Permanent Peace—Lincoln's Ideas Sound

The Spectator:—We do not want to press the analogy of other wars too far, but there is one which will help people to understand the situation. Abraham Lincoln, in the last year of the war with the South, would never listen to overtures for peace, however great the concessions which appeared to be offered to him. Lover of peace and hater of war, as he was, he knew that the only way to end the war which would justify the nation for having waged it was by dictating terms, and not by negotiations. He was not going to leave the Confederates in a position to make a second war, when they had recovered sufficiently, and to spring once again at the throat of the North. He acted not out of any feeling of revenge, but because he knew that the South must fight on till it could fight no longer.

No less than $1,625,000 worth of boots a week are being turned out by the Northamptonshire factories, who are supplying not only the British army with footwear, but are also making boots for the French army and navy, the Belgian, Serbian, and Italian armies. Many curious boots are being turned out by the Northampton factories. There is a thigh boot for sailors in which he can almost float; short-footed boots for Gurkhas; sandals for West African soldiers; special boots for the Flying Corps; and last but not least, mosquito boots for the soldiers fighting in tropical countries.

Feared Being Kissed

"Somewhere in France" an exceedingly comely damsel insisted on fervently kissing a British "Tommy" who had performed a very heroic deed. She saluted him at least a dozen times, and, indeed, only desisted when pushed aside by another admiring fair one burning to show her appreciation in the same sweet way. At least a score of others followed suit, and goodness only knows when it would all have ended had not the gallant soldier sought refuge in flight. He afterwards remarked that he would rather face all the Germans in France and Belgium than go through such an ordeal again.

LADY SCOTT WORKING IN MUNITION FACTORY

Lady Scott, widow of Captain Scott the British naval officer who lost his life while, returning from the south pole, is now one of the thousands of British women who are working in the munitions factories of England to keep the armies at the front supplied with ammunition and other war necessities. The story, issued by the Official Press Bureau in London, contains the following:

"I confess the change to such unfamiliar conditions made an adventure of which, contrary to my expectations, the zest did not wane. Partly I suppose, because I made friends; they came and stayed with me. I stayed with them; they were new to me as I to them; but we liked each other. There was a jolliness about it all—arriving with daylight into a warm room among friendly faces and in the evening hurrying each other up to get ready so that friends could walk home in company.

"In short, there was real comradeship, and the personal lives of my friends became of great importance to me. Beyond all this there was absolute freedom from that unrest which is a characteristic disease of this time. The munitions worker, "like the man in the ranks, is under orders, doing her piece of assigned work. There is no time to be anxious, to fret for news, to feel the days drag heavily. One gets home, eats, sleeps like a tired animal, and awakes fresh, ready to go on again. Looking back on it, I would not for anything be without the experience, and I honestly believe that no one who volunteers will regret the choice.

"Earning money, too, will be for many an adventure and not an unpleasant one. Men have told me that they never valued anything more than their shillings drawn at the pay table. Women have the advantage of the soldiers, because what the munition worker earns is very appreciable. You go for six weeks to one of the schools established by the Ministry of Munitions and then you can go into a factory and start at $5 a week—earned by making what your country urgently requires; and you feel good about it.

"But, above all, you will escape the moments which come to any self-respecting girl or woman when she asks herself whether it is right or fair or decent that she should be having a good time while her menfolk are facing and suffering what we hear of—and much, too, that we do not. It is no small moral comfort in these days to feel yourself clear of the disgrace of leisure."

PARALYZED LIMBS.

Doctors failed me, but after using two boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

Brace Gangplank as Miss Cherry, Weighing 530 Pounds, Goes on Ship.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Miss Alice Cherry, who weighs 530 pounds, and is said to be the heaviest woman in New York, sailed for Buenos Ayres, yesterday, on the Lamport and Holt liner Vestris.

She drove to the pier, near the foot of Montague Street, Brooklyn, in a closed auto, which just held her comfortably with the front seat taken out. Before Miss Cherry ascended he gang way leading to the steamship the foreman had it jacked up and ran two spare topmasts underneath to take the strain off.

Acting under instructions of the Chief Steward, the carpenter of the Vestris had taken out the top berth in one of the largest cabins and built out the lower one about four feet. It was braced underneath by two small steel beams, set on short girders of the same metal, so that the bunk would not give way and let the plump passenger down when the ship surged suddenly on the hearing wave. Miss Cherry told the passport officials that she was going to an exposition in Buenos Aires.

In direct contrast to her massive bulk was Harti Hassid, who said he was thirty inches high and weighed thirty pounds. When he saw his cabin Hassid asked the steward to make him up a bed on the net hanging over the berth, intended for collars and neckties, which would make a good hammock for him, he said. The little man was bound for the same show as his heavy fellow passenger.

BRITISH FIRE FIGHTING

Zeppelins Destroy Cottages, But Big Blazes Are Prevented

A. entral writer says: When one of these 260-pound Zeppelin bombs is dropped from a height of a couple of miles falls on the average workingman's house, that house ceases to exist, and where it stood is a fire. But so admirable are the fire fighting arrangements, and so swiftly are the firemen on the spot that even in densely-packed districts there has been no important conflagration. Equally amazing it is that, while the face of England is thickly pitted with munitions works and places of military importance, not one of them has been damaged. The opinion of neutral correspondents is that the raiding is kept up in order to cheer the German people. They believe, however, that the Germans are making a terrible mistake, and that when peace terms are being considered they will find that their experiments with Zeppelins in England will exact a heavier penalty than the killing of a hundred thousand British soldiers.

"Give Him no Rest"

General Sir Newton Moore, in an interview, said: Our course is clear—we must keep on hitting the enemy as hard as possible, giving him no rest either by day or night. Knowing how he resents our artillery treatment, we must contrive by an increased output in guns and shells to make that treatment still more intolerant to him. We must keep our numbers up to full strength, so that we can derive the full benefit of our artillery ascendancy. In a word, our motto is to peg away, increasing our effort all the time until the enemy can no longer offer an effective resistance. That day is the day of victory.

Language of "Kulture"

IF YOUR THROAT IS HUSKY CATARRH MAY BE STARTING

A weak or irritated throat is the first step towards Catarrh. Everything depends on your remedy. A cough mixture slips quickly over the weak spots, drops into the stomach and does little but harm digestion. It's altogether different with Catarrhozone—it cures because it gets right at the trouble. You inhale Catarrhozone, breathe in the vapor of healing balsams that strengthen and restore the weak throat tissues. You'll never have colds or coughs. Throat trouble and catarrh will disappear with the use of Catarrhozone. Get the large dollar outfit which includes the inhaler, it lasts two months and is guaranteed to cure. Two Cases of Eczema and How They Were Cured

Further Proof That Dr. Chase's Ointment is a Positive Cure For Chronic Eczema

If you read these letters you will find that Dr. Chase's Ointment is not to be classed among ordinary salves and ointments.

By actual curing itching, stinging eczema in many thousands of cases has stood the most severe test to which any ointment can be put.

Mr. J. Brice, Temperance road, Parry Sound, Ont., writes: "Just a line to praise Dr. Chase's Ointment for what it has done for my wife. She has been suffering from eczema in her head for two years, and has spent no end of money with doctors and for ointments, which did her no good. She had about given up hope of ever being cured, when someone told her to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. By the use of this Ointment the trouble has left her entirely, so we have unbounded faith in it. I have told several people about the Ointment."

Mrs. W. G. Dowden, Greenspond, Bonavista Bay, Nfld., writes: "I suffered with eczema on my hands, and for eighteen months was so bad that I could not use a needle to sew or do anything. I could scarcely use myself. Though I had lots of salves from doctors, I could never get much benefit from them. Then I sent for a sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found it very different in action. It was not long before my hands began to heal, and four 60c. boxes made them well. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment too highly, and frequently give some to others to get them using it, for I know that it will cure."

In the home Dr. Chase's Ointment is of almost daily usefulness, for by relieving chafing and irritation of the skin it prevents eczema and similar itching skin diseases. Applied to all cuts and wounds, it prevents blood poisoning and heals the skin. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRLS' COAT.

By Anabel Worthington.

One of the late arrivals in coats is shown in this picture. It is one of the models at the office of this publication.

straight front models with the skirt section plaited at the sides.

The collar presents the new fashion in neck finishes, cut deep and round and inlaid with velvet or satin. The general note of the season is brought out in the button decoration of the front sides; the closing is at the left side. Crown cuffs on full length sleeves correspond with the collar; the belt may be of material or a leather belt.

The body part of the coat is neatly fitted at back and in front where the double breasted effect is gained by arranging the buttons as shown and where a backward turning plait is introduced with effect.

For every day wear, corduroy, velvet and like weaves are desirable. For a Sunday coat the appreciation and enthusiasm of the girl will run high if the model is developed in velvet, with raccoon fur for the collar, velvet and broadcloth also are excellent materials. A serviceable and stylish coat may be developed from the pattern without difficulty.

The coat pattern, No. 8023, cuts in sizes 8 to 14. To make in size 8 requires 2¾ yards 44 inch goods and ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

COMING OF GREATER CHURCH IS PREDICTED BY REV. T. H. MITCHELL

Scholarly Sermon at St. Andrew's Yesterday Basis of Proposed Church Union Not Broard Enough Said the Speaker

GREAT FACTORS OF LIFE

At St. Andrew's church yesterday morning the Rev. T. H. Mitchell, acting pastor, predicted the coming of a great church, the basis of which would be even broader than that which would result from the proposed scheme of church union as it had been recently voted upon. In the course of a scholarly sermon he said that he had voted for the union and felt that the basis of union as proposed was not broad enough. "I heard a man say the other day," lamented the speaker, "that there was no salvation outside of his own communion. Can you imagine a modern man who thinks, saying anything like that? Why it's absurd."

The music of the service was particularly good. In the anthem the choir displayed conscerable ability and training, the rendering being marked by an accuracy in time, and a splendid balance and expression. Miss Helen McLaren rendered the solo part beautifully, and was equally effective in her solo following the offering.

The sermon dealt with the apostle Philip, St. John, which reads as follows, was the text of Mr. Mitchell's sermon — "The day following, Jesus would go forth into Galilee and findeth Philip and saith unto him, follow me." His sermon dealt with the Apistle Philip, and in it the speaker compared the Christian church to that apostle.

The members of the apostolic band, said Mr. Mitchell, should be studied in pairs. James and John had that genius for spirituality. In John we have the excellencies of that spirituality, and in James we have its limitations. In the same sense Andrew and Philip were both characterized by common sense, and here, too Andrew manifested its excellencies, and Philip its limitations. There was a reminisence in the choosing of St. Andrew as the patron saint of Scotland, for the Scots were truly a race of shrewd common sense. When Philip told Nathaniel, "We have found him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth," Nathaniel's reply had been, "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" Here Philip showed his common sense. He did not stop to dispute or argue. To do so would probably have been fruitless. He replied, "Come and see."

But in the common sense of Philip there were three limitations, and these the speaker mentioned because common sense, in itself, could not save the world. "Whatever of this sermon you may forget," said Mr. Mitchell, "please remember this. This world will never be saved by common sense."

The limitation of Philip's common sense was his lack of vision. In the first place, he lacked a vision of the breadth of Jesus Christ. When some Greeks, seekers after the truth, asked Philip to take them to Jesus he was confused and embarrassed. To him Jesus was the Saviour of only the Jews. But for this matter all of the apostles lacked the vision of the breadth of Christ at that time. This was characteristic even of the present day. I heard a man say the other day, "There was no salvation outside of my communion." Can you imagine a modern man who thinks, saying anything like that? Why its absurd." The speaker had voted for church union and yet he did not think the basis of the proposed union was broad enough.

"Whosoever will do the will of my Father who is in Heaven, the same is My brother, and sister and mother."

"This is the basis of that great church that is to be. God grant it may come soon if not already on the horizon.

In the second place Philip lacked the vision of the power of Jesus. This was illustrated on the occasion of the feeding of the multitude with the loaves and fishes. The disciples were at a loss and didn't think of appealing to Christ, and the Saviour had to demonstrate His divine power to meet the situation. Sometimes, to-day, in the sickroom we are just as guilty. One of the most prominent medical men of the day had said that the work of his profession had changed greatly in recent years. It was now the doctors task to induce their patients to live the proper lives in body and in mind. So it is that sometimes in the sick room we forget that Jesus, the all powerful physician, is near, and lose sight of His power. The wonderful Gordon of Boston, said in his congregation once, that whenever obstructionists and obstructions came in his path, he prayed! And every time both the obstructionist and the obstruction was removed.

So it was that common sense lacks a vision of the great unseen factors of life. Philip lacked this, and it is one of the greatest feelings of the people of the present day. Every man who goes to church has intellectual faith. But has he spiritual faith in the Word of God? Will he trust his weight upon it? Will he step out upon the eternal promises of God and prove them true?

Thirdly, Philip lacked a vision of the meaning and purpose of Jesus Christ. In his teaching Jesus started with the home, with God as its Eternal Father. Christ came to reveal the great loving heart of the Eternal Father and to reconcile the great world to God. The death of Christ is the expression of God's great love. We had only to consider the first part of the Bible's greatest text to discover this. God so loved the world that he gave His only begotten son."

Here the speaker diverged to a remark in regard to the common sense administration of the church. He urged that this be the rule in the business affairs of the church. "If private individuals would run their business as they are content to run the church, their business wouldn't be in existence at the end of three months. But aside from this the church must have vision, inspiration, mysticism — it must have the characteristics that Philip lacked long ago.

The speaker referred to the five common senses. "I pray God," he said, "that you and I may have the uncommon sense — the sixth sense of Faith. The church must have more than common sense. It must have a vision of the breadth of Christ, the power of Christ and the meaning and purpose of Christ."

"The great factors of life are those that are never seen at all. To-morrow people may be pessimistic about the outcome of the war. I am never pessimistic. I believe in the rule and the power of the unseen Sceptre. We will win, our civilization will be better, and a sweeter thing than has ever been seen will manifest itself. In the meantime," concluded the pastor earnestly, "let us have faith."

HAD BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

—Cured by Vinol.

For years and years we have been telling the people of Peterboro that Vinol is a wonderful remedy for bronchial troubles. Here is positive proof:

Tilden, Ill. "For five years I suffered from bronchial asthma. In the winter time I was obliged to sit in a Morris chair all night, as I could not lie down, owing to that dreadful choking sensation. I tried nearly every known remedy, but nothing gave me any relief until one day I met the Station Agent at Williville, Ill., and he said he had been a sufferer for years, but had been cured by Vinol. I at once commenced to take it, and the result is my cough is gone, my appetite has improved, and I can lie down and sleep all night, and my experience leads me to believe that Vinol is a certain remedy for bronchial asthma." John H. Condell, Tilden, Ill.

The reason that cough syrups fail in such cases is because they are palliative only, while Vinol removes the cause, being a constitutional remedy in which are combined beef and cod liver peptonates and glycerophosphates. It strengthens and revitalizes the entire system and assists nature to expel the disease.

WOMEN AND WAR WORK

Good Salaries For Capable Women —Opening For All

There are good opportunities in connection with the manufacture of munitions in England. In certain factories machinery has been installed so that heavy shells are easily handled, and the necessary machine operations are conducted by women. In other places light machine work is carried on by women only, and the same physical strength is not required as in the case of shell work. Other women are employed on the gauging of shells and shell parts, and the examining of cartridges and similar accessories. This work requires speed and accuracy, and girls show particular adaptability in it.

A number of openings also occur for women of good education and general intelligence to act as forewomen or supervisors in factories, and to control departments where groups of girls are employed. There is likely to be a very keen demand for capable women of this type, and the influence of a good person in this work may be very considerable. The wages run from $7.50 per week to $12.50, and in some cases higher posts are available.

The London County Council provides training for all the above work free of charge. The course lasts six weeks, attendance being required for four hours each day.

CURE FOR LIQUID FIRE BURNS

Clever Invention to Take the Place of Antiseptic Dressings

The horrible burns caused by German flame throwers are being successfully treated with a method devised by Dr. Bathe de Sandfort. Instead of antiseptic dressings, which kill the living elements of the tissue, a mixture of paraffin and resina is melted and kept at a certain temperature on the burn. The substance, called ambrine, revives the apparently lost activity of the injured cellules and a natural skin finally appears, with scarcely any disfigurement.

REVENTLOW'S BRAZEN LIE

President Wilson Elected by English Bribes, Huns Are Told

That it has been recognized in the United States for years that President Wilson owed his election largely to the influence of British gold is the statement made by Count Ernest zu Reventlow in an article explaining why the Germans for whom he speaks will not accept Mr Wilson as a peace mediator. The Count, who, as one of the leading writers for the Deutsche Tageszeitung, is recognized as the mouthpiece of the big agrarian and extreme reactionary interests of Germany, says:

"From month to month in this war the solidarity of the two Anglo-Saxon powers has constantly become more clearly apparent, a solidarity in all matters that affect the German Empire as an opponent; the war finds them of one mind regarding the main question and in league with each other. It must be remembered that Wilson was elected with the strong participation of the financial world of Great Britain—to put it more simply, with English money. This has been acknowledged in the United States for years.

"Unfortunately, we in Germany are still in many instances not free from the delusion that Wilson is an 'unworldly scholar,' and we allow ourselves to be deceived through the intrigues of the scholar and man of principles into forgetting that these are only superficialities and that behind them stands a shrewd American, free from illusions, and a convinced partisan of the Anglo-Saxon way of looking at the world."

Anzac Romance

Trooper Patrick Larkin of the Australian Imperial Force, was married at Dorchester to Sister Alice Marian Davis, who has been nursing him at the county hospital. Miss Davis, a pretty American girl, is a native of Virginia. Trooper Larkin was one of the Gallipoli heroes. A large number of wounded attended the wedding at the Roman Catholic chapel. Outside the church instead of bunting there was a line of streamers formed of hospital bandages from which was suspended a military boot decked with daffodils and ribbons.

Simply Libellous.—An English lady was taken in to supper at a private party a few nights ago by a young Scotsman who had a high estimate of his own mental capacity. They drifted on to the subject of the Scot abroad. "I've often heard," said the lady "that Scotsmen who leave their country are, generally speaking, much cleverer than those who stay at home." "Oh, yes," replied the Scot, with an attempt at wit. "You see, the reason is that at every outlet there are persons stationed who examine all who pass, so that, for the honour of the country no one is allowed to leave who is not able to uphold his own and his country's dignity." "Oh then," she said, with a bright smile "you were smuggled, were you?"

LONDON, December 5.—Britain's "reconstruction" of her Government now in process, must be taken as an emphatic reiteration of Britain's determination to fight the war to a finish. In all the maze of discussion of what sort of a "reconstruction" was being framed, this fact stood out paramount. The Cabinet crisis was precipitated by the public demand voiced by Cabinet members admittedly close to the public.

It was conceded to-day that out of the "crisis" would come the organization of a compact war council, probably of not more than five members, to be given supreme control in the direction of England's war energies. There was no confirmation of the widespread rumour that Asquith had determined to resign, but it was believed he would do so rather than become a mere figurehead with Lloyd-George in practically full charge of the conduct of the war.

Serbs Score Again In Monastir Fighting

SALONIKA, December 5. — Fresh advances by the Serbian troops around Monastir were detailed in to-day's Serbian official statement. "Continuing our successes," it was stated. "On Monday we carried Starovina by assault, capturing two howitzers. Zaivitch is in flames. The Bulgars are retreating northward."

Talent Tea by the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, Thurs.

The members of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club intend to hold a series of talent teas, the proceeds to be used for the purchase of wool for socks. The tea this week will be held at the home of Mrs. McLean, 539 Aylmer street, on Thursday afternoon. Everybody is welcome. Bring your friends and help the boys in the trenches.

THE GEISHA

Efforts are being made to induce the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Company to give another performance of "The Geisha," which made so decided a success last week. It is claimed that there are many who paid their money for seats and were unable to see the performances, owing to the crowded houses; and others, who were not ticket holders, but who are anxious to see this opera put on again. The cast and chorus were so ably given under the direction of Mr. Lavey, and it speaks highly for all concerned that a third production should be called for.

COUNCIL HOLDS UP ILLUMINATED BOX BY-LAW IN READING

Demands Assurance That City Will Be Protected in Event of Any Accident Arising From Their Presence

GOT SECOND READING

The Council baulked last night at a by-law providing for an agreement to permit the locating on the streets of thirty illuminated refuse boxes, similar to the samples already centrally installed.

While in committee on the second reading Mayor Duffus moved an amendment to the by-law, seconded by Ald. Duncan that the agreement be not entered into because the boxes were not efficient, were unsanitary and they were opposed by the wiring inspector.

"Look at the revenue" said Ald McIntyre. "Thirty boxes at $3.50 monthly rental."

Mayor Duffus urged that the Council should find out the standing of the company in order that the city would be assured of protection in the event of an accident.

Ald. Edgar said he was opposed to the agreement until the city was assured of protection.

The third reading was postponed.

Results So Far This Week Show Decided Recruiting Revival

247th Battalion Secured Six Recruits Yesterday and This Morning While Mechanical Transport and 74th Battery Each Got a Man---Eligible Men Are Being Challenged Everywhere and the Campaign Will Be Kept Up---Official Announcement of Decorations Won by Peterborough and Lakefield Boys--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

A decided revival in recruiting has been in evidence so far this week and with the energetic efforts that Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his officers and men are throwing into the campaign, the 247th Battalion is going to boom from now on. Yesterday the new battalion signed on three Peterborough men, and this morning the city supplied three more for Col. Ackerman's unit. The Mechanical Transport and the 74th Battery each secured a recruit, making eight for the day and a half; which is a decided increase over the results in any similar period for a long time.

Among the new recruits is Wally H. Moore of Peterborough, who was a Sergeant in the 57th Regiment, and who is regarded as one of the steadiest and most consistent rifle shots in Canada. He was a member of the Canadian Bisley team on one occasion and has made splendid records at the Ontario and Dominion rifle competitions. Sergt. Moore has made a long study of the scientific side of shooting and will be a most valuable member of the new battalion. Other new recruits today were Henry Joseph Jones, 530 Albert street, and Nelson Hill, Hunter Street.

The eligible men of the city are to be given no peace until they are aroused to a sense of the duty of the hour. The men of the 247th Battalion have been turned loose on recruiting duty on the streets, in the pool rooms and everywhere that young men congregate and they will use their best endeavours to bring results. They have been strictly warned to use no insulting remarks to any one, but they are to allow no one of apparently military fitness to go unchallenged.

Sunday night's recruiting meeting and the serious sermons preached in the city churches are having their effect.

ATHENS FIGHTING WAS THE RESULT OF A TRAP

Astonishing Story of the Treachery of King Constantine—Allied Troops Numbering 3,000 Were Surrounded by 25,000 Greek Soldiers.

ADMIRAL'S NARROW ESCAPE

LONDON, Dec. 5.—According to some special despatches of the Athens correspondents filed on Sunday at Piraeus, where the allies control the telegraph lines, the situation in Greece is one justifying Lord Robert Cecil's statement that it was of "extreme gravity" for the allies.

These despatches represent that last week's fighting in Athens was the result of "a deliberate trap, treacherously prepared by the King and the Government," 25,000 troops being disposed around the positions which Vice-Admiral Dufournet had previously notified the Greek Government he would occupy. These troops then attacked the allies, who numbered 3,000. The latter fought until their ammunition was exhausted and then yielded, except a detachment of 100, who tried to cut their way through. Only thirty of these escaped.

According to the same accounts King Constantine is quietly mobilizing and preparing for war against the allies; intending to co-operate with a section of Field Marshal von Mackensen's forces, which is reported as the Bucharest "front," by Teutonic General Garrail's flank.

It is also stated that the Greeks are advancing on Piraeus.

Tragic and Terrible.

The Chronicle this morning has the following from its correspondent, George Renwick, at Piraeus:

December 1 (Friday) is designed to be remembered as one of the most tragic and terrible days in Balkan history. On that day Greeks shed the blood of the sons of Britain and France.

The allied forces at Piraeus were slightly over 2,000 strong. A small force of several hundred British sailors reached the Zappion building unmolested. It was the second force of French marines, directed toward the Rouges barracks, which first came in to armed contact with the Greeks. This little battle continued for the greater part of the day, till the French force was withdrawn at night.

Admiral's Narrow Escape.

The most serious struggle, however, took place at the Zappion building, a vast hall designed for exhibitions but now used as a military storehouse. What happened here makes it difficult to believe in the existence of anything but a military plot against the allied forces. When the firing began at Rouges Barracks Admiral Du Fournet was at the Zappion building and, without warning, fire was opened from the heights. The Admiral was standing with a group of officers and men outside the building when a machine gun opened fire and six of the group fell, wounded. The Admiral had a very narrow escape, and the position of the men there soon became very serious. The rifle and Maxim fire became heavier every minute and the French and British were forced to return the fire, one of their machine guns being mounted on the roof.

Then the treachery was added to. Behind the building lies the gardens of the Royal Palace, and from there too, rifles and machine guns opened fire. The fire continued heavily all day, the Greeks eventually using shrapnel from the heights above. The third scene of the fighting was on Philopapus and Observatory Hills, near the towering Acropolis rock. The advancing force of the allies found the Greeks on both heights in strong positions, and here perhaps, the heaviest losses occurred. I had a good view of the part of the fighting

DUMMER CATTLE THIEVES SENT TO KINGSTON "PEN"

Davis Hill Gets Five Years and His Brother William Two Years—Judge Huycke Had No Doubt of Their Guilt

WILLIAM PLEADED GUILTY

Davis Hill, of Dummer township, was sentenced by Judge Huycke this morning to five years, and his brother, William Hill, to two years, in the Kingston penitentiary after the former had been found guilty and the latter pleaded guilty to stealing cattle from various neighbouring farmers.

The thefts were committed during the past summer and early fall, and the search for the culprits and preparation of the evidence busily occupied Crown Attorney Hatton. The results of this trial should be a relief to Dummer farmers who have suffered for years, it is said, annular depredations of those for which the Hill brothers were sentenced to prison.

Davis Hill was sentenced to five years on each of four charges of having stolen cattle from John Dean, Jas. Matthews, E. A. Carveth and Stuart Clydesdale, the sentences to run concurrently.

William Hill was sentenced to two years for having stolen one steer from Wm. Davis, also of Dummer.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the prisoners and when Judge Huycke found Davis guilty, changed Wm. Hill's plea to guilty and immediately addressed the court on behalf of the prisoners.

Judge Huycke dwelt upon the serious nature of cattle stealing and remarked that in the American west such thefts received summary treatment. He had no doubt of the guilt of these young men. Davis Hill is 28 years old and William 30 years and married. They should have been engaged in worthier pursuits at this time. His Honour hoped that during their term in prison they would reflect upon their lives that had been wasted up to the present and would come forth again resolved to be better, stronger and braver men.

In this case the work of County Constables Moore, Bullied, Clements, the local detectives and police, and Inspector Boyd, of Toronto, is worthy of commendation.

Very Distinguished Coloratura Soprano In St. Johns Dec. 14

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Dewey attended an invitation a recital of grand opera numbers given under the direction of Maestro J. A. Carboni in Toronto yesterday afternoon at the Hamburg Conservatory of Music. The artists were Miss Dora de la Lowe and Mr. Bernard. Miss Lowe is a Canadian singer engaged at the Paris Conservatory of Music but the war broke up the work of that institution, and, before appearing in New York after Christmas, Miss Lowe is spending a holiday at home in Toronto. At the reception, on being introduced, Mrs. Dewey promptly asked Miss Lowe if she would come down to Peterborough to sing, a request which was most kindly acceded to and it was at once arranged for Miss Lowe to sing several oratorio numbers at the St. John's Choir Choral Recital next Thursday week, December 14th in St. John's Church. The numbers, as follows will likely be selected—"Rejoice Greatly" and "Come unto Him" Messiah; "With Verdure Clad" Creation; "Hear ye Israel" Elijah. Miss Lowe has a wonderful range note B, C and D in alt, being easily sung with clear soprano tones.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, DEC. 5, 1916

THE ONLY ONE.

The Toronto Telegram, in its vigorous language, which was not all used up in driving Sir Sam out of office, denounces Canadian journals for advocating peace. We don't know of any Canadian journals of note or influence advocating peace at the present time, except the organ of some members of the Borden cabinet, "Le Devoir."

WE ARE NOT DISCOURAGED.

The evil of talking too much does not disappear with the utterance of the words. Sir Sam Hughes' wild criticism of the late Lord Kitchener, for holding the Ypres salient, and as asserted, thereby imperilling the lives of Canadians, is seized by the pro-German press of the United States to justify the statement that dominion troops —Canadians, Australians, and New Zealanders—have been placed in positions of greater peril, while other British troops have been assigned to safer battle billets. This is done to stir up a feeling of resentment in the dominions, and to make them feel less interested in the prosecution of the war. But the people of the Dominions, especially Canadians, do not need to go to pro-German "sheets" in the United States to find their feelings and to define their attitude towards the war. Canada and Canadians entered in this war of their own free will; they were constrained by no compulsion except the impulse of duty, the compulsion of affection for the cause of the Empire and the human interests it represented. Canadian soldiers and the soldiers of the Dominions did not enlist for soft billets. They entered the fight on equal terms with other British soldiers; they asked no odds, only a chance to do their work. If by any chance they have found themselves in tight places; if in the early fighting at Ypres they were hit with the gas, the French got a similar dose. If Canadians at Ypres held positions of unusual risk they and the Canadians at home are proud that they were considered worthy of being selected, if they were selected, to "hold the fort." There is stern work too, to be done on the battlefields, the price of success has to be paid for the sake of the cause; and both British home-born soldiers and the overseas fighting forces, though they have suffered heavy losses, have not one iota of their stern determination to see the fight to a triumphant finish. Those who, in the United States, moved by friendship to the enemy, strive to drive in a wedge of dissension or discontent in the hearts and minds of soldiers and the Canadian people, have little idea of the ideals, of the temper of the soldiers of the Empire and the people that sent them. The harder they are hit the harder they will counter. Their heart is in their work; and their hands will second their hearts.

NATIONAL SLANDER.

The Toronto Telegram vigorously condemns the appointment of honorary colonels and demands an end of the practice. Considering the fact that Sir Robert Borden and Hon. W. H. Hearst have, as reported, been respectfully made honorary colonels, the Telegram administers the reproof direct. There is in the abstract, nothing vicious or reprehensible in creating honorary colonels—only something childish, especially at a time when make-believe, and lay-figure Canadian soldiers are at a great discount. But if there is anything in it, in the shape of honour or recognition as a stimulus to greater exertions, and larger sense of responsibility in war work, why is the honour confined to members of the government party? We are all working together to win, and to end, this war. We are asking every citizen—to do his bit in some way; and it is not unbecoming to the government to recognize service in war work no matter on which side party fealty is placed. Liberals are not very fond as a party of entirely ornamental distinction: and there are many prominent Liberals we know who would, we are sure, decline the purely decorative title of honorary colonel. They would prefer the real titles or title to opportunity for service, if partisanship did not reject their services.

But it seems that the government is determined in this small matter, as it is in the much larger and more expensive and resource-wasting matter of government patronage to give all the favours and substantial advantage to one side. While thousands of both parties are making sacrifices fighting at the front, dying in the trenches, and thousands at home are fighting and making sacrifices in their own way; in both cases demonstrating that party, as far as real work is concerned, plays no part in the popular endeavour. While all this is going on without regard to party considerations, it is not good for the cause that the government should make distinction in the bestowal of favours or patronage.

A party politician of the gutter-snipe class took it upon himself lately to declare that the fighting of Canadians in this war is largely done by Conservatives. When confronted with the malicious mendacity of his statements, he qualified his assertion by insisting that the leaders of the Liberal party were not above suspicion as to their loyalty and interest in the cause of Canada and the Empire. Neither has he any better basis for this slander than when he applied it wholesale.

It is a notable fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, has made more recruiting speeches than any one or even or three members of the government, and he is listed to speak at several more recruiting gatherings in Quebec.

It is humiliating necessity to have members, though their numbers are defend the loyalty of the Liberal leader against the slanders of parish politicians. Mr McNaught's "naming" of the Liberal leaders is not well justified. Liberal members of parliament certainly may be regarded as leaders. A recent despatch from Ottawa, states that nineteen Conservative and nineteen Liberal members of Parliament have a special interest in the fortunes of the war at the front—they have one or more sons at the front. The Liberal members have, in this matter, relatively done a little better in points of numbers. There are 136 Conservative members in the house and 38 Liberals. The latter have done their equal share with Conservative members, though their numbers are about one-third less. This does not argue any superiority of loyalty or willingness to surrender sons to the service. The Liberal members may have been more fortunate in having more sons to offer.

There is no desire to institute comparison, but simply to show the baseless character of the indirect insult to Liberals implied in the statement that "the fighting in this war was largely done by Conservatives." We believe that the mass of both parties are sound in soul, loyal to the heart and the heart's blood.

The most disloyal element of any party, with the most traitorous disregard for our success, is the man—the individual, for he is not a man—who for the sake of a little ward political advantage will sow the seeds of discord by vilifying and aspersing the loyalty of one half of the population, united with the other in heroic and single minded endeavour to help Canada do her duty to herself, to the Empire and her allies in this war.

Government Neglect Of the Feeble-Minded

Special to The Examiner

Toronto, December 5. — Startling figures presented at the recent meeting of the Academy of Medicine in relation to the extent of feeble-mindedness in the provincial capital and throughout Ontario, have created a sensation in the public mind. The government has long been aware of the need of drastic action to cope with the problem but has failed again to measure up to its responsibilities. Public opinion has been roused to a high pitch of indignation by the vivid word pictures painted by the distinguished medical gentlemen (Drs Clark and Hincks) describing the existing conditions; and in the face of the exhaustive report submitted by their inspector early in the Spring, the neglect of the government is considered inexcusable. The Department for some inexplicable reason failed to take any effective steps to mitigate this evil, and the public protest of such well-known representatives of the medical profession shows how serious the consequences are regarded.

The Government cannot claim that the matter is a new one. At a meeting of the Legislature Committee of the City of Hamilton, in March last Alderman Wright, who is a Conservative in politics, slated the Government for neglecting to deal with these pressing questions. Mr. Wright told his colleagues that Mr. Hanna (the Provincial Secretary) has disclaimed all responsibility in the matter. Dr. Clark also put the matter strongly before the government in April at the annual meeting of the Ontario Educational Association. Furthermore, it was brought up in the House by the Liberals on the 19th of April, in the form of a resolution requesting the government to formulate and submit to the legislature suitable and adequate plans to meet the serious conditions disclosed in the report of the Inspector of Feeble-Minded. The government voted this resolution down and declined to recognize the urgency of prompt action to meet the situation as demanded by Mr. Rowell.

The laxity of the Government in spite of warnings, leads them with the responsibility for the continuance of this menace to society.

AGRICULTURAL CREDITS AS A DOMINION-WIDE MEASURE

Agricultural expansion is recognized as a necessity of Canada's reorganization, when a vast burden of foreign debt must be provided for and a large force of men must be enlisted in productive industry. Mr. E. A. Lucas of Vancouver has worked out a plan, with careful elaboration, for a Dominion-wide system of rural credits. The object is to enable men willing to work to settle on the land with the assurance of a livelihood while their farms are being brought to fruition. The momentous importance of overcoming this initial difficulty is obvious. The plan outlined, which cannot be published in full, is based on that which has been highly successful in New Zealand and Australia during the past twenty years. New Zealand, with $65,000,000 loaned, has had only thirty-five foreclosures during eighteen years, a striking contrast with Saskatchewan's 1,723 foreclosures by private lenders during the fourteen months previous to the recent Commission inquiry. The rate charged is one per cent. higher than the cost of the money borrowed abroad by the Commission on bonds guaranteed by the Government. British Columbia has already adopted legislation providing for the inauguration of a policy on the same general financial basis. It provides for long-term loans for land purchase and permanent improvements, short-term loans for improvements of a less permanent nature, and season loans. Mr. Lucas suggests that each Province adopt the British Columbia policy and appoint a Commission, the Provincial guarantees to be endorsed by the Dominion, and the bonds sold by the Finance Minister. The proceeds of each Provincial issue would be turned over to the Provincial loaning Commission.

Where to draw the line between individual and collective effort must always be a difficult problem. Loans to individual farmers for specific purposes would not as severely test official rectitude as do such policies as the bonusing of privately-owned railways or the encouraging of industrial corporations by tariffs. The farmer has been for years a heavy sufferer by the policy of aiding urban industries with import obstructions, and he is certainly entitled to any compensatory policy that can be adopted with reasonable safety. Canadians should be able to elect men worthy of being trusted with such a policy. Mr. Lucas suggests joint inquiry by Provincial Premiers and Opposition leaders. When it comes to administration full Governmental responsibility with publicity and Opposition criticism would probably be found safest.

The evil benefiting every attempt at improvement—our indefensible land system would certainly militate against this proposed reform. The possibility of Governmental loans would give value to large areas now unsalable, and increase the value of much held awaiting customers. That would probably be like the match to the dry prairie, so easy are booms launched. If it started a boom it would make the second state of the intending farmer worse than the first. The ingrained absurdity of looking for something out of land other than the crop must first be eradicated. It would certainly be a mistake to loan public funds for the purchase of land from private or corporate owners. The mere prospect of such a policy would start a boom long before legislation could be made effective. From Nova Scotia to British Columbia the chief difficulty in the way of bringing land under cultivation is the cost of clearing it of title deeds.—The Globe.

Time Government Took Action in Fire Prevention

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—Any announcement from the government that there is to be a re-organization of the Forestry and Fire Prevention Service of Ontario is a welcome one and it is sincerely to be hoped that the Hon. Mr. Ferguson's plans under the direction of Mr. E. J. Zavitz will have a good result. One cannot help but feel, however, what a deep pity it is that the government did not take action sooner, but delayed year after year until the terrible disaster of the Northern fires of this past summer made some action absolutely imperative.

It does seem too bad that lethargy has obtained such a hold in practically all departments of the government that no action on any vital question can be hoped for until something happens that demands action, often too late as it is.

As to the responsibility of the government for the condition of affairs which led to the terrible conflagration this summer, there is, for example, the opinion of the Ottawa Journal, a leading Conservative paper, which recently described the policy of the Ontario Government as "a provincial disgrace." "In the matter of forest fire protection," said the Journal, "this province has shown an amazing lack of progressiveness and intelligence. It is doubtful if there is a community on this or any other continent that has suffered more in life and treasure in recent years from forest fires than the province of Ontario. It is certain that none has shown greater feebleness or negligence in dealing with the problem."

The Canadian Forestry Association of which the Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden is Hon. President, in a number of bulletins issued this summer, severely criticized the Ontario government for failure adequately to cope with this serious problem.

SUSPICION FASTENS ON MAN FOR BARN FIRE

HE IS PURSUED BY POSSE OF FARMERS AND SENT TO JAIL A VAGRANT.

Tillsonburg, Dec. 5.—The destruction by fire of the Sovereign Glove & Mitt Factory, at Delhi, Friday, with a loss of $40,000, was followed by the discovery of a suspicious character carrying a grip, crossing a farm near Dorchester. On being requested to stop, he started to run, pursued by the farmer until he reached the M.C.R. tracks, where the fugitive threatened to brain the farmer with a large stone. The farmer turned back to a neighbor's for help, and telephoned to Brownsville, but the man evidently took to the woods. The rural lines were soon busy and by a prearranged plan of the farmers a posse was soon on his tracks. He was finally surrounded in the woods on the 12th concession, south of Brownsville. He was taken to the barn of Wm. Marshall on the 13th concession and guarded by the posse till Chief of Police Patton of Tillsonburg arrived, and brought the prisoner back to the local jail. He was brought before Magistrate Hare in the afternoon and sentenced to 6 months in the Woodstock jail for vagrancy until a further investigation is made. His name is William Coles—alias Wolf, alias Shipley.

RHEIMS THINKS CATHEDRAL IS NEAR A FALL

Rheims.—On November 1 the thousandth German shell struck the Cathedral of Rheims. Ever since the recent French drive at Verdun salvos of shells have been poured daily into Rheims, many striking the cathedral. Four of the flying buttresses supporting the roof of the nave have been demolished and several others hit. As the weight of the stone roof, which is borne almost entirely by these flying buttresses, the danger of its fall has become imminent.

Other parts of the beautiful architecture and statuary have suffered irreparable damage, and this increases daily, but as their destruction does not affect the stability of the building their loss is felt only from the viewpoint of art.

The fears of the authorities have been increased by the usually severe rainy season, which this year has been uninterrupted for many weeks. The timber and leaden roofs of the cathedral having been destroyed early in the bombardment, the rain falls into the building through the shell holes in the stone roof and washes away layer after layer of the calcined stone of the interior, leaving muddy puddles on the floor and gradually percolating through to the crypts and foundations.

Endeavors were made at first to deal with this peril to the cathedral by employing men to clear away the water and at the same time to prop up parts of the building in danger of falling. The Germans, however, who keep close watch on all that is going on within the town, fired on the working parties, and the effort had to be abandoned.

SPLENDID ADDRESS BY CAPT. T. W. JONES

Canadian Kitchener League Heard the Story of Y. M. C. A. Work at Front

The Canadian Kitchener League and those who attended their meeting last night certainly enjoyed a rare treat. Captain T. W. Jones, who is a splendid speaker, gave a most interesting and inspiring address on the Y.M.C.A. work among the soldiers from the time they leave home until they return home again. The speaker presented a pleasant picture of the clean, manly sports that the boys enjoy in the different camps at home, on the boats and even in the camps in the front firing lines. He told of the many pleasant hours spent by the boys in the reading and writing rooms and of the many letters that would never be written but for the persuasion of the Y.M.C.A. workers in these camps, and the ready materials. Captain Jones emphasized most of all the great work that was being done for the moral uplift of the boys. The pleasing song services held most regularly in the camps, and the wonderful decisions of the men in which they pledge themselves to live the Christian life.

...NESS ...E CONSULTED ...EGARD TO ENTENTE

...ity of Welcoming the Delegates From ... Met Last Week at Montreal and Dis-

Farm, at Guelph, have attracted public notice as provincial enterprises worthy of inspection. It is expected that, as a spectable, Niagara Falls will be illuminated at night, in order to enter something unique. Peterborough was mentioned, but no invitation was extended, nor will be, until the Council and business men of the city have been consulted, which will be done at once. If favourable the claims of Peterborough for notice will be made. To have so many business men and people of prominence in the Lower Province see our city and note its appearance and importance, would be real good advertising. Many claims are already in from the Western part of the province.

In the afternoon further conference was held. Trade relations were discussed. Mr. Godfrey took occasion to state that he had been impressed with reports from manufacturers and wholesale men as to the already improved relations that were apparent as a result of the visit and tour of the Ontario men. Travellers reported that relations seemed much more cordial, that orders were larger, that there was a cheerful and friendly tone, both in spoken and in written communications that had been lacking. He was glad to say that he looked on this as the beginning of better relations that would make for smoothness and absence of friction. Then when the Quebec men carried back an account of what they saw and heard and felt the greatest good might be looked for.

Sir George Garneau spoke of the responsibility devolving on the two provinces. He was impressed with the vital importance of carrying through the movement, looking to the future. In the West alone we had an immense population of peoples, who not aliens, were many of what we termed alien birth. Generally well behaved and peaceable they still had their affinities. This class would largely augment after the war, unless Canada refused entrance, which was not to be thought of. To take in these peoples and make of them Canadian citizens would be the work and responsibility of the next ten years. But he looked to it that Ontario and Quebec, with the assistance of the Maritime Provinces must be the balance wheel of Confederation. Surely the day was coming when the provinces east of the Great Lakes must be linked together and the problem was stand together and do our share in years from now as to shaping the destinies of the Dominion. It is to us to see as the years roll on that we stand together and do our share in solidifying of the Canadian interests and of the Canadian future. We should welcome those who come in a right mind, but never forget that it would be years before any part of assimilation could take place.

No Trouble to Remove Superfluous Hair

(TOILET TIPS.)

It is an easy matter to rid the skin of objectionable hair or fuzz, if you proceed as follows: Mix a paste with some water and a little powdered delatone, apply to the hairy surface, and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin, and the hairs are gone. This method of banishing hairy growths is painless and does not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain to get real delatone.

...n Edgar—I am perfectly willing to accede to the request of the Quaker Oats Co. if they will not restrict us in the time in which we may build the bridge from London to Hazlett street. The Hunter street bridge may have to be rebuilt in four years, and we can scarcely expect to erect another at London street in that time.
Alderman Langford took the same view.
Mayor Duffus believed that the reason the company limited the time to four years in which the bridge should be built, was to expedite its construction. He agreed with Alderman Edgar that after that period the matter would be entirely in the hands of the Quaker Oats Co., but be felt safe in their hands.
Alderman Evans moved, seconded by Alderman Edgar, that the report be adopted.
Alderman Weir moved an amendment, seconded by Alderman Duncan, that the particular clause go back to the Committee.
Alderman Langford was the only supporter of the motion voting. Alderman Edgar and Alderman Evans. The amendment carried by 6-3.

THOUSANDS OF CARS ARE UNDULY DETAINED DECLARE THE RAILROADS

Demurrage Figures Show Widespread Use of Cars for Storage Purposes While Prompt Unloading Would Release Three Thousand More Cars Daily For the Use of Shippers.

The prevailing car shortage on the railways of Canada is admittedly serious, and the Railway Commission will open an inquiry at Toronto on December 11th, to investigate the conditions existing.

The Canadian Pacific, the Grand Trunk, the Michigan Central and the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railways, acting also on behalf of other railroads in Canada, have applied to the Board for an order increasing the demurrage charge from $1.00 to $4.00 to each day a car is held after the expiration of the free time allowed.

The majority of the shippers are in agreement with the railroads that some action is necessary to increase the number of cars available for loading each day if the business of the country is to proceed without serious interruption. It is felt in particular that something should be done to release the thousands of cars now being unduly detained, and if this is not speedily attained that many plants will be forced to cut down their output and difficulty will arise in handling even the perishable produce of the Dominion.

"Car shortage has become a problem of national importance," said a prominent representative of the railroads to-day. There is a demand in every part of the Dominion for cars, and meanwhile the terminals at all large centres are congested by cars which are being held, in many cases for weeks, awaiting unloading. All the shippers are not to blame for this condition. The figures show that the majority do not detain cars beyond the period of which has been agreed upon as sufficient for unloading, but on the other hand there are hundreds of others who do not appear to be willing to make any real effort to unload consignments promptly. They are responsible for tying up, in a measure, the whole transportation system of the country, and by their attitude they deprive other merchants of the use of cars which are badly needed. Any action which can be agreed upon to reach this class of delinquent will therefore be to the advantage of the community as a whole.

"How serious is this undue detention of cars is shown by the amounts collected by the railways for demurrage. The railways after the arrival of car at destination inform the consignee and allow ample time for customs clearance and payment of charges and then two or three days, exclusive of Sundays, holidays and wet days, according to the class of shipment for unloading. The rules of the Railway Commission then call for a charge of a dollar a day for each car held after the expiration of the free time. Obviously this small charge does not deter many merchants from holding cars until it suits their convenience to unload. Many of them look upon this as the cheaper form of storage. But the business of a railroad is to move produce from one place to another and not to supply cars for storage, and if thousands of cars are used in this way the nation's traffic cannot be properly handled in busy periods such as the present, when every car available must be utilized.

"Every dollar received by the railways in demurrage represents a car which has been withheld from the use of some other shipper for a day. The Canadian railroads are at present receiving about $90,000 a month in demurrage charges, representing 90,000 cars each month held up one day over the limit, or 45,000 cars held two days. At this rate this will amount to over a million dollars a year, or a million cars held up one day above the ordinary time.

"But for this wholesale detention of cars as shown in the demurrage collections there would be 3,000 more cars each day at the disposal of shippers and a most important advance would be made towards the solution of the car shortage problem. These figures should be considered by every shipper.

"This $90,000 a month in demurrage is not sought by the railways, their desire is to have their cars to carry on their business and serve their customers. The gathering of large numbers of unloaded cars at terminals slows down traffic all over the line and retards shipments. The railways are powerless to deal with the man who orders a large quantity say, of coal, and leaves it in the cars until the market becomes favourable enough in its estimation to sell. But that man is an enemy to good service, and good railway service is absolutely necessary if we are to prosper as a people. The only way in sight to remedy the present state of affairs and release these thousands of cars appears to be to raise the demurrage rate so that it will be unprofitable to hold cars for storage purposes. If by that means the railways can get these tied-up cars moving the increased detention charge will operate to the benefit of the shippers as a whole. It has been proved in California that a considerable increase in the demurrage rate cut down the number of detained cars to a minimum while the amount received by the roads under that head also decreased as merchants adopted more prompt methods of dealing with their consignements.

"Every shipper in the country should realize that it is to his interest, by as speedy unloading of cars as possible, to co-operate with the railways in maintaining car service. A million dollars a year in demurrage is largely a national waste."

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply a little at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drugstore. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Suffragette Demonstration

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The first demonstration by suffragists, such as "heckled" the British House of Commons in the past, occurred in Congress to-day, when President Wilson was reading his annual message to a joint session of the Senate and House. Soon after the President had started speaking, a big yellow silk banner was unfurled from the House gallery by a group of suffrage sympathizers. It bore the inscription: "Mr. President, what will you do for woman suffrage."

A page was dispatched to the gallery and hurriedly tore down the banner. The President went on with the reading of his speech, apparently giving the banner no attention, though it was unfurled directly in front of him.

No Hope of Beer And Wine Licenses

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—"I would not be candid with you if I held out any hope of an amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act permitting the issuing of wine and beer licenses," declared Premier Hearst to a deputation of twenty leading labour men which had waited upon the government this morning asking for this amendment on the score that many people were out of work as a result of prohibition. Premier Hearst added that the evidence which came to him was that the Act had been of great benefit to the people of the province generally.

TANKS REMAIN ON WATER ST. CURB

Frank White and sixteen other merchants on Water street petitioned the Council last night to disallow Mr. A. Brown's application to instal a gasoline tank in front of his store and that the tank on the east side of the street be removed.

Mr. Brown, Mr. B. Manning and Mr. Chas. McClelland spoke in favour of the gasoline accommodation on the curb and the report of the Whole Council went through, carried a sanctioning clause, without any discussion.

No Trouble to Remove Superfluous Hair

(TOILET TIPS.)

It is an easy matter to rid the skin of objectionable hair or fuss, if you proceed as follows: Mix a paste with some water and a little powdered delatone, apply to the hairy surface, and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin, and the hairs are gone. This method of banishing hairy growths is painless and does not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain to get real delatone.

Agreement Between City And Quaker Oats Co. Delayed Again

The agreement between the Quaker Oats Co. and the City was sent back to the Committee of the Whole for further consideration after a short discussion by the Council last night.

The clause providing for this agreement was presented in the Committee's report as follows:

That the City Engineer submit a plan for the opening up of certain streets between London Street to the River and the extension of Hazlett Street to the River and also the location of the proposed bridge across the river, to Mr. Denham and that in submitting it, the proposal be made that the Quaker Oats Company make an exchange of the land for the streets from London Street and Hazlett Street to the River for Hill Street and the ends of Murray and London Streets without any conditions.

The last three words invited Alderman Stratton's objection. Not long ago the Council had, he said, suggested an agreement which the Quaker Oats Co. was ready to effect. The manufacturers should not be hampered unnecessarily.

Alderman Edgar—I am perfectly willing to accede to the request of the Quaker Oats Co. if they will not restrict us in the time in which we may build the bridge from London to Hazlett street. The Hunter street bridge may have to be rebuilt in four years, and we can scarcely expect to erect another at London street in that time.

Alderman Langford took the same views.

Mayor Duffus believed that the reason the company limited the time to four years in which the bridge should be built, was to expedite its construction. He agreed with Alderman Edgar that after that period the matter would be entirely in the hands of the Quaker Oats Co., but he felt safe in their hands.

Alderman Evans moved, seconded by Alderman Edgar that the report be adopted.

Alderman Weir moved an amendment, seconded by Alderman Duncan, that the particular clause go back to the Committee.

Alderman Langford was the only supporter of the motion voting, Aldermen Edgar and Alderman Evans. The amendment carried by 6-3.

COUNCIL AND BUSINESS MEN WILL BE CONSULTED IN REGARD TO ENTENTE

Peterboro' May Have An Opportunity of Welcoming the Delegates From Quebec—Selected Committee Met Last Week at Montreal and Discussed Important Matters.

The selected committee to complete the organization of the movement now known as the "Bon Entente," the get-together of men of the two provinces of Ontario and Quebec, with the object of smoothing out a lot of friction and making for, as the name expresses, better relations along the lines of business and inter-communication, met on Thursday last, in Montreal. Seventeen from Ontario and a like number as representing Quebec. Suggestions had been made and submitted to the Quebec men for confirmation. These were not onerous nor in the way of a radical change. But such as have grown out of observation and previous conference.

To give the movement a definite recognition, officers were selected. Those present were constituted the Council, or governing body. An executive of eight was nominated and elected. Sir George Garneau, of Quebec City, was elected chairman, and J. M. Godfrey, vice-chairman. The executive comprises equal numbers from the two provinces. Two secretaries were also selected and instructed to prepare in concise form the proceedings as taken so far, for a permanent record.

A short preliminary conference was held by the Ontario men at the Ritz-Carleton, and afterwards the gathering met in the Council room of the City Board of Trade. The organization was at once completed in order that proceedings should have an official status. The executive committe comprises, in addition to the chairman and vice-chairman, R. Parsons, Toronto; A. E. Ames, Toronto; Col. Mulloy, Kingston; Kirwan Martin, Hamilton; Z. Hebert, Sherbrooke; J. E. Hebert, Montreal; Hon. Justice Pelletiere, Quebec; Huntly Drummond, Montreal.

The return visit of Quebeckers to Ontario was taken up. Animated by the fine feeling brought to the surface during the pilgrimage of the Ontario men, six weeks ago, it is known that a very large and representative party would be glad to make the trip. About December [illegible] being raised the date was not found to be suitable. Deferring it to the month of January it was pointed out that, as a spectacle, Niagara Falls fairly early in the month and the attendance of people at the session and having business at the capital would interfere. It was finally arranged that the Quebec friends should select a date to suit themselves, allowing sufficient time to prepare in Ontario a suitable programme.

In winter weather it will not be convenient to afford the visitors such an outside entertainment as given in Quebec. It is, however, proposed that Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and Guelph be visited. The Agricultural College and Prize Farm, at Guelph, have attracted public notice as provincial enterprises worthy of inspection. It is expected that, as a spectable, Niagara Falls will be illuminated at night, in order to enter something unique. Peterborough was mentioned, but no invitation was extended, nor will be, until the Council and business men of the city have been consulted, which will be done at once. If favourable the claims of Peterborough for notice will be made. To have so many business men and people of prominence in the Lower Province see our city and note its appearance and importance, would be real good advertising. Many claims are already in from the Western part of the province.

In the afternoon further conference was held. Trade relations were discussed. Mr. Godfrey took occasion to state that he had been impressed with reports from manufacturers and wholesale men as to the already improved relations that were apparent as a result of the visit and tour of the Ontario men. Travellers reported that relations seemed much more cordial, that orders were larger, that there was a cheerful and friendly tone, both in spoken and in written communications that had been lacking. He was glad to say that he looked on this as the beginning of better relations that would make for smoothness and absence of friction. Then when the Quebec men carried back an account of what they saw and heard and felt the greatest good might be looked for.

Sir George Garneau spoke of the responsibility devolving on the two provinces. He was impressed with the vital importance of carrying through the movement, looking to the future. In the West alone we had an immense population of peoples, who not aliens, were many of what we termed alien birth. Generally well behaved and peaceable they still had their affinities. This class would largely augment after the war, unless Canada refused entrance; which was not to be thought of. To take in these peoples and make of them Canadian citizens would be the work and responsibility of the next ten years. But he looked to it that Ontario and Quebec, with the assistance of the Maritime Provinces must be the balance wheel of Confederation. Surely the day was coming when the provinces east of the Great Lakes must be linked together and the problem was stand together and do our share in years from now as to shaping the destinies of the Dominion. It is to us to see as the years roll on that we stand together and do our share in solidifying of the Canadian interests and of the Canadian future. We should welcome those who come in a right mind, but never forget that it would be years before any part of assimilation could take place.

While not brought up as a [illegible] for discussion the matter of [illegible] ing came to the fore. In the [illegible] since the last visit, one sour[illegible] friction had been removed, the [illegible] sion of the matter known as [illegible] lingual question. This was on[illegible] ferred to in a way to indicate th[illegible] highest court having decided [illegible] Quebec, so far as interested, [illegible] loyally abide by the decision. The expression of e[illegible] to a vote, Dominion wide, on th[illegible] ter of conscription, has ren[illegible] quiet. It is not now thought th[illegible] thing to do as far as affecti[illegible] enlistment from Quebec. [illegible] the Ottawa authorities have n[illegible] ized the recall of the two emine[illegible] brave officers leading the [illegible] Canadians at Courcelette, and [illegible] place in their hands the prose[illegible] of enlistments in the sister pr[illegible] This it is expected will brin[illegible] work in proper hands and unde[illegible] per auspices.

Together with this an intima[illegible] ganization is being formed. Th[illegible] be the civilian effort to assi[illegible] military. Council Divided Evenly On Proposal To Change Banks and Montreal Retains the Business

The Council deadlocked last night on the Finance Committee's recommendation to transfer the city's accounts from the Bank of Montreal to the Bank of Toronto. After considerable discussion Ald. Edgar came to the point with a motion seconded by Ald. Langford who had clashed with Ald. Stratton that the city's banking be continued with the Bank of Montreal.

Ald. McIntyre moved an amendment seconded by Ald. Saunders that the business be changed to the Bank of Toronto.

The ayes and nays on the amendment were as follows.

Aye—Aldermen Saunders, Stratton, Duncan, McIntyre and Weir.

Nay—Aldermen Edgar, Dobbin, Langford, Evans and Mayor Duffus.

As the result of the tie which resisted every attempt to reach a definite decision the motion and amendment were nullified. Hence the business remains with the Bank of Montreal.

RETURNING A FAVOUR.

Ald. Edgar in speaking on the motion favoured the Bank of Montreal for the reason that two years ago it had come to the assistance of the city when it particularly needed a financial friend and had been refused $100,000 by the Bank of Toronto in which the city had its account. Besides Ald. Stratton admitted that there was no difference between the tenders of the two banks. Peterborough might need a friendly assistance again, perhaps after the war, and the Bank of Toronto had given us no guarantee that we would not be refused aid while the Bank of Montreal had already evidenced its disposition toward the city.

WELL PAID FOR FAVOUR.

Ald. Stratton replied that the Bank of Toronto had not refused Peterborough the money it required two and a half a year ago. It had urged the city not to go into the Hydro scheme because of the very unsettled state of the market at that time. But the Council hurried to Montreal and acted too quickly. The result was they got the money, but for one per cent. more than they had been paying. The rate was five per cent. but they had to pay six per cent. for their 'favour'.

"We've paid handsomely for it during the past two years said Ald. Stratton asserting that had the Council been less precipitate as the time they would have been accommodated by the Bank of Toronto.

Ald. Langford remarked that this proposal to return to the Bank of Toronto had originated with Ald. Stratton.

"You're altogether wrong," replied the Finance Minister. It was his duty he said, to see that the city was not paying too much for its money and the Finance Commitee had considered the matter of rates of interest.

Ald. Langford suggested that the proper procedure would have been to have notified the Bank of Montreal that certain advantages could be obtained elsewhere then, if it could not afford these facilities, but not until then, should another bank have been recommended.

Ald. Stratton replied that he had done what the Finance Committee had instructed him to do.

Ald. McIntyre stated the Finance Committee had acted in good faith.

Ald. Stratton stated that when the Bank of Montreal had withdrawn its first offer of five per cent. on loans and three per cent. on credits and raised to 5½ and 3½ per cent. the Bank of Toronto had offered.

Ald. Langford said he could understand the proposed change of banks if the city were receiving better terms.

Legislative and County Grants To The Rural Schools of Peterborough

Annually the legislature provides a certain sum for the payment of grants to rural schools on the basis of the value of the equipment and the character of the accommodations. The money is divided among the counties in proportion to the number of schools, and the County Council is required to provide a sum equivalent to the amount. The total thus obtained is apportioned among the schools, each receiving ten per cent. of the value of the equipment, and a graded amount on accommodation according to a scheme prepared by the Department of Education.

There Is Nothing to Eat

Some people have an idea that it is absolutely necessary to provide a lunch of some kind to get a crowd together, but the Red Cross are confident that the announcement that Miss Mignon Telgmann will play in a direct tone-test with The "New Edison" in some of Albert Spaulding's beautiful violin selections, and that Miss Dorothy Allan will also sing will fill the Collegiate Auditorium, on Friday evening next. ONE KENT FARMER GETS $4,000 FOR BEANS

BLENHEIM, Dec. 5.—Some handsome cheeks have been handed out by the Rutherford Milling Company and the Kent Farmers' Produce Co. during the past week for beans brought in by the farmers at $6 a bushel.

John McDougall, a South Kent farmer, got a check for over $4,000. Several others were up in the thousands. The Rutherford Co. paid out over $15,000 in one day for beans.

Response Was A Ready One

Peterboro' People Make Ready Answer to Appeal

In this city there is a mine — a reservoir of things that have been used. It leads off into several veins and seams that have only to be tapped to yield heaps of things. Things quite useful, but out of hand, but available for use by some one else. The appeal for articles of furniture to fit out a family in hard circumstances has been met in a most helpful way. Cheerfully and quickly and in the greatest readiness. The articles will be sent for and placed in the house by the end of the week. It is due that acknowledgment be made to the friends who have been helpful.

Mrs. Munroe, 489 Reid — small table and three chairs.

Mrs. Chalmers, 681 Homewood — carpets and several chairs.

Mrs. Hall, 17 Fleming Place — square carpet.

Mrs. Walter Hooper, 504 Rubidge — cupboard.

Mrs. J. Johnston, 9 Park Street North—double bedstead.

Mrs. Brooks, 190 Dalhousie—sideboard and kitchen table.

Mrs. Emmerson, 259 Park—washstand, rocking chair and another.

Mrs. Dean, 30a Charlotte—bureau and matting.

Mrs. Thorndyke, 578 Stewart—box stove.

M. J. Maher (of Oak Hall), double bedstead and springs. Single springs.

In contributing these articles there is the added value, in addition to being helpful, that if not so disposed of, all would mostly likely be broken up or given to the junk man. Many of the things have as yet many years of usefulness, and other citizens who may have odd furniture to spare are asked to set the things to one side for of a surety there will be calls for them further on. We are not preaching blue ruin, but before the effects of the war are smoothed down many a family will be glad to be so assisted. For what has been done many thanks. The things will be called for just as soon as a be-[illegible] man with a horse and waggon can be pressed into service.

MORE KNITTERS STILL NEEDED

The Canadian Kitchener League are pleased to report six new members added to their roll. There is still room for more. Knitters are also needed—the boys require socks just as much to-day as they did a year ago. We cannot get these knit fast enough for the demand. The League has the yarn and asks everyone who can knit not to forget the boys in the trenches. Yarn may be obtained at 481 Gilmour Street, 576 Aylmer Street and at the Peterborough Creamery.

TO-NIGHT'S BILL AT THE ROYAL

The special attractions at the Royal to-night includes the six-reel feature drama "Youth's Enduring Dream," with an all-star cast. Also this will be the last presentation of the popular episode of "The Scarlet Runner."

The amusement films are good all the time. The "Moore" pictures at the Royal are proving a substitute for the bar-room and offers to the working man a more inviting place, for leisure, where better health and clean amusement is taking the place of dissipation.

CITY OFFICIALS ARE REFUNDED SALARIES REDUCED BY COUNCILS' EARLY EFFORTS TO ECONOMIZE

The Council experienced a change of heart last night on the question of civic salaries. The officials affected by the economic stroke that clipped ten per cent. from their monthly cheques doubtless felt at that time that they had received scant consideration. But the reduction has finally taken the form of an enforced saving for the Council decided to pay those officials the salaries and wages as if the reduction had not been made. And, of course, the motion was retroactive over all the months in which the reduced salaries had been applied. Hence this former stringency becomes a Christmas nest egg.

Ald. Dobbin proposed the motion, seconded by Ald. Edgar, pointing out that the year had witnessed very material changes since the Council had made the salary cut.

THE DISCUSSION

Ald. Stratton opposed the resolution.

Ald. Langford admitted that the salary reductions had caused a mistake. He had introduced the idea but had not foreseen the changes the year would bring in the high cost of living and other conditions.

Ald. McIntyre—I don't see where any mistake was made, we should know how much this covers.

Ald. Duncan said that if there was any mistake it was in applying a common treatment to all the officials. If some of them had not been earning their salaries they should have walked the carpet. The firemen had already been paid by the manufacturers and should not be paid again by the proposed resolution.

Ald. Saunders—Had I known the way things were going to go I would not have supported the reductions.

Ald. Evans proposed that every reduction be refunded including firemen.

Ald. Dobbin—The firemen shouldn't be paid twice.

Ald. Weir was inclined against the proposal.

Renewing his opposition, Ald. Stratton stated that as the "watch dog of the treasury" he protested against this resolution. If economy was good business early in the season it was good business now. The Council had acted as wisely as it could under the circumstances and Ald. Stratton advocated that the matter be let where it stood.

Ald. Edgar said there had been no encouragement from the Council to its officials this year. They had performed their work in spite of the discouragement of salary reductions. They had faced during the year higher prices. It was well-known that wages had generally increased this year.

The motion carried by a vote of 6—3, the opposition comprising Aldermen Stratton, McIntyre and Weir.

COUNCIL VETOED IMMEDIATE PURCHASE OF A MOTOR TRUCK

Although the Fire, Water and Light committee had a surplus of $9,000 after the year's economic administration of the Fire Department and proposed to use this money for the purchase of a motor truck, the Council vetoed the suggestion last night, giving it a temporary shift with a promise that next year's Council might provide a better apparatus than that specified in Ald Evans' report.

Ald. Stratton opened the attack on the grounds that the question of motorising the Fire Department should be carefully considered, determining the number of machines that would be needed and other details of the problem. While the Committee reported a credit balance the machine would not be delivered this year and hence would have to be paid for by the new Council. Hence they should not be confronted with an inheritance of this kind, but should be left with a clean sheet. The balance would not be carried over for the 1917 Fire, Water and Light Committee. Ald. Stratton said he was anxious to look after the manufacturers' interest but he believed that their interests would be better consulted by more careful consideration of the entire problem of motor apparatus. The committee seemed to be saying, "Here, we've saved this money and we're going to blow it."

Ald. McIntyre said he would second Ald Stratton's amendment that this question be further considered by the committee. He felt that something better might be provided for the Department than the proposed $9,000 truck.

Ald. Evans read the specifications of the machine as prepared by Chief Howard.

Mayor Duffus remarked that he believed $9,000 wouldn't cover the material called for. He was eager to have a beginning made in motorising the Fire Department but Ald. Evans had stated that delivery would not be made until March or April.

Ald. Evans—That is just when we will likely want it.

CHANGE PRICE ON SPECIFICATIONS.

Mayor Duffus—Either the specifications or the price will have to be altered.

Ald. Stratton—Let the Chief and Chairman Evans get prices on the specifications as outlined.

Mayor Duffus—to carry 3,500 pounds I don't see how the machine could stand up under it.

Ald. Stratton—And travel at 40 miles an hour.

Ald Duncan—If we can't purchase the truck for $9,000 we should know whether the specifications or the price should be changed.

Ald. Stratton remarked that certainly the committee shouldn't consider paying now for the truck before it was even assembled.

Ald. Evans' motion for the adoption of his report was seconded by Ald. Weir.

Ald. Stratton's amendment provided that that the motor truck question be further considered by the Fire, Water and Light Committee which should proceed to secure prices on its specifications and report to the Council.

The first ballot was a tie but the second round the amendment carried with Ald Langford joining Alderman Stratton, Duncan, McIntyre and Dobbin against Aldermen Evans, Weir, Edgar and Saunders.

Ald. Dobbin to Ald. Evans—You will get your truck, and it may be better than the one you planned.

HAMILTON MAN WILL BE CHARGED WITH AIDING A DESERTER.

Hamilton, December 5. — Provost Marshals Sergts. Rogers and Weir of the local depot, rounded up a uniform belonging to a 173rd Battalion deserter named Pte. Howie, who is now in Buffalo. The outfit was purchased from the deserter for $5.00, and is valued at about $60.00, and been used for taking pictures of Hamilton shirkers who wanted to appear as soldiers. A warrant was at once issued for the arrest of the man who had it. He will be charged with aiding and abetting deserters, with prejudicing military recruiting and unlawfully photographing civilians in uniform. Other photographers are said to be carrying on a similar practice and a search has been ordered.

ROBBERS FOILED AND ARRESTED

EXCITING TIMES AT MAYBERRY, ALTA. — STOLEN MONEY RECOVERED.

Mayberry, Alta., December 5. — A desperate and all but successful attempt to rob the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here on Saturday at noon was thwarted through the suspicions of an automobile driver and the prompt action of the citizens, who armed with pistols, pitchforks and other weapons, cornered the robbers in a garage, captured, disarmed and held them until the arrival of the mounted police from Medicine Hat, 25 miles away.

The manager and the teller of the bank, who had been held up at the muzzles of a couple of revolvers, bound and gagged, were released, and from $16,000 to $18,000 which had been looted from the safe was recovered. The robbers who gave the names of Alex McLaughlin, 26 years of age and James Wilson, 21 years of age are locked up in the Mounted Police barracks at Medicine Hat. The police say they are Americans from across the line.

OLD WATCHMAN DIES AND CAPTAIN IS ARRESTED

FATAL INJURIES ALLEGED INFLICTED BY LATTER IN FIGHT.

Welland, December 5—Harry Brown (aged about 72 years) a watchman on a dredge at Port Robinson, died in the Welland County Hospital as the result of injuries sustained in a fight at Port Robinson, on Friday evening. He was brought to the hospital on Saturday morning but never regained consciousness.

As soon as his death occurred Capt. Cook of Midland, another employee of the dredging company at Port Robinson was arrested as the alleged assailant in the fight, and he will have a hearing before Dr. Parks, Justice of the Peace, Port Robinson. It is said that the accused was drinking. Captain Cook is held in the Welland jail awaiting the hearing. He will be defended by H. W. Macoomb.

IF FOOD DISAGREES DRINK HOT WATER

When food lies like lead in the stomach and you have that uncomfortable, distended feeling, it is because of insufficient blood supply to the stomach, combined with cold and food fermentation. In such cases try the plan now followed in many hospitals and advised by many eminent physicians of taking a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of water, as hot as you can comfortably drink it. The hot water dipses the blood to the stomach and the bisurated magnesia, an ally physicians can tell you, instantly neutralizes the acid and stops the food fermentation. Try this simple plan and you will be astonished at the immediate feeling of relief and comfort that always follows the restoration of the normal process of digestion. People who find it inconvenient at times to secure hot water and travelers who are frequently obliged to take hasty meals poorly prepared should always take two or three five-grain tablets of Bisurated Magnesia after meals to prevent fermentation and neutralize the acid in their stomach.

The Institution.

Royal Arthur Lodge was instituted in 1913 with a charter membership of twenty-six. The name was chosen in honour of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, who is the present Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England. The Lodge was instituted mainly for the benefit of unaffiliated members of the Order. Its institution has been a success, for it has been the means of bringing a large number of unaffiliated Masons into brotherhood with the other members of their Order. The institution of the Lodge took place in June, 1914, and the present charter was granted at the regular communication of the Grand Lodge in July, 1916. The consecration ceremonies were held on Oct. 4th, 1915.

The present members of the Lodge are practically all members of higher rites of the Order. Those filling the principal chairs being past or present officers of the Royal Arch Chapter and Knights Templar. The membership includes many leading citizens of Peterborough. Wor. Bro. J. E. L. Goodwill, the Worshipful Master elect, is a Past First Principal "Z" of the Royal Arch Masons, a Preceptor and Past Grand Officer of the Sovereign Great Priory, a Knight Templar of the Dominion of Canada, and a member of the Cryptic, the Scottish Rite and the Mystic Shrine.

A resume of the speeches will be given in to-morrow's issue.

Everyday Reading

Jesus said, and says now by the Holy Spirit, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest". This surely implies a ceasing to labor and the throwing-off of the heavy burden. Weary one, laboring to be free from the guilt and power of sin; here is deliverance for you. Glorious truth and blessed experience. Jesus says further "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart; and ye shall find rest to your souls". Here is the secret of non-backsliding, righteous living, and continual perseverance in the same. Jesus is here now in the person of the Holy Spirit. How clear and plain the way of righteousness. Surely here is the answer to the great sin question. Yoked to Jesus, we go where He goes, we do what He does, we are what He is, and learning of Him, we have the blessed experience of restful life, walking in the pathway of peace, becoming spiritually natural, finding nothing irksome or hard in being thus joined to Him. This is life, growing in the free loving favour of God, knowing more and more about Jesus as the days of victory go by.

The fact of meeting with one or more counterfeit pieces of money does not go to prove there is no genuine pieces of money. The fact that we are surrounded with the unreal is also no proof that there is no real righteousness that Jesus gives. Personally I speak of that, which I do know. I know what it is to have the unreal, and I know what it is to have the real. Jesus said "I am the way, the truth and the life." "More anon".

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such agony.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 60c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TURNS UP AFTER BEING MOURNED FOR TWO YEARS

Examiner Special:

BRANTFORD, Dec. 5.—Police Constable John Blanchard of this city, a reservist in the Coldstream Guards, last seen in the middle of the fighting at the Battle of Mons, officially reported dead and buried and mourned by his wife for more than two years, has turned up in a German prison camp and has notified his wife that he is alive and well. Apparently after being taken prisoner at Mons he lost his memory and could not identify himself until a few weeks ago, when he wrote to his supposed widow.

SAME SHELL KILLED "DUD" THOMPSON AND INJURED HIS PAL

In a letter received to-day by the parents of Gunner Sydney Armstrong, who was reported admitted to No. 2 General Hospital, Havre, France, on November 15th with a gunshot wound in the right leg, and whose chum, Gunner Robert Thompson, was killed in action on November 4th, he says [illegible] Gunner Thompson and Gunners [illegible] Armstrong in writing of the matter says:

Gunner Armstrong wrote from hospital on the 18th of November, the day he was admitted, and tells his friends to write to the same old address, as he expects to be back on the firing line before letters get over there. He explained that with his two chums on the 13th, he was working in their dugout. A high explosive shell dropped killing Gunner Thompson instantly and wounding the others, as explained above. Letters received from Gunners Thompson last Tuesday, the day his friends here were acquainted with the sad news of his death, told about the new dugout the three fellows were preparing for themselves and expected to be fairly comfortable. The letters were written on Sunday, the 12th of November, and they expected to move on the following day, which was the day Gunner Thompson was killed. They had also seen Gunner Harry Carr on Sunday the twelfth.

Gunner Armstrong in writing of the death of his chum, says that a person cannot imagine his feelings to see his chum instantly killed, beside him.

Tragic Death Of Mrs. Firth

Fell Downstairs While Passing From One Room to Another

Another tragic death occurred on Monday night at the residence of Mr. Harry Zeeland, 300 Maitland Ave. Mrs. Rosanna Firth, of Schagitecoke, N.Y., arrived in the city on the noon train to visit her brother, Mr. H. Zeeland. She had been in the house for only a few minutes, when she left the dining-room in which she was sitting to get her glasses. However, she mistook the door leading into the cellar for that leading into the hall and fell down. Mrs. Zeeland rushed to her assistance, and Dr. Moir was called at once, but in spite of all efforts, she never regained consciousness, and passed away last night. Mrs. Firth was born in Hope township, and was a [illegible] member of the Methodist Church. She was predeceased by her husband, who died in April, 1916. She leaves to mourn her loss seven brothers — John, of Garden Hill; Brown, of Lindsay; James, of Sarnia; Jonathan, of Chicago; Harry, of Peterborough; Mitchell, of Newtonville, and Hollis, of Port Hope; and two sisters, Mrs. Doughty, Detroit, and Mrs. White, of Grand Rapids. Funeral notice later.

STRICKLAND HOMESTEAD HAS BEEN SOLD

The site of the old Strickland Homestead, so long a land-mark in Lakefield, and which was burnt by fire on Hallowe'en a few years ago, has been sold to Capt. John Strickland, formerly of the Composite Regiment in Welland. Capt. and Mrs. Strickland will build a large residence on the old site, where they will reside. It will be remembered that the Strickland Homestead was built over sixty years ago by the late Col. Strickland, who conducted a large agricultural training school for Englishmen's sons desiring to learn farming before taking up homesteads of their own. Capt. Strickland is a grandson of the late Col. Strickland.

The Strand Theatre

The Pathe Film Co., in their Dramatization of Geo. Barr McCutcheon's novel "Nedra" have produced a very entertaining Scotch story. The elopement at the opening of the play is humourously treated while the wreck scene is very thrilling. The finish when the hero comes back after all his adventures and finds his prospective bride just getting married to his rival is very well handled. The scenes in the South Seas are particularly fine. "Geo. Probert" as hero, supported by Fania Marinoff and Margaret Greene are shown to good advantage in the splendid "Gold Rooster" production. The policy of the Strand is to give its patrons the best in films, well put on the screen, not raced through the machines in order to give quantity at the expense of the eyes of patrons and the naturalness of the pictures. "Nedra" on to-night and to-morrow at the "Strand".

CLEVER TABLEAU WILL BE A FEATURE OF CONCERT

The members of the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club spent a very enjoyable evening in the recreation room of the Armouries last night, when a concert was held. A number of new members was presented. Pte. Chas. Stenson was chairman.

The feature of the evening was the rehearsal of a series of tableaux which will be given at the big concert to be given by the club next Monday night, probably in the Victoria Hall, George street. Over twenty beautiful tableaux were presented for the approval of last night's gathering, and from what was given last night it is evident that a treat is in store for those who attend next Monday's concert. Many of the "living pictures" deak with war topics—"Bad News," "A Soldier of the King," "A Letter to Daddy," being a few of the titles. The tableaux have been arranged by Sergt. Peter Victor, president of the Returned Soldiers' Club, who has devoted a lot of time to the work. Those who are taking part are Miss Jessie Victor, Miss Hettie Gould, Mrs. Ridley, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. J. Victor, Jr., Edie Ward, Gertrude Sims, Sergt. P. Victor, Gunner J. Smith, Pte. P. Parrington, Jack Ward, Peter Ridley, and Victor Ridley. In addition to the rehearsal of the tableaux several musical numbers were given to the great enjoyment of the audience. The Loader children contributed two most enjoyable selections, and Mrs. Nicholls, Miss Jessie Victor and Sergt. Victor were heard to advantage in solos. Tickets for Monday night's concert are now out and may be had from any member of the Returned Soldiers' Club. It is expected that the public will buy liberally as the proceeds will be devoted to the meritorious work of carrying on the club.

Athens Fighting Was Result, etc.

French Marines Prisoners.

For a long time the firing both from rifles and machine guns was incessant and ear-splitting, and it was not altogether a pleasant sensation to have bullets soaring above me, and falling on the road and fields all around. A heavy fire was coming from both hills, not only against the allied forces at the foot, but against a cluster of houses several hundred yards away on my right. Shortly after 1 o'clock the Greeks on Philipapus Hill charged and took, as they were in greatly superior force, a number of French marines prisoners, the number being variously estimated at from 40 to 100. In the afternoon the firing in all parts though less severe, continued with little lull, and darkness fell with fighting still going on.

Allied Losses Total 134.

The total allied losses are reported to-day to number 134 killed and wounded. It is impossible to state the Greek casualties, but they are understood to be heavy, especialy among the officers.

The Armistice came as a relief to the tormented people of the city, and during the night the allied detachments were withdrawn to Piraeus.

The Greek military party had won its triumph quite effectively. It was determined also to reap the political fruits of it. During a night of terror and complete anarchy shots could be heard from all parts of the town and in the morning Athens presented the vision of a conquered city.

Hound the Venizelists.

After the victory of Friday, the Greek military forces, aided by a large number of armed reservists, gave themselves over to the hounding down of Venizelists. Yesterday all sorts of anarchy prevailed. The manhunt began before it was light. The streets were in complete possession of the city, every street being guarded and Maxim guns placed at numerous [illegible] the streets, indeed, presented [illegible] extraordinary sight. The shops were all shut and the houses all shuttered by order. Some streets were paraded by regular soldiers, rifles in hand, ready to shoot at any window at which any person appeared. The reservists, too, were doing the same, many being in civilian clothes, with cartridge belts and slouch hats, looking every whit the desperadoes they were. The houses of the Venizelists were raided, and many prominent Liberals with their hands tied were marched through the streets to the jail. Among them was Benaki, the Mayor of Athens, afterwards, by Royal order, allowed to go home and remain under guard. Kiros, editor of the Hestia, and Afxiavandos, Editor of The Nea Hellas, were also arrested. The office of all the Liberal newspapers were entered and the archives were carried off. None of them, indeed, appeared that morning.

BANQUET WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Crowded to suffocation is about right when reporting the attendance at the Byersville Salvation Army Temple last night.

The banquet was such a success that every bit of the eatables were disposed of before time.

The programme was applauded and much enjoyed by the large crowd.

The band did well and special mention ought to be made of Mrs. T. Long and her class who played their parts well, especially to the Prince of Peace.

Mrs. Reid and her assistants deserve a great deal of credit for their hard work and success banquet.

R. C. Braund thanked everybody and gave a statement of financial affairs, which was highly satisfactory. About $40 was realised. Adj. McElhiney was chairman of the meeting.

BOWLING

Any members of the George street Methodist church desiring to bowl, are requested to be at the Y.M.C.A. tonight (Wednesday) evening at 8 o'clock sharp, as the alleys have been [illegible] that evening.

A. L. Wilson, Battn. O. R.

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following interesting letter from one of the 93rd Battalion non-coms who is now attached to the 39th Battalion.

Just a few lines to let you know that I am still on earth at a nice little camp called West Sandling. You, of course, know all about the good old 93rd being broken up. It was a piece of tough luck alright, but under existing circumstances could not be helped. Anyway most of the boys had gone over before the smash came and the rest, excepting a few are all there now. This is not at all a bad camp here, and when we first arrived it seemed almost like walking on to George street as we met so many of the Peterborough boys. There are only about twenty of us left here who were holding stripes in the old battalion and I suppose some will say we were lucky but, are we? A fellow gets tired of the old routine day after day, especially when he knows there is a little excitement over the other side. We don't even get any Zeps over now to liven us up and it used to cause a stir when we had to turn out of our tents in the middle of the night for them. Send us over a little genuine cold weather for a change for if this is weather we are getting here I don't want any. It's raining, snowing and freezing all at one time and I might have said thawing. There's one good thing and that is if a fellow happens to fall he is bound to drop on a nice soft spot and such lovely clinging mud as I found to my cost last night. Took me about an hour to clean my great coat this morning. I don't think the work is as hard here as we got it in Canada, but the discipline is harder. These days we get up at 6 a.m., breakfast at seven, first parade P.T. at eight to eight-thirty, C. O's parade at 9, interval between 10.30 and 10.45, dismiss at 11.50; fall in again at 1.30 to 4 p.m., then done for the day. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons we get a route march in full marching order, but as we have the Webb equipment we don't mind that. On Sundays we get a church parade weather permitting. Men that are unfit for the firing line, do all guards and other duties. The meals are good and there's lots of food. Breakfast is usually porridge, bacon and beans, bread, margerine and tea. Dinner usually consists of meat and one or two vegetables and rice, tapioca or bread pudding, tea, bread, margerine, jam or syrup and about once a week pie of some kind, usually raisin. The only fault is the margerine, but one gets used to even that. Very little drill is done, the day's work being P. T. bayonet fighting and musketry. There is a nice recreation room, where writing materials are supplied free and a small lending library and all books are loaned free and may be kept for one week. There are two men appointed to each hut to keep it and the tables, etc., clean, so all each man has to do is to keep his own shelves and bed tidy and wash his own plate, knife and fork, etc. Life wouldn't be at all bad if it was not for the punk [illegible] and it certainly is rotten. One either gets a dozen or so letters at one time or none at all for six or seven weeks. Give the people over home a tip in regard to packing parcels. I have seen parcels arrive here and it's a wonder they get here at all. It's no good packing in paper or cardboard for they get smashed up every time. Tin or wooden boxes are the only suitable thing and I've seen even tin packages considerable the worse for the journey. Well I hope the 247th is going strong for believe me every man is badly needed and will be before this job is finished.

Mr. A. W. Crissman received a letter this morning from his son, Lieut. F. C. Crissman, R.F.C., Lieut. Crissman who received his diploma recently at Newport News, is now in training at Crystal Palace. He states that the training in England is very strenuous, but has its compensation in different ways. He has met several Peterborough boys lately: Major Carruthers, Lieut. Wm. Eastwood and Lieut. Cox. Lieut. Crissman has applied to go on active service in France and expects to cross in about two weeks.

ANOTHER ARTILLERY CHANCE

Peterborough men who may possibly prefer the artillery branch of the service to the infantry have an opportunity this week. The 74th Battery to which quite a large number of Peterborough men have already gone has re-opened recruiting here with Lieut. McLaren in charge. He will be here for the next week or ten days assisted by Clare Stuart of Peterborough who became a member of the 74th Battery some time ago. Any information in regard to the artillery may be secured at the recruiting office on Simcoe street. Peterborough has done well in supplying men to man the guns in the past, contributing largely to the 4th Battery, the 26th Battery, the 33rd Battery (practically all of this unit came from here), the 32nd Battery and the 74th Battery, while the Cobourg Heavy Battery has also been successful in securing a number of men here. The 74th Battery needs more men, a draft having recently been sent to England and Lieut. McLaren is anxious to obtain a good quota in Peterborough. Hockey players will be especially welcome as the Artillery Brigade at Kingston will be represented by three teams in the O.H.A.

Edwin Burton Reid, the well known local express man, and son of Mr. Alex. Reid, who is also an express man by occupation, has enlisted in the Mechanical Transport Section of the Canadian Army Service Corps. "Eddie," as he is more familiarly known, will report in Kingston tomorrow, after which he will return to Peterborough, where he will remain until after the first of the year.

Capt. Warren, who is here in the interests of this particular branch of the service, will be found at the Empress Hotel or the recruiting rooms by anyone who is desirous of obtaining information concerning the Mechanical Transport. Capt. Warren has had sixteen months' service at the front and is therefore thoroughly acquainted with active service conditions.

The Funeral of Mrs. John Faux

The funeral of the late Mrs. John Faux, 217 Rubidge street, took place Saturday, Dec. 2nd to the Little Lake cemetery.

The service was conducted by the Rev. R. G. Peever, due to the illness of the Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church.

The deceased was born in the township of Asphodel 1856, and was united in marriage Feb. 17th, 1873.

To the happy couple were born six children, four daughters and two sons, all living.

All were home for the sad bereavement except the eldest son, William, of Sunny Slope, Alberta.

She was an affectionate wife, devoted mother, a friend to all, and an advocate of pure and undefiled religion, always ready to do her part in religious institutions.

Her long suffering was borne with love and patience. During her useful and active life she did justly, loved mercy and walked humbly with her God.

The beckoning angels like the beams of the day,
Winged through the skies to line her brightening way.
The everlasting doors their heads did raise,
And when she entered, heaven rang around with praise.

WHITBY DEFEATS INDUSTRIAL BY-LAW

Bitter Fight Over Proposal to Guarantee Bonds of Tractor Co.

WHITBY, Dec. 5.—By a vote of 280 to 178 the ratepayers of Whitby rejected the agreement with the proposed Canadian Tractor Co., whereby the town was to guarantee the bonds of the company to the extent of $100,000, in return for which the company was to build a $200,000 plant. The contest was one of the hardest fought in years, and was much more bitterly waged than any municipal contest.

HESPELER POLICE CHIEF CALLS WATCHMAN'S BLUFF

HESPELER, Dec. 5.— Chief Thos. Wilson was called upon to unravel a mystery. At 8 o'clock he received a 'phone message to hasten to the Hall-Zryd foundry, as the night watchman had been found with feet tied and his hands tied behind his back.

The proprietors of the plant were also summoned by 'phone. When the chief arrived the night watchman gave the following story. At 8 o'clock when he was engaged setting the fires in the boilers for the night, two unknown persons entered the fireplace, and, jumping on him, bound him hand and foot.

He made his way to the front entrance of the factory, and, stepping over his hands, he managed to get his revolver from his hip-pocket. He fired several shots, which attracted the attention of the night watchman of the furniture factory adjoining, who released him.

The chief held a consultation with the proprietors in the office, and stated he had little faith in the story, and to him it appeared a make-up. The proprietors could not see how it could be possible that the night watchman had tied himself up, but the chief showed that the knots tied in the cord which bound the feet together was not the same as the ones which tied his hand to his back. He said he was of the opinion that he tied it single-handed.

It was agreed upon that Chief Wilson should bluff the night watchman as to the theory, and after threatening to place him under arrest if he did not give a straight story, he admitted the fact, and showed how he had tied himself up. The motive is not as yet quite clear, but there may be further developments.

COR. GEORGE & CHARLOTTE

Asquith's Resignation Promptly Accepted

Bonar Law Has Declined the Premiership and Lloyd George is Now the Likely Man—The New Cabinet Will Be Non-Partisan and National in Character—The Whole Situation Represents a Melting Pot of Efforts—Change Due to Public Opinion.

LONDON, December 6.—Following a report which gained circulation in Whitehall that Bonar Law had declined the Premiership, the Westminster Gazette issued an extra to-day stating definitely that Bonar Law had declined the tendered post. Lloyd George is now the likely man. Asquith resignation was promptly accepted by King George.

LONDON, December 6.—(By Ed. L. Keen)—Premier Asquith's fall was due to public opinion—not to political intrigue. Lloyd George's uncompromising attitude of the last few days represented profound and country-wide conviction that an entire new deal was required if the war was to be prosecuted intelligently, energetically and efficiently. It was the concrete expression of the popular fear that Britain could not win quickly without such a step. In tendering the Premiership to Bonar Law King George followed constitutional precedent which requires such a proffer should first be made to the leader of the next largest party in the House of Commons. It is thought here that undoubtedly the task will fall on Lloyd George who, with Sir Edward Carson, is in entire agreement with Bonar Law. It is thought that the new cabinet will be non-partisan and national in character. The whole situation to-day was a melting pot of efforts. It is problematical how the Liberal, Labour and Irish parties will line up.

SPLENDID WORK OF CANADIAN ARTILLERY

Splendid Service Rendered on the Somme Front—Batteries from this Dominion Make Possible all the Deeds of Valour and Heroism Performed Against the Bosch.

Ottawa, Dec. 6. — The following article from Charles G. D. Roberts, the special correspondent attached to the Canadian corps is issued by the Canadian War Records Office and entitled "Div. Arty.: Red Rust Waste Wrought by the Canadian Guns":—

You have started out to cross the monstrous, stark-naked, shell-tortured expanse of red mud in which "div. arty." (the Canadian divisional artillery) has dug his hidden lairs. Somewhere far ahead of you, in an undistinguished wrinkle of the mud, lies one of the most advanced of these lairs, to which you are bound. Involuntarily you glance back toward the low mounds of debris, interspersed with a few splintered tree trunks, which are all that remains of a certain pleasant village of the Somme. You have just passed through it, and you have been assured that it was a village only the other day, a village in which all the world at that particular moment, took an interest. But now in comparison with the rust red waste before you, shelterless as the roof of the world, the place looks absolutely attractive. Back there you might at least achieve cover from view. You might hope to be mistaken for the trunk of a blasted tree.

To those troops who have enjoyed, through fair and foul, its tireless and amazingly competent support, no term of endearment for the Canadian Divisional Artillery could seem excessive. But the C. D. A. is modest, and the nick name of "div. arty." contents it very well. Nevertheless it is time that attention was called not only to the swift and tenacious heroism of this branch of the Canadian service, but also to the amazing technical efficiency which it has attained. The warmest tributes to the all-round excellence of "div. arty." to its professional thoroughness and its ready and daring initiative come not from Canadian but from Imperial sources, from those units of the Imperial infantry whose achievments have been made possible by its support.

HOLD WHAT THEY TAKE.

There is no possible danger of the magnificent quality of our infantry being overlooked—their cool, fury in attack, their dour and desperate obstinacy in holding on, their endurance and indomitable humor under conditions of long drawn strain which would surely undermine the courage of any less-mettled breed. Their achievements are more spectacular than those of the artillery, and may be written about more freely without the risk of telling the enemy anything he is not supposed to know. He meets them when we have no such choice. But the infantry attack is made possible only by the artillery. The infantry gains are kept secure by the guns.

A section of our front trench held by a thread of mud-caked, rain-drenched, shivering, sleep-starved men, perceives an overwhelming wave of the enemy rolling down on it. Back over the telephone wires goes the S. O. S. call and dances softly into the ear of the nearest Artillery Brigade Commander in his dugout the exact location of the peril. In almost as little time as it takes to tell about it every battery of the brigade is

RELIEF WORK IN BELGIUM NOW IMPERILLED BY DEPORTATIONS ENFORCED THERE BY PRUSSIANS

British Government Issues Protest Against the Slave Raids by Military Authorities and Declares That Measures to Feed the Population are in Danger of Failing.

CARDINAL MERCIER'S LETTER

LONDON, December 6.—The British government, in conjunction with Great Britain's allies, has issued a "declaration regarding the present state of Belgium,' in which protest is made to the civilized world against the 'slave raids' conducted by the German authorities in Belgium, and a warning given to the world that "the work of relief which neutrals have built up is in danger of falling.'

The document, after reciting the assistance the Entente Allies have given in the past in the work of relief in Belgium, says:—

"The Allies stipulated that the Germans should equally draw no advantage from the operations of the neutral commission; that they should not seize imported or native supplies, and that the distribution of relief should not be used for the purpose of coercing Belgian workmen against their consciences. These conditions, which the Germans were pledged to obey, have been frequently violated. But the infractions in the past have been disavowed by the German government, and the Allies have been content to rely upon the neutral commission to watch and enforce the fulfillment of the conditions under which it worked.

"Now however, the situation is changing. The Germans have abandoned all pretence of respecting personal freedom in Belgium. They have deliberately ordered the suspension of the public relief works supported by the commission and openly aimed at creating unemployment, which furnishes them an excuse for deportations. They have become themselves the organizers and co-operators, in man hunts which they pledged themselves by the Brussels Convention of 1890 to put down in Africa. The machinery of Belgian industry is now totally destroyed, and exports of Belgian foodstuffs have again begun on a large scale.

"The Allies must therefore warn the world of what is about to take place. The Central Empires, as their own situation grows more desperate, intend to tear up every guarantee on which the work of the Relief Commission rests. They intend to cast aside all their promises and use Belgian foodstuffs and Belgian labour to support their own failing strength.

"The work of relief which the neutrals have built up for two years is about to lose its foundation and is in danger of falling.

"The Allies do not intend to change their policy or desert the oppressed population of Belgium in this most critical moment of the war, but, as it will be impossible for the relief work to continue if its basic guarantees are destroyed, they appeal to the civilized world, not on their own behalf, but on behalf of innocent civilians who cannot protect themselves, to see that this great work of international benevolence and co-operation, which has grown up amidst the war and for which the Allies have advanced money, shall not be endangered by treachery or destroyed by violence.

"But they remind the world that the German policy which stands revealed is being carried out not only in Belgium, but in North France and all the occupied territories. The Allies pledge themselves not to seek in the future, any more than in the past, any advantage from the operations of this purely neutral commission."

CORRESPONDENCE OF CARDINAL MERCIER AND VON BISSING ON THE BELGIAN OUTRAGES

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Documents received here give the text of the reply of General Von Bissing, military governor of Belgium, to Cardinal Mercier's letter of October 19 and the Cardinal's rejoinder of Nov. 10.

General Von Bissing's reply, dated Oct. 26, begins by denying any violation of the assurance the German commanders gave at the beginning of the war that no men would be removed from Belgium. He declares that such removals had been justified by "the clandestine emigration of large numbers of young men wishing to join the Belgian army." He adds: "The German authorities would have been quite justified in following the example of England and France, but they have not done so."

Contending that the employment of Belgium unemployed in Germany has nothing to do with the conduct of the war, but is purely a social and economic measure, General von Bissing says:

"Great Britain's merciless economic isolation of Germany bears equally on Belgium. It deprives her of raw materials and prevents the export of manufactures, and thus deals a vital blow, leaving masses of the people unemployed and bringing a state of public calamity to Belgium."

General von Bissing then declares that the Belgian people realized the state of affairs and that tens of thousands of them have gone to Germany voluntarily, where they could get better pay. Others would follow, he says, but are deterred by influence systematically brought to bear on them. He concludes by inviting the Cardinal to study the situation from a social and economic viewpoint.

Replying on November 10, Cardinal Mercier recalls the promise made by Baron von Huehne and subsequently confirmed by Baron von der Golts, and says:

"The undertaking was explicit and entirely without time limit that 'young people have nothing to fear that they may be sent to Germany either to be enrolled in the army, or employed at forced labour.' This engagement has been violated every day a thousand times for fifteen days."

In answer to Cardinal von Bissing's charge that England and France have done such things, Cardinal Mercier reminds him that he should look to those countries for revenge, not toward a peaceful and disarmed population. The Cardinal then denies that the Belgian workers menaced public order, saying: "Five million Belgians and some hundred Americans are wondering witnesses of the dignity and impeccable patience of our working classes."

Cardinal Mercier then says that if, as von Bissing declares, such labour has nothing to do with the conduct of the war, properly speaking, it has something to do with the war "improperly speaking."

"For," he continues, "even if a Belgian does not take up arms, he releases the hands of a German workman, who will take them up."

The letter concludes as follows:

"Monsieur Governor:—At the beginning of my letter I recalled the noble words of Your Excellency, 'I have come to Belgium to heal the wounds of your country.' If Your Excellency could, as we priests do, enter the homes of the working people and hear the lamentations of the wives and mothers to whom your decree brings mourning and poverty, you would be better able to see for yourself that the wounds of the Belgian people are open and bleeding.

"Two years ago they say there was death, there was pillage, there was burning. But it was war. To-day it is no longer war. It is cold calculation, cleared destruction, the domination of might over right, the humiliation of man in defiance of humanity. It depends on you, Your Excellency, to silence the voice, the cries of outraged conscience.

"May God, on whom we call with all the ardor of the soul of an oppressed people, inspire you with the pity of the good Samaritan."

IGNORED THE RULES.

Officials Responsible for Wreck Following Emperor's Funeral.

BUDAPEST, Dec. 5.—Sixty-four persons were killed and 120 injured, many of them seriously, in the railway accident at Herceszalan, last week, it has now been definitely established. The responsibility for the accident, in which two trains, one of which had on board a number of personages who had attended the funeral of Emperor Francis Joseph, crashed together, has not yet been fixed, owing to the numerous factors involved, except among which is the allegation that the stationmaster at Hatvorn permitted the second section of the express to pass the first section, acting upon the demand made by personages on the second section returning from the royal funeral.

The impression prevails that the accident was mainly due to this reported official interference with the railway rules.

Dutch Steamship Seized And Escaped To Port

War Ships Ignored as Prussians Capture the Koenigen Regentes—Travellers Here Tell of Incident—Submarine's Commander Quoted as Saying He Had Orders to Sink All Ships Bound For England.

"A TRIP OF HORRORS"

NEW YORK, December 6.—Deaf to the arguments and expostulations of the commander of a Dutch cruiser and a Dutch destroyer, the captain of a Prussian submarine, aided by two aeroplanes, captured the Dutch steamship Doenigen Regentes on November 10 and took her into Zeebrugge, the Belgian seaport, held by the Prussians.

The story of the unusual occurrence was told by Dr. Howard G. Kimbley, Thomas Smithi and William Goodbody, of San Francisco, who were passengers on board the captured vessel, and who arrived here yesterday aboard the Ryndam, of the Holland-American line.

"I left New York on October 6," said Dr. Kimbley, "prepared for a year's stay in Europe on personal business. On November 10 I left Flushing on board the Koenigen Regents bound for London. We were less than three hours out when an aeroplane with a Prussian cross on its wings came and hovered directly over us and dropped a smoke bomb as a signal to stop.

"The captain of the Koenigen Regentes was a bit slow to respond, even when a second aeroplane appeared and ordered him to stop. What he might have done I can't tell, but when he saw a Prussian U-boat bob up out of the water, our captain promptly hove to.

"FOLLOW ME" U-BOAT'S SIGNAL.

"The captain of the submarine signalled 'follow me.' And, just as our captain was about to obey, along comes a Dutch destroyer and a spirited parley ensues. The German captain was inflexible, however; nor would he pay any attention to the representations of a Dutch cruiser, which also arrived upon the scene. His firmness became still more marker when another U-boat arrived, together with two Prussian cruisers. The only thing to do was to obey orders, and so the trip was begun to Zeebrugge. But after a while, as we approached closer to the city, the captain of our vessel began to steer off from the course. "Keep to your course on the north or you'll be among the mines,' signalled the submarine. 'If I hold to the north I'll be among the flats,' retorted the captain. "Hold to your course to the north, I say,' came back the German's response, 'or I'll send a torpedo into you.'

"Our captain held to the north. But, evidently, the captain of the U-boat was red-hot angry by this time, for he sent an officer and two sailors aboard our vessel and relieved our captain of his command.

"At Zeebrugge, before we were taken off, the commander of the U-boat came on board. He looked famished and bought a large quantity of food, most of which he sent to the U-boat. I met him later in the smoking room. He had been imbibing rather freely and thawed out under the influence of drink. He told us that commanders of all U-boats had orders to sink every ship carrying supplies to England. This order he said had recently been modified temporarily. From what he said we inferred that this modification was made in deference to the wishes of the United States."

"A TRIP OF HORRORS."

Dr. Kimbley described the cross-country journey to Rotterdam as "a trip of horrors." In one station where the party had to remain a night the filth was indescribable.

When Dr. Kimbley arrived at Rotterdam he learned there were no Channel boats running to England, and he waited for a Dutch vessel bound for America.

Dr. Mainprize Advises Iron For a Run-Down System

Will Make You 100% Stronger in a Few Days

Dr Mainprize of Saskatchewan, advises people who are weak, nervous, anaemic and nervous to start to-day to strengthen themselves by taking Iron for their blood. It has always been an undiscussed fact that Iron was an excellent remedy for the blood, but owing to its constipating, nauseating effect it has been eliminated from use. Doctors have overcome this by combining the iron with phosphorus which forms a new iron and at the same time the phosphorus used acts as one of the greatest nerve tonics known to medical science. You now have what is known to your druggist as Bentzol Phosphorus with Iron. Dr Mainprize finds this tonic to be four fold in action. It changes the system with new blood, strengthens nerves, creates strength and a new Digestion. Your stomach will now be ready for good, big hearty meals that will be thoroughly digested. Start to-day and take Bentzol Phosphorus with Iron if you are thin, pale, weak, tired, run down, anaemic, nervous, sad, and in ten days you will be [illegible] taking the glow of health. Stop taking all sorts of worthless patent medicines, cheap laxatives, for what you really need will cure kidney troubles, stomach pains, rheumatism, etc. When you start in good strong pure blood and strong nerves, making your system immune to all those everyday complaints.

Bentzol Phosphorus with Iron, as good as it is, does not contain one atom of arsenic or strychnine, which is found so harmful in almost every tonic. Arsenic and strychnine act only as a temporary stimulant, making you feel better only for the time you are taking them. While Bentzol Phosphorus with Iron goes to the root of the trouble, builds you up strengthens your nerves, giving you a new lease of life. It is dispensed only by our druggist in each city. Agent for Peterborough is F. O. Weber, Charlotte Street.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"But that is not all. My father has other even more burdensome expenses at the present time," continued the elder young man. "He is deeply interested in charity."

"Really?" The inquiry was courteously vague, and Ham's nod of response was solemn.

"Yes, sir. There are various sorts of charities, Carl. Some folks send silk hats and neckties to the heathen in their blindness and some found hospitals for three legged dogs. My father does none of these impracticable things. He has dedicated himself to establishing a fund for supplying Havana cigars and motor cars to the Idle Rich. Each day finds him waiting for a quorum up at the National Union Club. When enough are gathered together for a rubber he makes it royal and doubles until everyone save his partner feels a warm glow of wealth stealing gratefully through his arteries." Hamilton broke off and smiled, shaking his head. "For be it from me to criticise my father," he declared with mock plaintiveness, "but I sometimes wonder why the devil he doesn't learn to play bridge, or stop trying."

Then the April change of mood came once more and his eyes darkened into seriousness. "Well, if it amuses him, why not?" he demanded, almost as fiercely as though someone had contradicted old Tom Burton's right to mellow into a self-indulgent decay.

"All his hard life until ten years ago he sweated and toiled for those he loved. I thought recently it might amuse him to take charge of one of my country places—to try farming, with no hardships. He was as much good there as an armless man in a billiard tournament. All his farming had been done with callousless hands on the plowshare. All he knew of dairies was nestling his head against the flank of a flea-bitten cow. Let him take his pleasures as he fancies. Thank God, he can."

CHAPTER IX.

An imagination verging toward the figurative finds on entering the New York Stock Exchange a strong suggestion of having penetrated a die, with which Giants have been casting lots. The first impression is one of cubical dimensions—and unless the curb be drawn, a fancy so spurred will plunge to yet other conceits that bring home the cynical parallel.

On the particular morning when Hamilton Burton's car had been pelted by the agitators in Union square, the opening gong sounded from the president's gallery on every promise of a quiet day. Here in Money's cardinal nerve centre there had been inevitable rumblings of future eruptions from pent up apprehensions of panic, but this morning the spring sun came laughing through the great windows at the east and the idle brokers laughed back.

The psychology of this mart where the world trades with neither counter nor show case nor tangible wares is fitful. It responds nervously and swiftly to the gloom of fog or the smile of the sun, as well as to the pulse beat of the telegraph. Around the sixteen "posts" where the little army of operators drifted as idly as though they met there by chance, no urgency of business manifested itself. But back of this tricky cloud hung a cloud of anxiety. A sense of delicate balance, which a gust might upset, lay at the back of each mind, troubling it with vague forebodings. Conditions were ripe for sudden hysteria. Meanwhile well groomed young men in pongee office coats and their equally sleek elders killed time with newspapers or resumed threads of conversation broken off at parting last night in the drawing room or the theatre foyer. The circular benches around the posts blossomed with magazines, and a group formed about two brokers who gravely fought out chess problems on a pocket board. Noise of a sort there was, for on the floor of the exchange a "quiet" day is not as a quiet day elsewhere. Unimportant bids and sales elicited sporadic shouts and clamor but for the most part these demonstrations were tinged with laughter and badinage. Seemingly the membership of Finance's College of Cardinals was skylarking with indecorous levity. Activity of a sort there was, too, as the litter of torn-up slips and memoranda on the floor attested. Yet the silent goings and comings of the floor attendants in their cadet-gray livery were placid, and for that environment, unhurried. Around none of these posts surged the pandemonium of real activity and the two great blackboards that break the marble whiteness of the walls at the north and south twinkled no feverish signals from brokerage offices to floor operators.

But within two hours the smile of the spring sun died behind a cloud, and a rumor insinuatingly whispered itself about the floor. Magnet-wise it drew men from scattered points into focal groups and panic wise it it started a growing apprehension on faces that had been expressionless.

"Where did this ridiculous canard originate?" demanded a pompous and elderly gentleman as he tugged at his closely cropped mustache with a nervousness belying his scepticism. His vis-a-vis shook a dubious head.

"All I fear is that Hamilton Burton is out in war paint for a bear raid—damn him!"

"And why not?" a third broker truculently demanded. "He brought on the 'little panic' of two years ago, and mopped up enough to double his fortune. House after house went to the wall that day, but it was a glorious victory for him. History repeats, gentlemen."

"Where will he be most likely to hit?" The question came nervously from a thin man who chewed at a pencil. Above his inquiring eyes were the harassed little crow feet of anxiety.

"When he smashes us, we'll know all right. There is nothing ambiguous about his walkops. I hoped the damned pirate was satisfied. He ought to be."

"Vat you mean, sadisfied?" A passing figure with a strong Teutonic countenance halted at the edge of the crowd and glared—but his hatred was for Hamilton Burton. "Sadisfied—not till der American toller and der sovereign and der louis d'or vear his portrait vill be pe sadisfied."

"There's one comfort," hasarded a lone optimist, "Hamilton Burton recognizes no conventions of finance; he heeds no laws. He is the most brilliant brigand in the Street, and every hand is against him. He's always just one jump behind a billion dollars—but also he may find himself just one jump ahead of the wolf."

But for one optimist there were scores of pessimists and disquiet mounted like a fever. The floor was nervous.

Across from the president's gallery is another balcony like it, for in all but its processes of business this is a temple of justly balanced symmetry and proportion.

There sits an operator, controlling an electric switchboard provided with one button for each floor member. When one of these buttons is pressed a flap swings down on the great wall blackboards and a white number flashes into sight. It stands for a while, then twinkles again into blackness, but in the meantime it has summoned its man to telephone communication with his office. In periods of stress these imperative signals register the rise and the fall of anxiety's barometer.

Now the quiet boards begin to break into a sudden epidemic of appearing and vanishing numerals and men hurried to the booths where wires linked the central floor with outlying offices. Each line bound to the same portent.

Rumor credits Burton with plans for a bear raid. Watch him. Send word of his first move. The time is ripe for an avalanche.

Suddenly around one pest voices rose. They went from calm to shouts, from shouts to yells, then broke in a crescendo of turmoil. Collars came loose and the voices grew hoarse. The restrained anxiety had swept into an open furore of fear. It looked as if the bottom were dropping out of Coal Tar Products. At once a dozen operators raced for their telephones. Hamilton Burton had struck, and his first blow was on Coal Tars! That was the whispered word that ran like wild fire.

While this turbulence was going forward, Hamilton Burton sat in his seventieth-floor office, gazing fixedly up at a portrait of Napoleon. About the walls were several other portraits of the emperor. Busts in bronze and marble gazed down with these same inscrutable eyes. One important likeness was missing. It was that which shows the face of a man broken in defeat—the wistful St. Helena eyes that seem always brooding out over the ruins of mighty dreams.

Carl Bristol opened the door, and the musing face turned with the impatient frown of a broken revery.

"Mr. Malone's secretary on the 'phone," announced the young man. "Mr. Malone wants to know if you can come at once to his office."

"Tell Mr. Malone"—Burton snapped his words out irritably—"that if he wants to find me I will be here in my own office for just thirty minutes."

The employee hesitated in momentary embarrassment, then he added:

"Of course, you know that I mean J. J. Malone himself sir."

Burton laughed. "In the world of finance, Carl, I did not know there was more than one Malone."

Also reflected the secretary as he closed the door behind him, there was in the world of finance only one who would care to ignore a summons from that source.

HAD INDIGESTION
COULD KEEP NOTHING ON STOMACH

Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitated feeling in it.

After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation; that souring and rising of the food which is so unpleasant and in many cases very painful.

It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion when Burdock Blood Bitters may be so easily obtained. This old and well-known remedy, which is a combination of nature's best roots, herbs, barks and berries will cure indigestion and all stomach troubles.

Mr. Lazaro Savoy, Pokemouche, N. B., writes: "About two years ago I was troubled with indigestion that had I could keep nothing on my stomach. I was sorely disappointed in everything I tried to relieve me. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, I took four bottles and can now eat anything that is set in front of me."

That grand old medicine, B.B.B., has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that it is the best cure for all stomach troubles.

DRINK WATER TO AVOID SICKNESS SAYS AUTHORITY

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Daily Keeps the Doctor Away

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage-system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile, and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Ease Your Wife's Anxiety

"Indeed, I could not sleep last night," said a merchant to one of our insurance agents. "The insurance on my store expired yesterday, and that pesky fire bell reminded me of it. That store is my living, and I could never start another. If the fire had 'snuffed out' my business last night, instead of Smith's, I would be at my string's end."

"Get insured this morning?"
"Yes, sir; bright and early."
"Own the house you occupy?"
"No; wish I did."
"Anybody helping keep the family?"
"Why, no—why do you ask that?"
"Any income besides the store?"
"No, not a dollar—why?"
"Does your wife sleep well?"
"Why yes; but what on earth are you driving at, anyway?"

"I was just thinking how she could sleep, for if your life had been snuffed out instead of your neighbour Jones' yesterday, she would be at her 'string's end,' for I happen to know that you have no life insurance and your income is her living."

Most men sleep sounder when they know that in event of FIRE their property IS PROTECTED BY INSURANCE. Would not your WIFE AND FAMILY sleep sounder if they knew YOU HAD FULFILLED YOUR OBLIGATIONS and made provision for them in event of YOUR DEATH?

Children Like It

It is not an easy matter to get a medicine that children like, or to force them to take one they don't like. Most mothers know that a cough medicine, which is palatable, and a child certain no drug injurious to the child. The great popularity of is explained by the fact that it contains no opium or narcotic of any kind, and at the same time is so pleasant and agreeable to the taste that children like it. For this reason it is a favorite with the mothers of young children.

YOUNG RENFREW GIRL STRANGELY DISAPPEARED

WAS A NURSE IN KINGSTON, BUT RETIRED IN MAY — NOT SEEN SINCE AUGUST.

Kingston, December 5. — Provincial Detective Miller was here on Friday following up clues with regard to the mysterious disappearance from Kingston of Miss Mina Eady of Renfrew, formerly a nurse at the Rockwood Hospital here. The girl, who is 19 years of age, retired from the hospital here last May, resided here until August, and then disappeared. No trace of her has as yet been discovered.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

Is Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

SUBMARINE CRAFT

They Surpass All Warships In Concentrated Deadly Power.

A DIVE UNDER THE SURFACE.

The Terrifying Sensation and the Agony of Rearing Noises That Bewilder the Novice as the Vessel Goes Down Into the Depths of the Sea.

Wherever the British Government maintains a naval station you may happen to see a tall staff cutting through the water as though borne by some unseen hand beneath the surface. On the top of the staff is a slight bent hood pointed in the direction of motion. This is the eye of a submarine.

From the lens in the front of the hood a picture of the whole seascape is carried down by a succession of mirrors in the hollow staff until it is thrown on a prismatic lens at the bottom. Here the navigator of the submarine watches a moving picture of what is going on above the surface of the water and guides his boat accordingly.

We said boat advisedly, because it is really a vessel for the transportation of human beings at sea. It is, moreover, more than a floating craft, swimming on the surface like a swan. It is also a diver, darting down into the depths like a fish.

Let yourself be shut up in it and dive with it and it seems more like a tightly corked bottle. Your first sensation as the boat starts downward is that you have foolishly allowed yourself to be shut up in a death trap from which there is no escape. Your heart sinks faster than the boat.

And then something happens to make you forget everything but that this craft is a hellish contrivance for destroying your hearing. As the submarine dips under the surface and all outlet for sound is cut off by the sealing waters the rush of the sea around the steel walls becomes the rattle of spring hail on a tin roof. You remember that old and painful swimming hole experiment when you held your head under water and let a playmate strike two stones together. But here the assault on your eardrums is as though a million stones were striking together. A pebble falling through the waters on the steel hull sets the inside clanging like a Chinese temple full of jangling gongs. You must shout to be heard.

Through the roar from the vibrations of the steel shell come the insistent crackling hum of electric motors, the rattling fire of gasoline engines, the whir of machinery and the barking cough of exhausts. Your craft seems to be nothing but an elliptical mass of concentrated noise sinking through the sea. You fear that it will blow up from its own vibrations.

When you have in a measure controlled your protesting ears you look around and see a wonderful array of engines, machinery, deadly torpedoes lashed together in pairs and the steel tubes from which they are projected with compressed air all stowed away in the least possible space.

The double walls surrounding you are themselves huge ballast tanks, which can be filled with water through valves opening into the sea outside or can be emptied by the force of compressed air from within. As these tanks are filled the hull of the submarine sinks until only the periscope, the elevated eye of the vessel, shows above the water. When the water is forced out of them the boat becomes light and rises to the surface until its conning tower, superstructure and the upper part of the hull are exposed. Then the craft is navigated like any other boat.

When the vessel is submerged the navigator at the lower end of the periscope has a far more intricate task than the steering of an ordinary boat. The periscope, of course, brings him a limited view of the sea about. Then he must steer in two planes instead of one. His craft turns not only to the right or left, but also up or down.

To enable the vessel to stay under the water a longer time than usual the submarine carries a reserve supply of air. This emergency supply is compressed in a steel flask under the enormous pressure of 2,000 pounds to the square inch. Should the flask burst the explosion would wreck the boat. Perhaps a better idea of the tremendous concentration implied by this pressure may be gained from the statement that if this storage cylinder were punctured with a hole no bigger than a needle and if the tiny jet of escaping air were to strike a man it would pierce him through and through like a bullet and even drive a hole through an inch thick board behind him.

For ordinary purposes the air supply used under water is carried in ordinary cylinders at much smaller pressures. Unusual precautions have to be taken to prevent the contamination of the air supply by gases from the storage batteries and from the gasoline motors.

Concentration epitomizes the submarine. Its energies and utilities are packed in like the parts of a puzzle, and in the concentration of deadly power it surpasses any other weapon of man.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Passion is out of place in any discussion and more than ever in a right cause, for it befogs and bemuddles it.—Gessi.

EXPRESS AGENTS ARE LIABLE

KINGSTON, Dec. 5.—The ruling of Chief Justice Bulock that a man who sells an express order and instructs the sender how and where to send for his supply of liquor, is guilty of an offence under Section 42 of the Ontario Temperance Act, is an important one. Many thought that a person could act as agent of a Montreal or Hull house, supply money orders, letters, etc. But the ruling of the court is that no such man is an agent.

License Inspector Thornbury, of Lindsay, has received notification of the judgment from the Provincial License Board with instructions to see that the ruling is enforced.

PROMOTION IN BOWLING.

Bowling comes to him who sticks
Unto the game and never kicks,
Who watches neither clock or sun
To tell him when his task is done.
Who tolls not for the strike or spare,
Nor shooting any fine hot air,
But gladly does a little more,
Than he's remunerated for.
The man in factory or shop,
Who rises quickly to the top,
Is the who gives what can't be bought,
Intelligent and careful thought.

Bowling comes to him who tries,
Not solely for a selfish prize,
But day by day and year by year,
Plays the game with hearty cheer.
Who cares not what games he earns,
Nor the total pins he returns,
Nor counts his day of bowling through
Till he has done all that he can do,
His strength is not of muscle bred,
But of the heart and of the head.
The man who would the top attain,
Must always play a steady game.

GOT A NEW FACE.

Horribly Disfigured Woman Was Finally Made Presentable.

Surgery has progressed to the point where it can supply new nerves, blood vessels, bones and even new faces to men and women who have been maimed and mutilated by accident or disease. European specialists have described to the congress of the American Surgical Association many examples of the wonderful results obtained in reparatory surgery. Dr. Erich Lexer of the University of Jena, Germany, showed a once beautiful woman whose face he practically remade in two years. She had been disfigured in the explosion of an automobile.

First she was shown without a nose and with the vestige of a chin, with part of an ear and without eyebrows, and with her eye lids drawn down in hideous fashion. No more unpromising subject could have been presented. First the surgeon made a nose for her out of cartilage and fat and skin which he had obtained from other parts of her body. After awhile he saw that the nose was shaped up and molded anew. He made a chin for her, revised the disfigured mouth and put some artistic touches on the remains of her ears.

He finished with a portrait of the young woman in gala dress and smiling. She had not been restored to her former pulchritude, but, taken all in all, the surgeon had performed a most remarkable feat.

Then came a hare-lipped young man with a decidedly unprepossessing face. The surgeon literally transformed him in a few months into a Prince Charming and induced him to raise a moustache to cover the lip line. The final state of the youth was almost handsome enough for him to qualify as a riding master or a tango teacher.

From a surgical point of view one of the most brilliant operations, which was shown by Dr. Lexer in color photographs on the screen, was the transplantation of fat and part of a bone into a shattered patella, so that the free action of the knee was restored to the patient. The surgeon demonstrated also how he would obtain quantities of fat from legs and insert them under cheeks to fill up hollows or to smooth out foreheads in which there were unsightly cavities. For a patient who had no external ears he built two perfectly good ones with graceful, scroll-like effects. A young girl whose face was her misfortune was changed into an attractive miss.

Dr. H. Morestin of Paris told the congress that graftings and transplantations of tissues had considerably enlarged the limits of reparatory operations.

"They have enabled us," he continued, "to remedy under better conditions many grave deformities and to lead to many other restorations hitherto almost unattainable."

He spoke of the use of small fragments of skin, of cutaneous transplantation in two distinct times, of the grafting of eyebrows and moustaches and of the strengthening of the broken and mashed nose by grafting cartilage.

YOUNG HOBHOUSE GUILTY

Son of Rt.-Hon. C. E. Hobhouse tried for Conscientious Objection.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Stephen Hobhouse, a well-known anti-militarist, son of the Rt. Hon. C. E. Hobhouse, was court-martialed at Warmingter for refusing to obey an order.

Arrested in London as an absentee and taken to camp, Hobson refused to wear a uniform. He said his faith in Christ compelled him to refuse, so far as he reasonably could, to be involved in any organization for the purpose of human bloodshed. He was an international Socialist, and could take no part in war, or violence, designed either to attack or defend life or property. He added that he believed that the lives of Britons would not be threatened by Germans or any other men were Britons ready to abandon to the aggressor, in spirit of love, their own excessive share of the world's wealth.

For the defence, Lord Courtney of Penwith said that at Oxford Hobhouse became deeply impressed with religious convictions and joined the Quakers. He was found guilty of disobeying military orders and sentence will be promulgated later.

The man who doesn't mean more than half of what he says is mean whether he says anything or not.

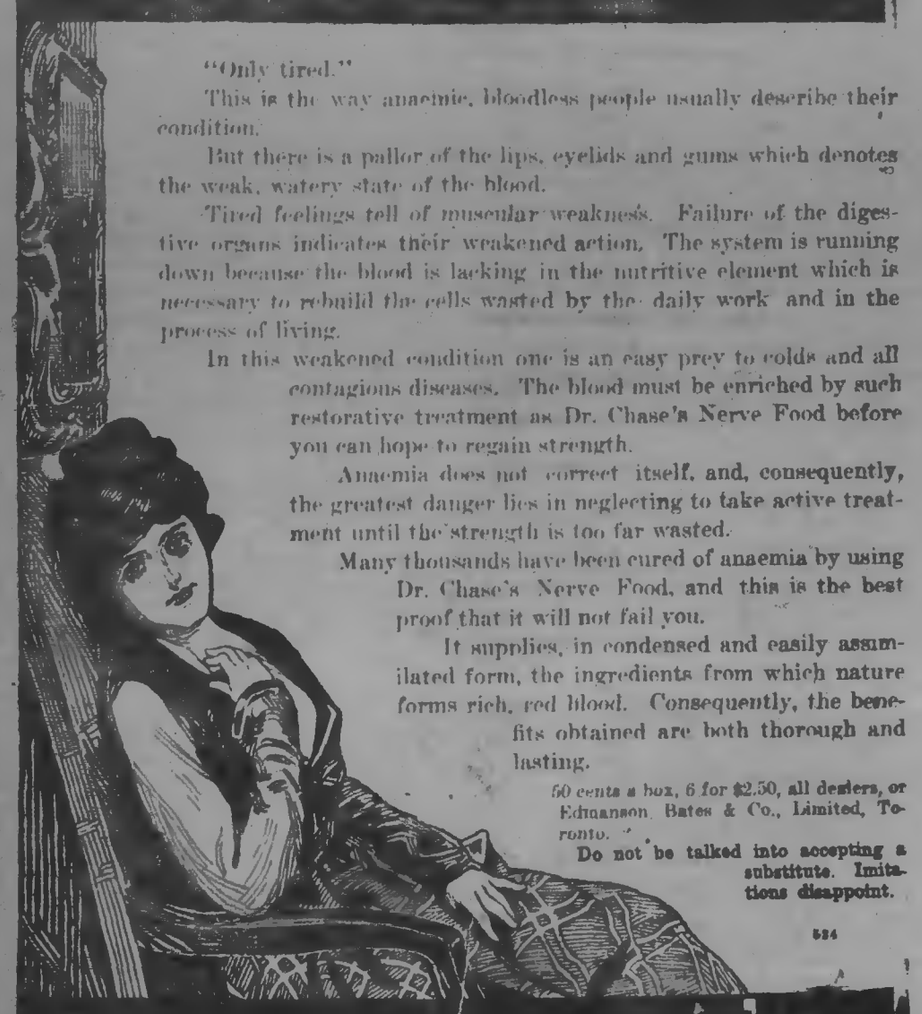
Anaemia



"Only tired."

This is the way anaemic, bloodless people usually describe their condition.

But there is a pallor of the lips, eyelids and gums which denotes the weak, watery state of the blood.

Tired feelings tell of muscular weakness. Failure of the digestive organs indicates their weakened action. The system is running down because the blood is lacking in the nutritive element which is necessary to rebuild the cells wasted by the daily work and in the process of living.

In this weakened condition one is an easy prey to colds and all contagious diseases. The blood must be enriched by such restorative treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food before you can hope to regain strength.

Anaemia does not correct itself, and, consequently, the greatest danger lies in neglecting to take active treatment until the strength is too far wasted.

Many thousands have been cured of anaemia by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and this is the best proof that it will not fail you.

It supplies, in condensed and easily assimilated form, the ingredients from which nature forms rich, red blood. Consequently, the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Japan Will Loan Fifty Millions To Help England Win

Will Place Dollar Credits in United States at Once to Run Three Years. Gold From the Orient Will be Checked Immediately.

LONDON Dec. 5 — The Morning Post refers to a Japanese loan as the operations to which it alluded yesterday, when in dealing with the American federal reserve board's warning against investing in foreign treasury notes, said it believed details had been concluded by which a large amount of dollar credits would shortly come into British possession for three years.

The newspaper says this loan will immediately place fully $50,000,000 at the service of Great Britain in the United States, and that it probably constitutes the very cheapest form of obtaining dollar credits in that country at the present time. It contends that this was the real reason for the loan, which was not made because Great Britain needs more money to conduct the war, this being obtainable at home.

The Morning Post incidentally thinks it possible this operation will check the flow of gold from the United States to Japan, which it believes desirable. The newspaper adds that the whole operation is exceptionally interesting, showing a remarkable improvement in the economic condition of Japan and the close cooperation existing between Great Britain and her allies in finance, as well as in other operations.

NO DEATHS IN FOOTBALL AMONG PHYSICALLY FIT

Chicago. — Football claimed fifteen lives during the season of 1916, which closed with Thanksgiving Day games according to figures compiled by the Associated Press. Last year the total was 16, and in 1914, there were 15 deaths.

College officials identified with the sport declare that not a single death occurred in any game in which the players were known to be physically as well as mentally trained for the severe test. Not a single life was lost they point out, in a game where a physician's examination was demanded before the contestant was permitted to go on the gridiron.

MAJOR J. S. LEWIS GIVES HIS VIEWS OF GERMAN DUGOUTS

Another Letter From Gallant Officer-Journalist—Germans Huddled Thirty Feet Down Canadian Use Hun Dugouts Now but Dont Build Them That Way Themselves.

Another letter has just arrived from the late Major J. S. Lewis of Montreal, dated November 8th, ten days before he fell in battle. It tells in his whimsically humorous style of his experiences in German dugouts.

"We have had some little first-hand experience now with German dugouts, as residences," he says, "as part of the enemy defences, and as architectural curiosities, and the regimental opinion is by no means unanimous on their value—either to us or to the enemy. As a general thing, the thin, agile men commend them, which is rather extraordinary when one considers that the men who designed and used them were notably neither thin, nor agile, or if they were, their thinness and agility made it possible for them to beat out the great bulk of their comrades and thus remain eligible as tenants of some nice new German dugouts a few miles nearer Berlin, instead of enjoying the hospitality and the life under canvas in one of our prison camps. How some of the Germans that we have captured ever got into or out of the dugouts is still a mystery to which the familiarity with the German language available in our Battalion for conversations with our captives has so far furnished no solution. Perhaps they never did get into them; perhaps all fat German soldiers have to sleep on the floor of the trench or propped up against the parapet as part of the protecting screen. I don't know.

NOT FOR COMFORT.

German dugouts are of course not built primarily for comfort. Neither are ours, for that matter. Consequently it is not fair to criticise them from the summer cottage standpoint, although in general inconvenience the two are not dissimilar. They are dug deeper, a great deal deeper than ours. Four feet of sandbags and a little corrugated iron are regarded with some reason as pretty fair protection against anything but a direct hit by a shell bigger than an eighteen pounder. Scientifically this may be wrong, but in actual practice it appears to work out pretty well. Our German brethren on the other hand seem to regard any roof not ten feet thick as inviting instant destruction and when they really set themselves to the task of securing a roof which is a roof they multiply this three or four times. There are any number of dugouts in these parts which are thirty feet deep, and they have old iron rails and six inch timbers built in above and below to make the margin of safety a good one. The Germans have certainly a profound respect for our artillery and not without reason.

SAFE BUT INCONVENIENT.

It is obvious that the sense of security engendered by such a home as this has to be paid for. For instance the staircase or staircases, as the case may be, have to be very steep, and very, very narrow in order to be in keeping with the general scheme of architecture. They also have very narrow exits, not to make it difficult for the tenants to get out as to diminish the chances of shells coming in. Inasmuch as the Germans built their dugouts to conform to their own scheme of operations and we occupy them only by virtue of capture and not construction, they all of them open the worng way, that is to say their stairways now face the German lines. Where the shelling is insistent and accurate, as it is on this part of the front, this is a distinct detriment to the value of a dugout as a peaceful and happy home and makes us more appreciative of narrow exits. It is all very well to feel safe when you are thirty feet underneath a mass of earth, rails and sandbags, but you can't stay there all the time, or even very much of the time, and the process of "popping in and out" fifty or sixty times a day is not devoid of pleasurable excitement.

The doorways are about three feet wide and four feet high. The stairway shaft which leads from it is of the same dimensions and very steep—also slippery. You do not try to walk up or down these staircases—at least you do not try to do so more than once. You clamber, and when you cannot clamber, you crawl. These staircases, by the way are a favorite resting place for Battalion and Company Runners, who are agile youngsters theoretically devoted to the carrying of messages but practically employed in hiding themselves in out-of-the-way places, where they will cause the most inconvenience. The part of the staircase that they do not use for roosts they devote to the storage of old cans of bully beef, mess tins, great coats, and spare kit. This again complicates the problem of getting in and getting out without adding much to the safety of the dugout.

THE HOME UNDERGROUND.

At the bottom of the shaft and around a sharp corner is usually located the living room, with a smaller ante-chamber and another passageway leading to a secret stairway. The size of these apartments seems to depend upon the social grade of the officers for whom they were built. All of them are floored, walled and roofed with good heavy timbers. Sometimes the boards are matched, often there is paper on the walls and we have come across rugs and carpets.

Dugouts such as these were, naturally for the officers. Those for the men are in most cases almost as well protected but much more roughly built. They are most frequently in the form of long underground galleries, with three or four exits, and filled up by banks in three tiers with a narrow passage along the whole of one side. They are certainly not clean, and do not look comfortable but it takes a mighty heavy bombardment to smash them. On the other hand it must have taken a dangerously long time to get their occupants—anywhere from thirty to one hundred and fifty men—up to the trench in case of an alarm. And dugouts such as these have certainly been "meat" for our raiding party. A couple of special bombs dropped down one entrance has driven the occupants out of the others just as a ferret drives rats out of rat-holes.

CANADIAN TASTES SIMPLE.

As I said before we are not believers in over-elaboration in the matter of sleeping accommodation in the front line. A man can be safe enough and fairly comfortable by the use of a little ingenuity, a few sand bags and a moderate amount of digging. Rubber ground sheets are of great use as foundations, as ceilings and as wall-paper—especially the ground sheets we have secured from the German trenches which we feel at liberty to use more freely and more roughly than we do those that are part of our own kit, and have to be accounted for. It is almost worth coming to the trenches to see men who used to complain about the dinners at the clubs heating a can of beans over a "Tommy Cooker" in a room which is bedroom, office, dining room and kitchen all in an area of six feet by six feet, and eating it with huge appetites and enjoyment from the tin with a pocket knife for a spoon. And yet I suppose when we get back it will not be many weeks before we are complaining about the flavoring of the soup or the amount of oil in the salad dressing or the way in which the steak is cooked. We may complain but I think most of us won't mean it for a long time to come.

Yours, J. S. L.

belching forth its response to the call and a curtain of unimaginable destruction descends along the front of the advancing wave. Those of the enemy who win through that curtain of death, backed as it is by our machine-gun and rifle fire, are usually not in the best of form to meet our bayonets. In a word it has become a commonplace of tactics that no serious advance is possible without the most intimate and sensitive co-operation between the infantry and the guns: and for every triumph the acclaim should be apportioned equally between the two branches of the service.

GUNS' SPLENDID WORK.

It is not surprising, of course, that the splendid work of the guns should receive less attention from the public than does that of the infantry. On the individual it seems so much less individual. Its outward manifestations are like some stupendous convulsion of nature endlessly recurring. Detail is blussed and personal incident lost in the stupefying confusion of noise and ruin and flame. Words are all used up in the attempt to describe one such convulsion and successive performances are dismissed in the accounts with such phrases as "violent artillery activity," "furious bombardment," "the enemy's front line trench was obliterated by our shells,"—(consider what that stands for)—or "they were caught in our barrage and wiped out." But behind these phrases, what unchronicled feats of individual heroism!

The guns would be blind at the most critical emergency but for the work of the "F.O.O.'s" (Field Observation Officers) serving their positions in the solitary shell holes out in the forefront of the storm; but for the work of the linesmen in the fireswept open, calmly keeping their wires patched up beneath that hail of death. In spite of the tireless "spotting" of the aeroplanes overhead, "div. arty." and all his breed are still dependent upon the devoted service of the F.O.O.'s and the linesmen—of whose activities the details must be left for another chapter.

CHEAP LOTS, NO BUYERS.

The Port McNicholl Boom "Busted" To Stay "Bust."

BARRIE, Dec. 2.— At the county tax sale held here, hundreds of Port McNicoll lots that cost the purchasers one hundred dollars and upwards could have been bought for $2.34 and $3.11 or similiar small sums, but these real estate "bargains" did not appeal to many, only sixteen lots being sold, while all the lands offered outside of Port McNicoll were disposed of. Previous to the sale about one hundred "Port" lots were redeemed.

A number of Peterborough people have lots in Port McNicoll, who no doubt have regretted the investment before this.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

When the back becomes weak and starts to ache and pain it is a sure sign that the kidneys are not performing their functions properly.

On the first sign of any weakness or pain in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They are a remedy for the kidneys only and make right for the seat of the trouble.

Mr. Francis McInnis Woodbine, N. S., writes: "I deem it my duty to let you know the wonderful results I have received from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. For a long time I had been suffering from weak back and kidneys. I used to suffer the most at night, and sometimes I could hardly move in bed with the pain. I could do no hard labour. A friend advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial, and I am glad I did for the pain in my kidneys is gone, my back is strong, and I can perform any hard labour and get my good night's sleep. I only used three boxes of the pills."

LLOYD GEORGE WILL BE PREMIER ANNOUNCEMENT IS EXPECTED TO-DAY

King George Has Summoned the Entire Cabinet to Buckingham Palace For Conference Which Will Mean the Substitution of a Fighting Goverment for a Diplomatic Government---Continued German Attacks From Bucharest on the North Have Made Progress Petrograd Announces---Roumanian Line Was Pierced.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 6.—(By Ed. L. Keen)—A conference, whose final decision will undoubtedly mean the substitution of a fighting government for the diplomatic government which has guided England in the war to date, was in progress at Buckingham Palace this afternoon. The announcement of David Lloyd-George, leader of the aggressive forces of the Empire, as Premier, was expected momentarily.

King George, seeking a conciliatory agreement between the Asquith faction and those supporting Lloyd-George, summoned the entire Cabinet to Buckingham Palace.

With Bonar Law declining the Premiership, London generally regarded Lloyd-George as the only logical choice for the position.

LONDON, December 6.—There is little doubt that Lloyd-George will accept and be the next British Prime Minister. Lloyd George at the head of the Government has been the definite objective of the reconstructionists, whose purpose and aim have found a voice in the editorial columns of the Northcliffe papers. The outstanding construction which will be placed on the selection of Lloyd-George will be that the British Government will turn an absolutely deaf ear to all peace proposals.

LONDON, December 6.—His Majesty has sent for Lloyd-George, who it is said, will accept the post of Prime Minister, and form a strong war cabinet immediately.

Stocks Not Affected By Fall of Asquith

Examiner Special:

LONDON, December 6.—The fall of the Asquith Ministry had but little effect on business on the Stock Exchange to-day. The tone, however, was distinctly better than of late, the war loan changing hands freely up as high as 95½.

Conscription In Ireland Would Add 150,000 Men

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 6.—The extension of conscription to Ireland as suggested by Carson in exchange for Home Rule, would immediately add 150,000 men to Great Britain's forces. There was much speculation to-day as to Asquith's future. It was thought possible he may become Lord Chancellor.

All Quiet On The West Front, Says Paris

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), December 6.—Last night passed without incident on the western front, to-day's official statement asserted.

PARIS, December 6.—Serbian forces conquered more strong positions north of Gunista and the Bulgarian defenders of yesterday were retreating northward, to-day's official statement said, detailing the Macedonian fighting. The Franco-Serbian forces in the same theatre of war also advanced. A violent artillery duel is now in progress north of Monastir.

Steamer Shelled and Sunk By a Sub.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW YORK, December 6.—American members of the crew of the steamship John Lambert, an American ship, reaching New York to-day aboard the French liner Aspagne, brought word that the John Lambert was shelled and sunk without warning by a German submarine. The attack took place, the crew said, November 22, off the Isle of Wight. Members of the crew declared the submarine first sent a shot through the bridge, and continued firing while the men were getting into the boats.

MR. JAS. SIMPSON DISCUSSES THE COST OF LIVING

Toronto Bread Cost 18c. and Canadian Flour Transported to Scotland Made 8 Cent Bread There

INTERESTING ADDRESS

When three pound loaves of bread were selling at 18 cents in Toronto, two weeks ago, similar loaves, made from Canadian flour, after it had been transported to the Old Country, sold in Scotland for 8 1-2 cents. It's the same old story; said Mr. Jas. Simpson of Toronto, in an address at the Peterborough Trades and Labour Hall, of the farm implements that were made in Canada and sold in Australia for less than to Canadian farmers after all the costs of shipping them overseas had been paid.

Mr. Simpson, in a decidedly interesting address, discussed the increasingly grave question of the high cost of living. And while he did not offer an easy and immediate solution of the problem, as it confronts most families, he recommended co-operative purchasing, removal of the tariff on commodities of life, and the employment of the machinery and power provided by the recent Order-in-Council, as effective and salutary methods of combatting high prices.

Labouring men, Mr. Simpson said, should wake up to the fact that they are gaining nothing by devoting all their efforts to securing higher wages. When these efforts are successful or when employers have been induced to regard favourably the demands of workers, the wage-earner realizes that the increase he obtains doesn't begin to cover the advances in the commodities of life. Recently tabulated figures showed that the purchasing power of the dollar had shrunk to 67 cents in Toronto during the past two years. Women in the homes have thoughtlessly concluded that because their husbands were receiving higher wages than before that they were in a better position to obtain the comforts of life and to enjoy that higher standard of living to which they are naturally entitled. But they have been gradually awakening to a realization that something is wrong when they found that the increased earnings were falling short of providing even the necessities of life. Hence, said Mr. Simpson, more attention must be directed toward the cost of the commodities of life, and the means by which they may be reduced and maintained at reasonably low prices.

May Effect Recruiting.

Mr. Simpson indicated a probable effect of these conditions on recruiting. At the beginning of the war certain money allowances were made to dependants of soldiers, but since then prices have been so advancing that every dollar these dependants receive is actually worth only 67 cents.

Action Needed.

Mr. Simpson reviewed the action leading to the government's order-in-council, providing for the investigation of commodity conditions and prices. The municipality was empowered to conduct enquiries, but direct action by the government would have been more feasible and practicable. The special committee, composed of

HAS GIVEN KNOCKOUT TO GANG OF MEDIOCRITIES

(By Lord Northcliffe, Copyright 1916 by United Press.)
(Copyrighted at Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.)

LONDON, December 6.—"Lloyd-George has given the knockout to the gange of aged and inept mediocrities who have prevented the British Empire from exerting its full power in war. Whatever happens, these malevolents cannot get together again. Whatever government arises cannot but be an immense improvement on that which has disappeared. Lloyd-George is one of the few British statesmen who understands the United States, and I look for good relations between Great Britain and the republic as a result of his forceful action of yesterday. Bonar Law is a safe man, and if he becomes Prime Minister he will be the first Canadian to achieve an honour equal in dignity and importance to your President."

Young School Teacher Just Graduated From Normal School One of Latest to Join New Peterboro' Battalion as a Private---Enlistment the Last Couple of Days Has Been the Best Since Last Spring---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The impetus in recruiting is being continued, and yesterday afternoon the 247th Battalion secured two more recruits, while this morning there were a number of applicants, only one of which was, however, successful in passing the medical examination. Lt.-Col. Ackerman is getting a very fine class of recruits. For instance this morning, C. G. Pilkey, a young school teacher, who graduated from the Peterborough Normal School, came down from Claremont and enlisted as a private with the 247th. Other recruits were Harry Warde of 222 Wolfe St., and A. J. Allen.

He had been admitted on Oct. 14th suffering from wounds and a sprained right knee.

Pte. Wilfrid Fitzgerald of the 19th Battalion, C.E.F., has been reported wounded. Pte. Fitzgerald is a Peterborough boy. His mother resides at 561 Homewood avenue. Pte. Fitzgerald's injuries were due to the accidental explosion of a bomb. Three other men were injured at the same time.

Toronto, Dec. 6.—Expressing the fear that recruiting meetings in theatres on Sunday unless closely controlled, would have a tendency, to open theatres and other places of amusement after the war, a deputation representing Ontario religious denominations of the city, waited on the Ontario government to-day and asked them to limit and supervise these meetings. The deputation claimed Sunday recruiting in theatres during the Spanish-American war was responsible for the fact that to-day the theatres were wide open in all leading American cities on the Sabbath.

Premier Hearst intimated that the Government was anxious to preserve the sanctity of the Sabbath, but claimed they should not be asked to take arbitrary measures. If any further suggestions should be made from time to time they would receive consideration.

German Attacks Are Successful in North

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, December 6.—Continued German attacks on Bucharest from the north, made in the direction of Torgovistea in the Pelesptl region and around Dohmeshti were successful, the official statement declared today. Because the Roumanian front was pierced by this attack, the Roumanians were compelled to retire.

JURY FIND THAT BOY'S DEATH WAS DUE TO SUFFOCATION

Coroner's Jury Conclude Enquiry Respecting the Death of Lorus Smith Who Was Asphyxiated by Coal Gas—What Looked Like a Fragment of a Dollar Bill Caused a Flutter at the Inquest

THE VERDICT

"We the jurors empanelled to inquire into the death of Lorus Smith, find that deceased came to his death November 30th, 1916, at 330 Water street, Peterborough, from suffocation caused by illuminating gas escaping from a disconnected gas pipe.

"We believe more safety would be afforded the public if the gas was shut off from the street line or stop cocks locked when a meter is removed from a residence, and recommend for future protection of the public that such be done. We believe that if such had been done by the company, no accident would have occurred in this case."

The above verdict was rendered last evening by a coroner's jury empanelled to investigate the death of Lorus Smith, a fifteen year old bell boy, whose death, according to the jury's finding, was due to asphyxiation. Coroner Dr. Greer presided, while Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton conducted the examination of the witnesses. Mr. G. N. Gordon was present in the interests of the Smith family.

The Evidence.

Agnes Forrest, an employee at the Empress hotel, was the first witness called. Witness rooms at 330 Water street, together with a number of the hotel employees. Miss Forrest said that a number of girls roomed on the first and second floors of the house, while the night porter and a couple of bell boys had their quarters in the basement. Witness first heard of Smith's death about 10.15 last Thursday morning. She got up about five o'clock that morning and went to work. Witness noticed the smell of gas in the house, but did not attach much importance to it until after her return from the hotel four or five hours later. Witness described the deceased as a "lovely boy."

Was Lying Dead.

The next witness was Margaret Spence who, together with Mr. Christopher Graham, discovered the boy lying dead in bed. Witness helped Mr. Graham to carry the boy out. There was a strong smell of gas in the cellar. The body was cold and rigid when carried out.

Dresser Was Moved.

Mrs. J. Murray, who is in charge of the rooming house in which the boy's body was found, said that she knew the deceased for several months. Witness did not notice the smell of gas that morning. Witness does reside in the house and was not acquainted with the tragic affair until after the body was discovered. In the room where the body was found was a bed, dresser and chair. Witness noticed that the dresser had been moved nearer to the bed. It had originally stood about eighteen inches from the wall. The change of position was first noticed the morning of the tragedy.

Was a Good Boy.

Mr. Christopher Graham, manager of the Empress Hotel, said that the deceased was one of the nicest boys ever employed by the management. "He couldn't have had an enemy in the world," said Mr. Graham. The boy was on the late shift that night. He went off about two o'clock in the morning, and it is believed that he went straight to his room. Witness described the condition of the body when discovered next morning. The deceased appeared to be sleeping. He was lying on his side in a natural position. Upon entering the room, witness called the boy by name a couple of times but received no answer. Witness then went over and discov-

Advance of the Central Powers Continues Despite the Attempts of the Roumanians to Check Mackensen's Drive.

REVERSE IS ADMITTED

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The advance of the Central powers' forces on Bucharest and Ploeshti continues, despite the attempts of the Roumanians to check Mackensen's drive. The fighting in Wallachia is being kept up on the roads from Tergovistea to Ploeshti and Titu to Bucharest. The Roumanian forces, pressed by superior numbers, are retiring to the east. The Austro-German forces have crossed the railroad leading to Bucharest from Tergovistea.

CAPTURE 20,794 ROUMANIANS

Church bells rang all Monday throughout Germany commemorating the successes of the Central powers in Roumania, according to a Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The Vossische Zeitung says that the Germans are now in possession of 45,000 square kilometers in Roumania, which is double the territory they occupy in France. Between November 29 and December 3, the paper says, 20,794 Roumanians were taken prisoners.

RUSSIANS MAKE GAINS.

On the Moldavian frontier the Russians took another range of heights repulsing strong counter-attacks by the Austro-German armies. Engagements are still proceeding in the valley of the River Trotus and south of the River Dortian. German and Austro-Hungarian troops regained an important height position by hand to hand fighting, taking more than 100 men and five machine guns. In another encounter the Central powers took the Russian position on Mount Nemira and captured 350 men and eight machine guns.

German reports from the Danube lowlands indicate an important victory for the Central Powers. The Russians there were repulsed with heavy losses, and 12,500 prisoners were taken. The Danube army after this victory was reported following the Russians in the Argeschu sector. The prisoners taken are from six different artillery regiments and from more than twenty different infantry regiments.

PETROGRAD ADMITS REVERSE.

The Russian statement to-day says: "On the Moldavian frontier in the valley of the River Trotus and south of the valley of the River Dortian engagements are still proceeding. We again captured a range of heights, but the enemy is showing stubborn resistance and attempting to restore his position by counter-attacks.

"In Wallachia fighting is continuing on the roads from Tergovistea to Ploeshti and from Titu to Bucharest and west and south of Stolitsa. Under pressure of superior enemy forces which are incessantly attacking the Roumanians the latter are retiring east. Roumanian attempts to check the enemy attacks on the roads to Ploeshti and Bucharest were unsuccessful.

"The situation in Dodrudja is unchanged."

IN THE CARPATHIANS.

To-day's official report says:

"In the wooded Carpathians the enemy launched a series of attacks on a height occupied by us, four versts south of Voroneshka. All the attacks up to 1 o'clock in the afternoon were beaten back, but afterwards the enemy destroyed our trenches by heavy artillery fire, and forced our detachments to retire on their base."

THE DUMMER CATTLE LIFTING.

The natural man is, at heart, a rebel, defiant of authority, constituted or otherwise. Adam began it; and all his sons show the same spirit. It has been noticed that when a policeman is engaged in a struggle to arrest a refractory and resisting offender, the sympathy of the mob element of the crowd attracted in the street, is always with the suspected criminal and always against the policeman, the representative and agent of authority. Every effort of the policeman, especially if it is unsuccessful, draws the jeers of the crowd, and every success of the rascal draws applause, and it is due to no sympathy or assistance of the mob that the officer succeeds in the interests of law and order, in effecting an arrest.

This action and attitude are to be expected of unthinking and irresponsible persons, but no one would expect that a respectable journal, in a civilized community, would adopt in effect a similar attitude and action. The Review newspaper recently—to be exact, on Nov. 16—printed a long editorial article under the heading, "The Chase Ended.' It dealt with the efforts of the authorities to arrest one William Hill charged with cattle stealing, who, after giving the authorities a good deal of trouble, surrendered himself. The whole article shows the liveliest sympathy with the offender and pours contempt and ridicule upon the efforts of the local and provincial authorities, heaping cheap sarcasm upon the officers, and generally antagonizing both the law authorities and the people interested. The people interested are the people of Dummer township, who have for years been subjected to a sort of little reign of terror, their goods—stock in the fields or elsewhere — not being safe from theft. It is natural that the people concerned should sympathise with the authorities in their efforts to round up a family of offenders, which were shrewdly suspected, and as events have since shown, were guilty of the depredations suffered from and complained of. It was also natural that the people should deeply resent the course of the Review in belittling the work of the authorities and showing, perhaps demagogic sympathy with the suspected persons whose local history for years has entitled them to little favour from the law-abiding of the community that suffered from their suspected depredations. As remarked, due and fair trial has shown that the people and the authorities were right in attempting to protect the residents of Dummer; and they have as largely earned their thanks and the thanks of the public as the Review as largely failed to justify its mockery of the authorities and chuckling over their unsuccess in their attempts to keep a community law abiding, and the farmer's pastures a safe place for his flocks and herds.

It is a holy and a wholesome thought to remember the dead; above all, the gallant dead who have died for us and our country; above all the brave who sink to rest,

With all their country's wishes blest!

At the meeting of the Board of Education last night, the proposal of Mr. Principal Kenner that the walls of the Collegiate Institute building should be graced with the portraits of our former pupils of the school, who have laid down their lives on the battlefields of this great war, was heartily approved by the Board. This is a beautiful idea. The portraits of these gallant boys, the darkness of whose untimely death has made the thought of Dominion Day which has made beautiful to us," will not only adorn the walls, but will typify a greater beauty, that of grateful remembrance and recognition of high service and supreme sacrifice. It is the custom to place on the walls of public structures the portraits of men eminent in the state, who have served early in the riper years of life, but these young men whose lives have grow up amongst us, who were in the flush of hopes of [illegible] and brave life and of happy and useful citizenship before them; who have laid all the hopes of peaceful and secure life and high success upon the altar of sacrifice;' have won the greatest plaudit, that is due the exercise of the "greater love" that lays down life for country, and kin and friends, and are more deserving of recognition. Besides, we must attach value to the presence of these portraits—to the story they tell; to the lesson they give; the action they invite; the duty they teach, in having realized the lines—

These taught us how to live and (oh, too high
The price for knowledge) taught us how to die.

They will be an impulse to high ideals and inspire to emulation the rising youth whose eyes gaze upon them from day to day, and, perhaps, above all, the presence of these portraits will show that the great deeds, the gallant deaths of the originals are not forgotten, but reverently and gratefully remembered; and their memory is, and will be, deeply enshrined in the hearts of this and coming generations when the pictures shall have faded and become dim.

It is of course, obvious, that all of the old boys of the Collegiate Institute, who have done their best and given their all, should also have their pictures placed; and their relatives and friends are invited to cooperate with the authorities so that the walls of the Collegiate Institute will be made a picture gallery of youthful heroes.

SAFETY FIRST FOR NATIONAL RESOURCES.

A statement is made, no doubt an approximately correct estimate, that the loss from forest fires in Canada last year amounted to the tremendous sum of nine million dollars. And the deplorable feature of this loss is that a large proportion of it was due to preventable causes. One cannot understand that in view of the great interests involved, the Ontario Government has not taken any definite and effective action. The provincial system of fire ranging is antiquated and inadequate. This is not a partisan estimate. The Ottawa Journal, a leading Conservative paper, recently described the policy of the Ontario Government as a "provincial disgrace," and it declared that there is probably no country in the world that has suffered more in life and treasure from forest fires than Ontario, and "it is certain that none has shown greater feebleness, or negligence, in dealing with the problem."

The Canadian Forestry Association, of which Sir Robert Borden is president, has urged repeatedly upon the Ontario Government the taking of adequate steps to deal with the problem, and "Conservation," the monthly bulletin of the Commission of Conservation, has repeatedly pointed out that the situation in Ontario calls for the "re-organization of the whole fire-ranging system, with more provision for overhead supervision and inspection, and for the legislative regulation of settlers clearing fires under the "permit" system." The Ontario government has for the past two years been investigating, with a view of making improvements, but unfortunately, did not take action to give effect to proposed measures before the disastrous fires of last July, which destroyed hundreds of human lives and millions of timber wealth. These as, perhaps, the majority of forest fires, arose from settlers' clearing fires, and the point made by those skilled in forestry and with interest in the prevention of forest destruction by fire, is that the Government should make it a crime for a settler to put out a clearing fire without a permit. The issuance of such a permit would, of course, be subject to the weather and other conditions being such as to incur the least risk of clearing fires spreading to adjacent forests, as they did with such tragic effect in Northern Ontario last July. The Dominion Department of the Interior sees the importance of such a requirement, and makes it a condition applicable to all homesteaders in wooded districts or within six miles of a government reserve, who must get a permit, before setting clearing fires between April 15th and Oct. 31. British Columbia, New Brunswick and Quebec have adopted the permit system to successfully deal to the greatest menace to forest wealth—unauthorized clearing fires at unreasonable times.

Preservation of our forest wealth is of the greatest national importance. Canada has an almost virtual monopoly of pulp wood supply—enough for our own needs forever, if perpetuated, and besides a very profitable souce of export and industrial occupation. Mention of our forest wealth, however, is always bracketed with the idea that its value and economic usefulness are dependent upon its preservation from destruction by forest fires. A good authority on forestry states that if the Canadian North West had not been denuded of years, by the ravages of forest fires, its pulp wood resources would now rival those of the eastern provinces.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING AS AN ELEMENT OF CANADA'S PREPARATION FOR FUTURE

In 1910 the Dominion Government appointed a Royal Commission to enquire into the needs and present equipment of the Dominion respecting industrial training and technical education, and into the systems and methods of technical instruction obtaining in other countries. The report of the Commissioners was published in 1913, but has not been acted upon as yet. The following is a brief extract from this report, showing the need of industrial and technical education in Canada:

"Until recently Canada was an interested and debating spectator of the movements for industrial efficiency. The training of young workers to deftness in manipulation and technique, and to an understanding of the principles and sciences which lie at the base of all trades and industries, was not provided for in the courses. When manufactured goods were wanted in increasing quantities and variety, and towns and cities were growing by leaps and bounds, it was discovered that there had been practically no organization of means for preparing the hundreds of thousands of young people to become the best qualified artisans, farmers and housekeepers in the world. The country's growing wealth was ample for the cost; but the educational work was becoming bookish in the extreme, and, worse than that, was developing into school systems that had few points of contact with or relation to industrial, agricultural or housekeeping life."

In so far as mining is concerned Canada not only would be benefited industrially, but workmen would become better educated, more contented, and the risk of accident would be considerably lessened. The accident death rate among miners is greater in Canada than any other civilized country. This is due, largely, to the hazardous nature of the work and to the class of labour available for employment. The fatality rate in coal mines in Belgium is the lowest on the world, being but slightly over one per thousand employed. In 1880, the fatality rate in Belgium was as high as it is to-day in Canada. The decrease is the result of the combined efforts of the mine owners, the workmen, and the Administration of Mines, and it is due, to a great extent, to diffusion of technical and professional education. In view of its importance, the government should direct more attention to the education of the workman, so that he may not be a danger to himself or others and that he may become better educated, more skillful, and thus have the opportunity to better his position. —W. J. D. in "Conservation."

Peterborough, Dec. 6th.

Editor of the Examiner:

Sirs:—Kindly allow me a few lines to give some facts that may be of interest to the rate-payers of the City of Peterborough. Your Council of 1915 secured from the Provincial Health Board, the sanction of a site for Sewerage Disposal plant, which site consisted of 55 acres and could have been obtained. There were no objections to this site. The City Engineer estimated the cost to be $43,000 to $45,000, this price to include the purchase of the land, cost of pumping station and also the pipe line to the site. Now, this year's Council are about to buy a site that will cost for land alone $68,000 to $70,000, and where there are most decided objections. The reason given for this change of affairs was that they did not require so much land for the "New System" and so could locate in North Monaghan on the Scott & Rutherford property, cost of which for 8 acres was to be about $16,000. Now they intend to buy, without the ratepayer's consent 25 to 30 acres at about $70,000, using a small part of this for "Disposal Plant", say, five acres, hand the balance over to the Agricultural Society, and this in defiance of the peoples' mandate of a year ago. They most decidedly said that they would not at present time and under present conditions buy land for Exhibition purposes.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your courtesy,

I am,
Yours,
H. B. RYE

Editor of The Examiner

I would like to say something about an article in last night's Review under a big heading, "Local Greeks Will Get No Quarter," which I think is most unfair to the number of Greeks in Peterborough. It is not an uncommon thing to hear young Canadians who should be away fighting, say they are not going to fight, and even say, "to the devil with England, let them fight it out," and even worse expressions. Canadians as a whole would not want to be judged by these men, then why should all us Greek citizens be judged by one who may have made an unwise statement? People should understand that the vast majority of Greeks in the United States and Canada are not in sympathy with King Constantine, but have been supporters of ex-Premier Venizelos. They should know, too, that 50,000 Greeks are fighting for the allies since Venizelos' provisional government declared war on Bulgaria. Only to-day they can read of the Mayor of Athens being bayonetted because he was friendly to the Allies. Our own Greeks here are loyal to Canada, and are almost to a man Venizelos' supporters. Our business interests are here, our homes are here. Some of us, myself, Mr. Pappas and others, have married Canadian girls. Mr. Pappas' brother-in-law is a prisoner in Germany. We have all subscribed to the various funds for patriotic purposes. I myself have been a member of one of the Patriotic Fund teams in two campaigns. Mr. Pappas has given his theatre a number of times for the benefit of patriotic purposes. We are nearly all naturalized Canadians. Why should we be abused?

The Review speaks of us as Constantine's mercenaries. As a matter of fact there are only a couple of reservists in Peterborough. The most of the Greeks here left Greece before [illegible] to serve in the army. We have learned to love and appreciate the liberty that Canada gives us and we have tried to be good citizens of a country that has done much for us. Why should a paper denounce us all as pro-Germans?

In justice to us, please publish this.

TAS. HAGGIS

Editor of the Examiner:

I read in the paper that ex-Alderman G. G. Green has been requested by a number of prominent business men to enter the Mayoralty field.

Now as a ratepayer I would like to protest against the usual custom being withdrawn, namely a second term in the Mayor's chair. I think the present encumbent has given every satisfaction during the year and has earned the usual reward. I hope to see him elected by acclamation. I think our citizens as a whole are fair-minded, and it seems to me that anyone would be ill-advised who would oppose the re-election of Mayor Biggs.

S. H. MITCHELL.
299 Reid Street.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me to address a few words to your many thousands intelligent readers. I want to, Sir, enter a vigorous protest right here and now, against the proposed action of our City Council in regard to their intention of buying a large tract of land south of the city, which will cost sixty-eight or seventy thousand dollars for a sewerage disposal site. Now, Mr. Editor and reader, we were told by the Council, when they decided to adopt this new, untried system of sewerage disposal that five acres was all the land required. Now they are calling for about thirty acres, at a cost of about $2,600 an acre; buildings not included. Now we are told that just as soon as the City Council gets the consent of the Monaghan Council to the city's plans then the City Council will go to Toronto and ask the Provincial Board of Health to sanction the whole block of about thirty acres, more or less, for a sewerage disposal site. And as the city only requires a small piece of this ground for the plant the balance, probably fifty or fifty-five thousand dollars' worth of this land is to be given to the Peterborough Agricultural Society for a fair grounds, as a free gift from the city.

Now, Mr. Editor, I believe I am well within the bounds of truth when I say that at least 85 per cent. of our citizens are opposed to this last notion of our City Fathers. We have no money now for luxuries or extravagances. A fair ground is only used three days in the year. The ratepayers' vote about a year or so ago should convince the Council that the people do not want a municipal fair ground. With the cost of living soaring sky high, with bread, meat, eggs, butter and potatoes nearly out of reach of the poor man; boots, they tell us in a short time, if the war does not soon stop, will be 20 or 30 dollars a pair. This is not the time, Mr. Mayor and City Aldermen to take the people's hard cash, which was set aside for sewer work and spend it on agricultural fair grounds. What do you think abot it, reader?

Yors sincerely,
John Carlisle.

FORMER BANK MANAGER CONVICTED OF THEFT

SOLD SHARES HE HAD INDUCED DEPOSITOR TO BUY, AFTER OWING HIM CERTIFICATE.

KITCHENER, Dec. 5.—Hector Brown, formerly Manager of the United Empire Bank in Galt, appeared before Judge Reade in the County Court, charged with having borrowed $3,300 from Benjamin Hobson, furnishing as security a joint note signed by himself and his father, Stephen Brown, and a certificate of twenty-three shares of Union Bank stock. Brown, it is alleged, sold the stock after giving Hobson the certificate and a charge of theft was preferred. M. A. Secord, K.C., appeared for accused and John Hannock, Galt, prosecutor.

In giving his evidence Mr. Hobson swore that Brown had asked him to transfer his account from another bank to the United Empire Bank, and after he had done so had offered Hobson a chance to invest $3,300, which he had deposited, in Union Bank shares. Hobson finally agreed to do so, and received twenty-three shares of bank stock. After a year or two Hobson desired to sell the shares as invest in western real estate, and was advised against doing so by Brown, who told Hobson he would give him seven per cent on his money. Later he ascertained that the bank shares had been sold by Brown.

After hearing the evidence of a number of witnesses, Judge Reade found Brown guilty, and remanded him until next Saturday for sentence, bail for his appearance being furnished to the amount of $21,000.

A BEDROOM SUITE WITH A STORY

The contents of the British-American Hotel at Kingston, which has gone out of business since prohibition went into effect, were purchased by Mr. R. S. Dennison of this village recently, and among the consignment which reached here last week was a bedroom suite that has a history. This suite which is of solid mahogany and beautifully carved, with marble top dresser and stand, was purchased to furnish a room for the reception of the late King Edward, who when he was Prince of Wales, visited Canada. The Prince, however, failed to land at Kingston for reasons which aroused a good deal of comment at the time, consequently the suite was never used for the purpose for which it was originally intended. Just where it will find a resting place we are unable to say, as it will go under the hammer some of these days and be knocked down to the highest bidder. The original cost is said to have been between $400 and $500.—Bancroft Times.

CITY-WIDE BOYCOTT ON EGGS CALLED BY MR. HARTIGAN FOR YESTERDAY TO LAST 2 WEEKS

With Co-operation of Retail Dealers and Women's Organizations Mayor's Committee on Food Supply Asks Housewives to Stay Out of Market Until Prices are Lowered

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Every housewife in the city is requested to cut short her use of eggs and to stay out of the market for the next two weeks.

It is to be the beginning of a boycott—or rather a household embargo on cold storage eggs and other eggs that have been advanced in prices out of all proportion—and the plea to the housewives is made by Commissioner Joseph Hartigan, of Mayor Mitchel's Special Committee on Food Supply, who hopes to reduce the unreasonable cost of the food. The campaign will mark the city's indorsement of the Commissioner's effort to lower the cost of food, and it will receive the support of a score of large retail grocers who have promised to cooperate in every way with the city authorities. Housewives in other cities are asked to join.

Mr. Hartigan hopes to see the present embargo followed by two weeks' embargo on butter, potatoes, poultry and other things that are needed for the table and the prices of which have been advanced to an almost prohibitive degree.

Supported by Women's Clubs.

The Commissioner has been in conference with the dealers throughout the week and he has the support of the National Special Aid Society, Mrs. William Alexander, president; the State Federation of Woman's Clubs, Mrs. Eugene Grant Brown, president; the Consumers' Housewives' League, Elwood Hansen, president of the Brooklyn Retailers' Association, and John Philman, president of the Bronx Retailers' Association. Parallel with the movement of the National Housewives' League has had a boycott on cold storage eggs for several weeks, Mrs. Brown will have a conference with Mr. Hartigan to-day. The presidents of fifteen retail grocers' organizations will meet in the Commissioner's office on Wednesday to confer over the situation.

Mr. Hartigan believes the embargo will force many of the men who are hoarding up cold storage eggs to turn them loose at a smaller price than they have been holding out for. The retailers have assured him that they are satisfied to receive thirty-five cents a dozen for the eggs; that that gives them a satisfactory margin of profit. Hoarding against a higher price does not work out well for them.

"The retailer fares worse than any one else in this situation," said Mr. Hartigan. "He cannot advance the price of eggs like the wholesaler. I know of one man whose profits were cut twenty-five per cent. by the high cost. The high price of food has put the city markets out of business and it has driven out the pushcart men by the hundreds. They simply cannot get the food at prices cheap enough to enable them to sell cheaply."

Meat and Coffee Put on Blacklist.

While they are experimenting in Chicago on how to live well on forty cents a day the Charity Organization Society of New York is in an educational campaign to demonstrate to persons of limited income how to divide their wages wisely and buy economically to get the most for their money. The society's workers are distributing to families a novel kind of account book to help such families discriminate in the amounts of money spent for the various elements of the household budget.

There are columns for rent and house repairs, fuel, light, ice, cleaning supplies, laundry and house furnishings. Food is divided into six classifications, as follows:

Meat, fish, eggs, milk, cheese, nuts, lentils, dried beans and peas.

Fruit and vegetables.

Flour, meal, rice, macaroni, breakfast foods, bread and crackers.

Butter, butterine, lard, oil, bacon, salt pork, etc.

Sugar, syrup, honey, molasses, candy, etc.

Tea, coffee, salt, spices, etc.

There are other columns for clothing, carfare, lunch, recreation, education and insurance. The introduction to the account book advises families not to spend more than one-fifth of their income for rent, and says that much meat makes a high cost diet. It advises that milk be freely used even when economy must be carefully considered. Fruit and vegetables, it says, are necessary in the diet and must not be left out. Flour, meal, macaroni, rice and other cereals and bread and crackers are so nutritious in comparison with cost that a generous use of them usually makes a low cost diet. Butter and olive oil are expensive, the introduction says, and as much nourishment may be secured from the cheaper fats. Sugar and other sweet foods are inexpensive, but may not be healthful if used too freely.

THREE ARRESTS MADE.

Effort to Run Down White Slave Traffic in Quebec Province.

QUEBEC, Dec. 5.—For some time past the morality squad of the local police had been busy rounding up alleged culprits connected with what is termed as an organized white slave traffic and yesterday the police court, under Judge Langelier, gave apparent ground to the belief of an extensive white slave trade in Quebec and Montreal, when he sent over to the grand jury a local caiman, Mike Couture, charged with trafficking in women, most of which, the police state, were brought from Montreal. That the local white slaver had co-workers in Montreal, is the contention of the authorities and so far three arrests have been made here, with a prospect of many more coming.

Anna Case

The miracle girl of the Metropolitan proving by direct comparison of her living voice with Edison's Re-Creation of it that the one is absolutely indistinguishable from the other.

There Are Only Two Ways

There are only two ways in which you can become fully familiar with and truly appreciative of a great artist's voice—or instrumental performance.

The first way is to hear him sing—or play.

The second way is to hear the Re-Creation of his voice—or instrumental performance—on the New Edison.

No talking machine is sufficiently realistic in its reproduction of an artist's performance to give you a true conception.

The NEW EDISON is not a Talking Machine

It differs from any and all talking machines in that talking machines give but a hollow imitation of an artist while the New Edison literally Re-creates the artist's performance.

Great artists have stood beside the new Edison and have sung—or played—in direct comparison with it.

More than 200,000 music lovers have seen and heard these comparisons and have been utterly unable to distinguish the living artist's performance from Edison's Re-Creation of that performance.

More than two hundred of America's leading newspapers concede freely in their own columns that the New Edison Re-creates music so perfectly that the Re-Creation cannot be distinguished from the original.

The New York Globe refers to the New Edison as "the phonograph with a soul." The New York Tribune says, "Edison has ensnared the soul of music."

You do not need Imagination!

With the New Edison in your home you do not have to imagine what an artist's voice sounds like. When you play an Edison Re-Creation of that artist's voice you know exactly how the artist's voice would sound if you heard it in real life.

This Christmas Your Opportunity

What a gift the New Edison makes! The joy of real music. The Re-created voice of Anna Case and a hundred other famous opera stars—all these are available to you—at your command—when and where you will. Here is one gift that, without the shadow of a doubt your whole family would welcome with enthusiasm.

Visit Our Store

We want you to hear "the phonograph with a soul."

We want you to hear the Re-created voices of Emmy Destinn, Margaret Matzenauer, Marie Rappold, Anna Case, Julia Heinrich, Alice Verlet, Lucrezia Bori, Zenatello, Anselmi, Middleton, Urlus, Goritz, and Chalmers.

We want you to hear the Re-Creation of the masterly bowing of Albert Spalding and Carl Flesch.

We want you to hear the Re-Creation of every kind of musical instrument.

There is no obligation to buy. We merely want you to come and hear and be convinced that "Edison has ensnared the soul of music," just as the New York Tribune says.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Wonders of Human Blood.—In his little book, Auto-Homic Therapy, Dr. L. D. Rogers tells his brother physicians about the effects secured by taking from the patient's own arm a small quantity of blood, out of which he makes a serum, and then reinjects it into the same person. Nothing is added to the solution except what naturally belong in the blood; no poisonous chemicals or disease producing germs, either alive or dead. I quote from his book the theory of its action:

"A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." A tiny match may start a conflagration that will burn up millions of dollars' worth of property or ignite a fuse that will end in propelling tons of metal for miles with all their powerful, destructive forces.

Just as the latent energy residing in water may be converted by the application of heat into an expansive vapor, namely steam, having a force sufficient to drive great engines and draw long heavy trains of freight, and just as the latent energy residing in gasoline may be transformed by little sparks of fire into an expansive gas, having a force capable of propelling automobiles and flying machines at a wonderful speed; so likewise the latent energy in the blood by the injection of a few drops of this serum directly into the vein seems to be converted into "anti-bodies" which manifest their power and activity in a thousand ways.

It is a well established fact that the amount of work a ferment may do bears no relation to its size. A parlor match will ignite a keg of powder just as quickly and just as effectively as it would a thousand times as large.

The salivary glands secrete ferments; so do the gastric glands, the intestinal glands, the suprarenal capsules, the thyroid, the pituitary body, the ovary, the testicles, and hundreds of other glands. It is also believed that every active histological cell secretes a ferment; each performing some useful function in keeping the bodily machinery in order. Every one of these ferments are transported to and fro by the blood.

If the thyroid gland lying on both sides of the neck in the region of the Adam's apple is over active we have goitre, and owing to over secretion of thyroid ferment a very rapid pulse. If a large part of this gland is then cut out the pulse will be reduced in frequency to about the normal. If all the gland is removed the patient within a few months becomes an imbecile. Many feeble minded and backward persons have been improved by giving them thyroid extract from sheep.

If the entire thyroid gland be removed on account of cancer of the gland, the individual will soon become an imbecile, but if the cancer returns, as it usually does, in some other part of the body, as in the stomach, the same kind of cells that belong to a thyroid will be found in the stomach and just in proportion as the cancer develops in the stomach, just in that proportion will the intelligence of the patient return, owing of course to the secretion of the ferment from thyroid cells in their new location, even if they are cancerous.

The ferments in the blood and tissues are numerous and varied in their function; a fraction of a drop of ferment as illustrated by the poison of the honey bee or the rattlesnake may within a few hours set into commotion all the blood in the body.

We theorize that primarily by stimulating the "lazy" sluggish organs to perform their function and remove the dead and the waste matter that clogs the system and poisons the nerve centres, and secondarily by promoting the assimilation of nutrition and the building up of weak parts, the complaints wherever and whatever they may be, are eliminated, provided they originated in faulty blood.

One of the results of this method of treatment seems to be the infusion into the patient of a tremendous amount of dynamic force, after a few treatments, it appears to be almost impossible to tire oneself. People who have been called lazy and shiftless become energized to such an extent that work is a pleasure, instead of a drag and a burden.

Wife—"Would you be lonely and miserable if I went away for a week?" Husband — "No, not a bit, love." Wife—"Then I won't go."

ILLINOIS GOES BROKE

Low Tax Rate Results in Bankrupt Treasury.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—Illinois will be bankrupt by the middle of January. A deficit is prospects because the last State tax rate fixed at too low a figure will total at least $8,800,000 by the end of the present fiscal year, July 1, 1917. This is the estimate of State Treasurer Andrew Russel.

To meet this situation, the State Tax Rate Commission will fix for next year the highest rate in the history of the State.

Governor Dunne and State Auditor Brady, both Democrats, are said to have determined upon 75 cents on the $100 valuation as the rate. State Treasurer Russel, a Republican, insists that the rate should be at least 85 cents.

An Interesting Letter From Well Known Peterboro' Soldier

Local Y. M. C. A. Worker is Now Stationed at the Canadian Army Medical Training School in England—Met a Number of Peterborough Boys.

The following letter was received by the General Secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. from Pte. F. G. McNeely, a former member of the Association staff:

South Dibgate, Nov. 16, 1916.

Dear Mr. Meserve,—By this token you will know that I have not forgotten the old staff of the Peterborough 'Y,' and I hope to keep in close touch with them, no matter where I go. I am following the 'Y' in camp and in town pretty closely, and they certainly do a great deal for the boys; much more than was ever attempted in Canada. Whenever you again go out for funds to support the overseas Y.M.C.A. you may rest assured that I and the rest of the boys now receiving the benefits hope that you may be successful and the good work kept up.

I had the pleasure last night of listening to an address by Rev. George Adam, of London, (speaker at the Cleveland convention) in the Y. M. C. A. hut. The programme was much after the style I have imagined was used at Cleveland that is built from one stage to another till the climax was reached. The song leader started us off singing "Sweet Adeline," then "Kentucky Home," and then "I Wonder How the Old Folks are at Home?" Here the leader said: "I think that down in the heart of every man present here to-night there is being axed that same question. "I wonder how the old folks are at home?" and, boys, I don't wonder but that they at home are thinking of their boys, so what do you say if we sing what they are no doubt singing each Sunday in the old Church, "Where is my Wandering Boy To-night?" After that we sang "Tell Mother I'll be There," and the time was considered ripe to introduce the speaker.

Met Gypsy Smith.

Mr. Adam took for his theme that old text which I think is so applicable at the present time: "Greater love hath no man than this that he lay down his life for his friend."

In opening, the speaker said: "I met my friend Gypsy Smith, the Evangelist, in London, yesterday, and I axed him what I should speak to the Canadians at South Dibgate about, and he suggested the text I have given you. I must confess that it was a trifle doubtful about saying anything to soldiers along that line for in the course of my preaching I have several times visited the workhouses of London and there clothed in corduroy and moleskins, I have found several veterans of former wars crushed and broken for their country's sake, and left to live on what is only public charity. Why these men should they not get what they seek a having given more than their life is more than I have ever been able to make out, therefore to you who are going forth to face the same dangers it seems mockery to put that future before you. But men, the people of Britain are approaching parliament to ensure that such shall not be your fate, and I sincerely believe that should they not get what they seek a revolution will follow the close of the war."

Here the speaker called for a show of hands of all those who would promise the encouragement of an old soldier, and a general display followed. "Then," said Mr. Adam, "why do you treat old soldiers so?" One old soldier in particular?"

Continuing, the speaker said: "I see away off, in an Eastern country, long, long ago, a soldier who fought for just such ideals as you have left for away Canadian homes and came over here to defend. He fought for his fellow men who were down trodden, and stood for the rights of women, and he died for his ideals. Now, instead of revering the name of this great and loving soldier we use it to hurl filthy and foul oaths at our fellow men and in this manner we put Him in the workhouse just as much as we have the old defenders of our country. It is not right that we call us Germans black when we are not altogether white, ourselves, in that we do not follow the example of Jesus Christ, our great Leader

A Sad Parting.

Continuing, Mr. Adam told the story of a parting between a soldier and sweetheart that he had witnessed in a quiet country lane, near Montreal. Though he was too far away to hear what was actually passing between the couple, it was not very difficult to imagine the promises that were being made and all such things that pass between lovers. Now, that soldier is far from his sweetheart, and home, but Folkestone and Shornclife, with their hosts of temptations are very near, and it is under these circumstances that the future of Canada is going to be mortgaged to some extent unless the men show themselves as true men and pray to God that He may carry them through the dangers that beset them apart from those in France.

In conclusion, Mr. Adam led in prayer for mohers, sweethearts, and prayer for mothers, sweethearts and all those at home, and for the boys in training for the great struggle.

I have told you about Mr. Adams' address as I thought you might be interested, in view of the fact that you heard him at the International Convention. Mere words, such as I have given you, do not convey much but coupled with the man's personality, a great message was given to the crowded hut.

Last Sunday I was up to West Sandling Camp, about four miles from here, and met a great bunch of the old 93rd boys. They are now merged into the 39th Battalion, but the band and the signallers are still intact except for those who have transferred and gone to France. I met Palmer Wiley and John James of the old Peterborough bunch, and Sid Martin, Bob Woods, Morris Layfield, Payton and a good many more of the old Battalion who frequented the 'Y.'

In the Orderly Room.

I am now in the Orderly Room of the C.A.M.C. Training School, as stenographer, so I am, in a measure, just keeping in training while away. Most of the boys of our unit are now scattered far and wide throughout the country, but I guess I will be here till spring, at least. Jock Smythe and Voadem are at Shorehamby-Sea, working in a new hospital, and the remainder, with the exception of perhaps a dozen or so, are on a water detail, learning all about the sanitary supplying of water to a Battalion, and it is expected that in a very short time they will be transferred and go across the Channel. All the promises they made in Canada about allowing the boys to stay together are all fakes, for they have not the power over here to carry them out.

Jack Jones is, I understand, in a convalescent home somewhere in the district and I am going to make an effort some of these days to hunt him up.

Well, Mr. Meserve, I guess I have told you all for now, so I will draw to a close. Hoping to hear from you soon, and with best regards to the staff, I am

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) Fred.

P. S.—This is meant, in a way, for the rest of the staff as I can only find time to write now and then, but for all that I think of them.

Photographs of Collegiate Heroes As a Memorial

The Board of Education last night approved and commended Mr. H. B. H. Kenner's action in preparing a memorial gallery at the Collegiate of photographs of students who had made the supreme sacrifice in this war. In a letter to the Board the principal stated that he had already received the pictures of Lieut. Harold Matthews and Lieut. Arthur Ackerman, and requested that these be acknowledged by the Board. Mr. Crane moved, seconded by Mr. Hill, that letters of acknowledgment be written to the parents of these two former students. It was suggested in this motion, and endorsed by the Board that every encouragement be given to the securing of the photographs of as many as possible of the other graduates and former students who have fallen in defence of the Empire.

KNOX CHURCH MINSTRELS SCORED A BIG HIT

Enjoyable Entertainment Under the Direction of Messrs. Liddell and Morphet in the Lecture Hall Last Evening.

REPEATED TO-NIGHT

A scream from start to finish, is the only way to characterize the Knox minstrel show held in the Lecture Hall of Knox church last night. Funny men, funny stories and catchy sons, a whole evening to forget troubles and the war. The chorus was splendidly trained, and the end men humorous to a fine degree. The jokes were new and the local ones made a big hit. After a two dollar bill had changed hands several times it finally reverted to the interlocutor, who decided to put it towards helping to pay Mayor Duffus' expenses to go to Ottawa to see about the high cost of living. The Rev. Mr. Mackenzie was accused of stopping at a farm house and asking for gasoline, and being told that it was a "strictly prohibition" household. An operation by Dr. McCullough in which he removed Mr. Parker's brains and forgot to replace them, was told of, but it was of no consequence as Mr. Parker was inspecting munitions and din't need them. Mr. Frank Clark's imitation of the 93rd leaving the armouries was encored time and again, but the peace de resistance of the whole evening was Mr. J. Liddell's clever imitation of Harry Lauder. The caste and programme were as follows

Programme.

QUALITY OF BUTTER AND CHEESE SHOULD BE KEPT AT THE HIGHEST STANDARD

Timely Advice Given by Dairy Instructor R. W. Ward in His Annual Report—Milk Should be Cooled and Delivered at Certain Temperature

Following is the report of Dairy Instructor R. W. Ward of Peterborough on the dairying operations in Peterborough and Lindsay sections for the season of 1916.

The report was as follows:

With your pleasure I will now give a short report of conditions, requirements, and work done this season.

This report will not contain as much statistical information as last year on account of the early date of this meeting and not having returns from the factories of amount of milk cheese and money, etc.

The season has been very favourable for the producer of milk from a monetary point of view.

The highest prices have been realized for milk, cream, butter and cheese this season, in the history of dairying in this country, coupled with a very good quantity of milk on the whole for the season.

Season until fore part of July was extremely wet and cool, resulting in abundance of nice succulent green food (grass every where) also ideal weather for milk reaching the factories in cool, nice condition; also nice weather for making and curing the cheese, resulting in an extremely good yield of cheese of fine quality per 100 pounds of milk.

In fore part of July weather changed to dry, with extreme heat, day and night, and very long continued.

The conditions and weather that make us think and long for milk producing foods, ice on the farms, and cool curing rooms at the factories.

In the last half of the season a lot of time has been taken up testing the milk for butter fat.

Each patron's milk in all the factories that pay by pooling system, has been tested, and a copy of the test set opposite patron's name left at the factory.

This work, no doubt, has been done for demonstration and educational purposes, on account of the act passed at the last setting of the Ontario Legislature and becomes operative on the 31st of March, 1917.

This act is called the Dairy Standards Act, and provides that all milk sent to cheese factories shall be paid for by the Butter Fat Test.

These tests that have been made in the individual factory, should convince the most skeptical that milk has different values per 100 pounds.

In my work of testing I have found a range in legal milk all the way from 2.8 to 6 per cent. of butter fat.

An average of difference has been from about 3.3 to 4.8 per cent. of fat.

These tests have disclosed a great deal of adulteration of milk in Eastern Ontario, another strong argument in favour of the Act and the paying for milk, according to quality.

My work of testing, in these two sections has revealed some indications of adulteration, but in only two cases sufficient to warrant an investigation.

I was pleased to be informed by the Public Prosecutor for the Dairymen's Association for Eastern Ontario that there had been fewer prosecutions in these sections than in any of the twenty odd sections in Eastern Ontario.

I have left in each factory for each patron, a copy of the Dairy Standards Act, also containing the speeches of the Hon. Jas. S. Duff, the two chief dairy instructors, Mr. Publow and Mr. Hurns, and discussions by the Committee re this Act before being made law.

I trust each patron will receive their copy and familiarize themselves with same for I believe it is one of the most important steps that has ever been made for the improvement and the placing of the Dairymen industry on a fair, right and equitable basis for every one engaged in the business.

I have 37 factories in my sections This year 26 paid by pooling system, 11 by butter fat test.

The world war has produced unusual conditions, which in most cases has been very favourable to the producer, but are pressing pretty hard on the consumer and your makers.

I trust due consideration will be given this question, here reengaging your makers for next season.

To my mind the inspection of cheese has been lax, as is usual in all commodities, when we have an abnormal demand and price.

But when this war is over and conditions drop back to normal, and we have an increased effort trade, you will find inspection will be more critical, probably more so than ever, so it behooves each of us to try and maintain the quality of our butter and cheese at the highest standard possible.

The first requisite to accomplish this is clean, cool, sweet cream and milk of first quality, which is the raw material, and the finished product cannot be better than the raw material in whatever line of manufacture you may engage.

I think we all understand how to have cream and milk of finest quality if we make use of present day-light and knowledge.

Clean and cool pretty near covers it all.

I would advise a strong effort being made for an earlier delivery of milk to the factories. The earlier the delivery, the better condition the milk is likely to be in, which means more money to the patrons, and a better and more satisfactory job for the makers.

Please do not forget that the patrons and maker's interest are mutual What benefits the one must benefit the other.

The factories are mostly in very good condition, but they all can be improved by careful overhauling and the use of some lime and paint.

There are a few that need very substantial improvements in order to be able to comply with the sanitary law which, I advise being done before opening next season.

Have everything ready to perfection before the first pound of milk reaches your receiving door.

Makers I think will be well advised to thoroughly familiarize themselves with the testing of milk and the using of the Babcock test, and if at all possible take at least a short course at one of the dairy schools.

I will again urge the patrons of the different factories to make it obligatory by resolution passed at their annual meetings, that every patron must cool and deliver his milk at a certain temperature.

If you realized as your cheese-maker, and I do, the loss you are sustaining by reason of the few careless ones you would act at once.

The manufacture of cheese is carried on on the co-operative plan, and the time has arrived when our best patrons have the right to say that all the milk shall be delivered in right condition, and stop this unnecessary waste and loss. If the few careless ones had to pay the loss caused by their carelessness individually, we would soon have no careless patrons. If all milk was delivered as good as the test it would be quite satisfactory.

The outlook for dairying next season, I would consider good, stock has gone into winter quarters in good condition, and the outlook for your dairy products re prices would seem to be excellent.

Cheese has reached record prices, but when you consider the value of their food contents as compared with other foods and prices, they could still go higher. According to the analysis, one pound of cheese has more food value than two pounds of beefsteak.

In closing I thank every one that has assisted me in carrying out my work, which I have done with the one object in view of improving our great national industry, dairying.

Four Lives Were Lost Near Chapeau

Stage Driver's Wife and Three Children Trapped in Burning House

DYING WOMAN TELLS HOW SHE VAINLY TRIED TO FORCE A PATH TO SAFETY THROUGH STORM WINDOWS.

PEMBROKE, Dec. 5.—Through the sale of gasoline in error for coal-oil, a death toll of four has been taken in a little country farmhous at Chapeau, some six miles from here. The dead are: Mrs. Dorithe Raymond, and her three children aged three and two years and three months respectively.

Details of the conflagration were gasped out by the dying mother just before she breathed her last in a neighbor's home. They are meagre, but they tell the story of the ghastly tragedy caused by the error of an oil salesman.

AN EXPLOSION FOLLOWED

The dead woman, all unconsciously, either filled her coal oil stove with the alleged coal oil, or poured some upon the fire to liven it up At all events, the gasoline blazed up with a heavy explosion, igniting the unfortunate victim's clothing.

Shrieking, she ran into a nearby room, in which her three children were resting. Across to the window she ran, only to find her means of egress blocked by the storm windows which had been put into place only a few days before.

With clothes ablaze she dashed wildly across the chamber in an attempt to gain the outside door. She stumbled, and in a moment the room was a mass of fire—a charnel room in which the three kiddies were incinerated.

UNABLE TO TELL.

Hearing the shrieks of the doomed mother, her cousin, Miss Roy who was scrubbing an upstairs room, managed to fight her way to safety but was unable to rescue either mother or children.

By this time the house was ablaze from floor to roof and the flames attracted the attention of neighbors. They rushed to the scene and discovered Mrs. Raymond crouched behind the back door. She was rushed to a nearby home, but died of her horrible burns this morning. Miss Roy, though badly burned about the head and eyes, will recover.

Added horror attaches to the tragedy from the fact that the father, who runs the Chapeau stage had driven past the house on his morning trip only a few moments before the accident.

JURY FIND THAT BOY'S DEATH WAS DUE TO SUFFOCATION

ered that the boy was apparently dead. The body was carried out and the pulmotor and a couple of doctors sent for.

A pipe in the boy's room had been disconnected and the opening stuffed with a coloured handkerchief. The piece of pipe that had been detached was found outside the door of the boy's bedroom. Witness did not know whether the boy had any money in the room. He was paid at the rate of ten dollars a month. Witness did not know anything about a piece of a bill which was said to have been found in the room. There was no evidences of a struggle. The boy was lying on the bed as if asleep.

Plumber Called.

Mr. Robert Sutherland, plumber, who resides a short distance from the scene of the fatality, was called to shut off the gas. The pipe came through the wall into the boy's bedroom. The opening was concealed by the dresser. A coloured handkerchief had been used to plug up the hole in the pipe. Some difficulty was experienced in locating the leak. The shut-off was in the next house. Witness said that it was customary to lock the taps when not in use, but this had not been done in Mrs. Fowler's house, where the shut off was located.

Mr. James Sutherland, a brother of the previous witness, described the conditions as he found them upon arrival at the house. He corroborated the evidence of his brother.

The Gas Company.

Mr. Harry Beal, representing the Peterborough Gas Company, now owned and controlled by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, was next called. Witness said that the gas connections were of the usual order. The company never locked a tap, but left that to the landlord. Witness was refused admission to the house where the accident took place, but he saw the detached piece of pipe through the window. It was two or three years since gas was used in the house where the body was found. After the meter was taken out the pipe was capped in accordance with the company's rules. No regular inspection is required by the company. The meter was removed from the premises in September, 1913 and the pipe capped. Witness considered this a safe method. The piece of pipe which was detached was produced in court. The end of the pipe was capped.

Saw the Boy.

Michael Cavalier slept in a room adjacent to the room in which the body was found. He saw the boy that night at six o'clock. Witness went to bed about 11.15 the previous night and rose about 5.30 next morning. He noticed a smell of gas the following morning. Witness heard nothing during the night and did not know of anything unusual.

Post Mortem Stains.

James Ward, a member of the Peterborough Fire Department, together with Fireman Jamieson, were in charge of the pulmotor. The machine was used for upwards of half an hour without results. Witness said that the pulmotor might make a mark on the cheek and chin as it is necessary to exert pressure on the face in order to hold the inhaler down.

First Aid Rendered

Patrol Sergeant A. Kidd was among the first to arrive on the scene. Witness used several methods of resuscitation without avail. Detective Meagher took charge of various small sums of money that were found on the boy.

The next witness called was Dr. King, who was one of two doctors called after the body was found. When witness arrived the body was pulseless and the heart beat absent. Witness did not examine for the cause of death, taking it for granted that asphyxiation was the cause of death. Dr. King also made the post mortem which was made at Havelock eighty-seven hours after death. Slight marks were found on the face and scalp. Witness concluded that death was due to coal gas poisoning. None of the bruises on the body were sufficient to cause death. The body did not indicate any evidence of a struggle. The condition of the lungs pointed to suffocation.

Mr. George Graham was called. Mr. Graham said that he had seen the boy use red handkerchiefs like the one produced in court.

A Strange Incident.

Mr. A. Ferguson of Havelock, a brother-in-law of the deceased, produced a torn piece of a bill. The fragment which was carefully sealed in an envelope, looked like the piece of a dollar bill. "It was found caught in the lace of the boy's boot," said Mr. Ferguson, after the body was removed to Havelock. Witness was inclined to think that somebody was in the room with the boy on the morning of his death. "There certainly was money exchanged in the room that night," said witness. The fragment of the bill was lying on the lace part of the boot. Witness failed to see why the boy would go in at two o'clock in the morning and disconnect the gas pipe.

Mr. Graham Recalled.

Mr. Graham was recalled and denied the statement that the previous witness found the piece of bill on the boot. "I showed him where those boots were," said Mr. Graham. "If the money was found in the boots he put it there himself. He tells a falsehood when he comes here and says he found money on the boots. The boy died with his own hands. The boy was not hurt in the least. The man tells a lie when he comes here and tells a story like that about a boy whom the whole house doted on, declared the witness.

"Pardon me," exclaimed Ferguson. "I found the money there."

"You never did," retorted Mr. Graham. "You put it there."

"Order please," shouted the court constables.

The jury was out nearly an hour.

Makes Fine Showing at the Guelph Show

Mr. Geo. McClelland's Birds Capture Eleven Places Including $50 and a Silver Cup

One Peterborough man at least has made a fine showing in the Guelph Poultry Show. A card received from Mr. Geo. H. McClelland, Morrow street, states that he has won eleven places in the Buff Orpington class, winning a silver cup for the best shaped and coloured cockerel, and $50 for the best cockerel and pullet in the class. Altogether there were 108 birds entered in this particular class.

Another $10 Liquor Fine Paid To-day

When Alex Nesbitt was visiting recently in Ottawa he crossed to Hull and secured a supply of liquor. And that crossing cost him $13.75, although he didn't realize it at the time. It was only when he returned home, and consuming the liquor here staggered before P. C. Frank Pratt's attention that the $13.75 became imminent. This morning in police court Magistrate Dumble applied the usual $10 fine and $3.75 costs.

Germany Building "Ice-Water" Raiders

New Submarines Can Operate in Waters such as at Archangel.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 6.—Regardless of reports concerning the decline of the man-power of Germany, there is no apparent lack of men or materials in German shipbuilding yards, according to advices received here, which indicate that the tonnage now on the ways exceeds that of peace times.

It is definitely known that the more important yards have been devoting almost their entire resources for some time past to the construction of submarines, which, it is alleged, are now being turned out at the rate of five a week.

A number of these submersibles, it is stated, have been designed solely with a view to their operation in ice-bound waters and are of unusual size and exceedingly strong in construction, and it is understood they will be used in the Baltic and White seas. They are said to have a cruising radius of 2,500 miles on a single filling of fuel, and aside from the usual complement of torpedo tubes are armed with two light-calibre guns on the deck

MUTINY WAS ATTEMPTED.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Attempted mutiny on board the naval auxiliary Aratheuse, in which at least one man has been killed, has caused the return of the vessel to Norfolk, radio messages to the Norfolk navy yard said.

Reception in Interest Of Health Association

Nurses' Supervision Committee Have Arranged One at Empress Hotel Dec. 29th

At a meeting of the Nurses' Supervision Committee of the Peterborough Health Association, held yesterday, it was decided to accept Mr. Graham's generous offer of the Empress Hotel for Friday, Dec. 29th. The ladies will hold a reception on the afternoon and evening of that day to which they cordially invite the people of Peterborough. Every citizen should feel interested in the object sought by the ladies in holding the reception, which is to retain the present efficient nurses of the Association who have ministered during the past four years to the sick in so many homes in Peterborough, under the direction of the city physicians, all of whom will willingly testify to the value of the service rendered. The funds of the Association have suffered owing to the many calls of the war and immediate necessities demand that some effort should be made at once to raise funds. Watch the daily papers for additional information.

SIX-YEAR-OLD FIGHTS FOR A BIG FORTUNE

How Claimants Hope to Prove for Boy the Right to Clergyman's Estate.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The House of Lords yesterday afternoon continued its hearing on the appeal in the famous Slingsby baby case.

Counsel for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Rayburn Slingsby of San Francisco, who claim to be parents of "Teddy" Slingsby, made formal appeal to the Upper House from the Court of Appeals, seeking the fortune left by the Rev. Charles Slingsby. The Lords heard him briefly and then continued the case.

The question hinges on whether "Teddy" Slingsby, a curlyheaded youngster of six years, is the real son of the man and wife who claim him.

This curlyheaded little boy is a bright young California six-year-old who has been buffeted about between $50,000 a year and penniless namelessness ever since he came into the world, September 1, 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Reynard Slingsby of San Francisco, who claim to be Teddy's father and mother, claim Teddy is entitled to the Yorkshire estate of his alleged grandfather, the late Reverend Charles Slingsby. Rev. Slingsby willed his estate to "the first male heir" born to any of his children.

The British Court of Probate and Divorce on February 4, 1915, decreed Teddy the true son and heir of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. R. Slingsby. C. R. H. Slingsby in 1909 married Mrs. Dorothy Morgan Warner, a Kentucky society widow.

Claims School Girl His Mother.

C. H. R. Slingsby's two younger brothers, Thomas William and Alan Peter Slingsby, respectively, had contested the claim of the C. H. R. Slingsbys, that Teddy was their son. They claimed and made a long court fight to prove that Teddy was the son of Lillian Anderson, a San Francisco school girl; and was taken over by the C. H. R. Slingsby's as their son, so he could claim the Yorkshire estate. They produced from a San Francisco newspaper what they claimed was an advertisement placed therein by Mrs. Slingsby, advertising for a new born baby.

When the Probate and Divorce court decided against the two brothers, they took their case to the Court of Appeals, which, on March 14, 1916, reversed the P. & D. court and declared Teddy not the son of the C. H. R. Slingsby's and not entitled to the estate.

Justice Bargrave Deane of the P. & D. had decided in favour of Teddy largely because he had a peculiar granted a stay because of the appeal—oddly formed ear, like his mother's. The Court of Appeals evidently did not think that way.

The C. H. R. Slingsbys then appealed to the House of Lords, which granted a stay because of the appellants' lack of funds.

SAN DIEGO HOLDS SUICIDE RECORD

The suicide record for the year 1915 shows that San Diego, Cal., led all other cities of the United States in the percentage of self-murders, as compared with population, and that the suicide rate in this country is about stationary, according to the Spectator, a weekly insurance publication, in an article published in its issue of a recent date.

In nine cities of the Pacific Coast, the writer says, there were more suicides last year than in any other part of the country, considerable population. The rate there was 34.3 per cent. of each 100,000 of population. In 55 cities of the East the rate was 16.4 per cent., in 17 cities of the Central States 24.1 per cent., in 16 cities of the Southern States 17.9 per cent., and in three cities of the Rocky Mountain States 23.4 per cent.

Statistics showing the rate of suicides in one hundred principal cities of the country, as printed in the Spectator, show that San Diego, Cal., had a percentage in 1915, of 63.3 for each 100,000 of the population, an increase of 20.1 over 1914. San Francisco came next, with 55.7 per cent. of each 100,000 population, an increase of 8.9 per cent. over the year before. The rate in Sacramento, Cal., was 51.2, an increase of 19.2 per cent.; Los Angeles, 32.7, a decrease of 0.6 per cent.

The rate at Springfield, Ill., was 30.4, a decrease of .07 per cent.; Denver, Co., 26.5, a decrease of 2.6 per cent.; Atlantic City, N.J., 39.8, an increase of 10.9 per cent.; Chicago, Ill., 25.3, an increase of 2.8 per cent.; Manhattan and the Bronx 19.4 an increase of 0.8 per cent.; New Orleans, La., 18.9 per cent, an increase of 1 per cent., and Philadelphia, Pa., 16.7 per cent., a decrease of 1 per cent.

OBJECT TO COLORED POLICE

Lucan Village Council has adopted a resolution calling on the provincial secretary to cancel the appointment of Peter E. Butler, colored, of that village, to the provincial police force. Butler was recently discharged as village constable and from the country constabulary for alleged overofficiousness, and it is claimed in the resolution that his appointment to the new position at Lucan is contrary to the feelings of 90 per cent. of the people of the village and district.

YALE FOOTBALL REVENUE ESTIMATED AT $150,000

TOTAL AMOUNT TAKEN AT ONE GAME $168,729—PROGRAMS BRING $3,800.

New Haven, Dec. 5. — It was unofficially estimated here that the Yale football receipts for the season would be nearly $150,000. From the Yale-Harvard game Yale will get about $78,000, and from the Princeton game about $21,000, from the Brown game $12,000, and from the earlier games of the season from $200 to $7,000 as its share. The total gross will be between $140,000 and $150,000, it seems safe to predict.

From this about $15,000 must be taken to provide for the expense of temporary seats in the Yale Bowl fo the Harvard game there.

Manager William Bedell, of the Yale Athletic Association's ticket department, announces that $153,800 was realised from the sale of ticket to the Yale-Harvard game. This is $82,000 more than the largest sum previously received in a Yale football game, the amount taken in when the bowl was opened two years ago. Of the sum received this year $14,000 was expended in the erection of the temporary seats. The expense for ushers was about $2,000. From the sale of programs about $3,800 was received, and from the automobile parking space, just outside the bowl, about $2,700. The Red Cross Collection taken in the bowl a week ago ago totalled $8,487. This, of course, does not go to the Yale A. A., but including this item, the sum of money received at the bowl at the Harvard game amounts to $168,729.

SHELTER WAS OPEN TO PUBLIC

Many Citizens Visited Quarters Yesterday at Invitation of Miss Colson

The Children's Shelter was thrown open to the public yesterday afternoon by Miss Colson, the new superintendent, and despite the inclement weather conditions, a large number of people took advantage of this opportunity to see the home under the new management. The house, itself, with its newly furnished dining room and scrupulous bedrooms, was a delight; also the cleanly and carefully tended children. Miss Colson, who undertook her new duties only a week ago, is already loved and respected by the children who, under her care, enjoy new liberties, such as having their meals in the dining-room—a great treat to the little tots, who range from four to eight years of age. Amongst those who saw the Shelter yesterday were the President, Mr. E. A. Peck, Father Phelan, Mrs. Wearing, Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Stocker, Mrs. Birdsall, Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, Mrs. McElhiney, Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. W. Green, Fire Chief Howard, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Denham, Mr. Spence. The Shelter will be open to public inspection any day, and Miss Colson is always glad to show visitors through.

Shelter Furnished at A Cost of $529.26

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society will be held on December 15th. This was announced at yesterday's meeting of the Children's Aid Society. Mr. E. A. Peck presided and the following members were present: Rev. Father Phelan, Mr. Joseph Wearing, Adjutant McElhenny, Fire Chief Howard, Chief of Police Thompson, Mrs. Stocker, Mrs. Hopwood and Mrs. Gibbs. The report of the month's expenditure showed that $529.26 had been expended on refurnishing the Shelter and $164.68 was added for outstanding accounts for the month.

TOBACCO APPRECIATED BY BOYS AT THE FRONT

That the boys in France appreciate the tobacco sent to them by the Canadian Tobacco Fund is evident from the following cards received by Mr. W. H. Dunsford, manager of the Bank of Commerce. One, it will be noticed, is from a Peterborough boy, Lance Corp. Lyburn, who went overseas with the 57th Battalion:

Somewhere in France, Nov. 1st.

Dear Sir,—To-night I have been issued with a parcel of cigarettes and tobacco with this post card enclosed. Please accept my thanks for that parcel. While writing this I am enjoying a good smoke of that tobacco. If it needed anything to make the tobacco so taste better it would be the fact that it was sent by some one from Peterborough, where I come from, but both tobacco and cigarettes are first-class. Again thanking you, I am,

Lance Corp. W. Lyburn.

Somewhere in France, Nov. 1st.

Dear Sir,—We received your very welcome parcel of tobacco to-day and we sure do appreciate your kindness in sending such a lovely present of tobacco. I wish to thank you as well as I can. Your tobacco was much appreciated by all the boys, as we were wondering where the next smoke would come from, but had no idea it would come from the kind people of Canada. I have much pleasure in thanking you. From a lonely boy in France.

GOOD PROGRAMME BY THE CHILDREN'S ORCHESTRA

Monday night a most interesting programme was given by the Conservatory Children's Orchestra, numbering about twenty members, in St. James' Methodist church, under the auspices of the Epworth League. The members of the orchestra were given a hearty welcome by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Greatrix.

A programme of fifteen or sixteen numbers was given entirely by the junior members of the orchestra and went without a hitch. Violin solos were given by Ken Laing and Sam Swarts, the latter having to answer to repeated encores. Charlie Thirnbeck played a well rendered cornet solo, which was heartily applauded and had to be repeated. Master Frank Green gave a cornet solo, "The Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond," which also had to be repeated. The pianist, Miss Isobel Baird, gave in her own inimitable way a transcription of the popular number, "Somewhere a Voice is Calling."

During the intermission Mr. Joseph Wearing was called upon for a few remarks and congratulated the orchestra and their teacher for their splendid playing.

Mr. Jas. Simpson Discusses the Cost of Living

Honorable Mr. Rogers, Mr. Doherty, and Mr. Crothers, constituted supplementary machinery to that any municipality might put into action. Hence if it were sufficient as supplementary machinery it could have been exercised directly to the fullest extent of its power without dissipating the effect of the Order-in-Council by requiring the individual municipality to take the initiative.

The coal situation, manufacture of munitions, British commercial shipping and other current topic were discussed by Mr. Simpson who stated that the people demand from those controlling and distributing supplies the same measure of patriotism that they, themselves, contribute to the empire when they and their sons join the forces and make the supreme sacrifice of their lives. Out of a number of examples quoted was that private shipping interests in England have paid dividends of from 400 to 500 per cent. This money, Mr. Simpson said, had been extored by big prices for the shipping of those commodities the people absolutely need. And their business has been protected and maintained by the might of Britain's navy.

Mayor Duffus presided and assured the meeting, which was quite a large one, that the City Council would be glad to meet the Labour Council at any time on any questions they desired information.

COLD WEATHER IS COMING, SAYS FOSTER

Stormy Period Next Week Will Be Followed by Short, Warm Period

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 5. — Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross-continent Dec 5 to 9; warm wave, 4 to 8; cool wave, 7 to 11. The five days covered by this storm will average cooler than usual, and the storm will be more severe than usual on the Pacific slope and the west of Lake Superior. A cold wave is expected to precede the warm wave.

Next warm wave will reach Vancouver about Dec. 8, and temperatures will rise on all the Pacific slope. It will cross summit of Rockies by close of 9; plains sections, 10; great lakes and the Ohio valleys, 11; eastern sections, 12; reaching Newfoundland about Dec. 13. Storm wave will follow about one day behind warm wave, and cool wave about one day behind storm wave. The weather features of this storm will be a little above the usual intensities; the five days will average cooler than usual; precipitation about normal.

The storms that cross the continent about every three to eight days, averaging a little less than six days, move in an irregular circle around the north magnetic pole, which is located near longitude 96 west of Greenwich, and near 70 of north latitude. The storms that affect the inhabited part of the continent usually range between 30 and 60 north latitude. They always progress from west to east, and the wind blows around the storm centre, the low, from right by way of front, to left.

Movement of Storms.

Place at watch on your table, face up. Let the centre of the watch represent the magnetic north pole. The storms move contrary to the watch hands. Let the watch represent the low, the storm centre, and the wind blows, within that storm centre, contrary to the movement of the watch hands. This does not include the tropical storms. Let your watch centre represent half way between Porto Rica and the Azores Islands and tropical storms will move with the hands of the watch in an irregular circle. The cool waves and cold waves are not so regular in their movements. They all come from the northwest, are inclined to cross the paths of the lows, but are irregular in their movements. The air comes down in the high or cool wave, and goes up in the low or storm centre. Many suppose that the storm moves with the wind. That is an error. As you face the storm the wind blows a little to the right of its centre. Face the wind and the storm centre will be to your right. The blizzard and cold wave are always between the low or storm centre and the high, or cool wave or cold wave. If you are studying the high, or cool wave, the wind motion, and everything about it, is the opposite of the low or storm centre.

Another warm wave will reach Vancouver about Dec. 12, and temperatures will rise on all the Pacific slope. It will cross crest of RoRekies by close of 15; plains sections, 14; great lakes and Ohio valleys, 15; eastern sections, 16; reaching Newfoundland about Dec. 17. Storm waves will follow about one day behind warm wave, and cool wave about one day behind storm wave. Temperatures will average near or a little below normal; precipitation about same as in previous storms. We were a little off on temperature from Nov. 5 to 15.

RELICS OF BATTLE UNCOVERED BY FLOOD

A recent flood which swept the farm of Charles Rexford, four miles below Gaines, Pennsylvania, washed away crops and much soil from meadow land and left uncovered relics of the dim long ago.

A well was uncovered which was walled up and partly filled with sand and stone. Around this aperture and in it were found evidences of a battle between settlers and Indians.

Flattened bullet heads, arrow heads, brass buttons made in London, copper cents bearing dates 1785, 1812, 1813, 1816, 1817, 1818, 1819, 1823 and 1825, and bits of blue crockery of English make, were also discovered. The money and the arrow heads were found in loose soil in the well.

After digging out the debris the explorers came to a flat stone which yielded only to a lever. Underneath it was not water but bones. Other bones were found a little farther distant but mainly in the well.

To one side of the well was uncovered a stone fireplace foundation, and there on digging, was found a set of deer antlers as perfect as when it likely hung over the fire place in this pioneer house.

What tragedy was enacted on this spot the oldest inhabitants of the section are unable to say. They have no recollection of any home standing on the banks of Pine Creek, in that vicinity, yet that some people lived there is all too plain.—Chicago Tribune.

SANITATION IN THE ORIENT

THERE IS A NOTABLE IMPROVEMENT IN SHANGHAI'S FOOD SUPPLY.

That sanitation is making great strides in the Orient is evident from these comments on the food supply in Shanghai, taken from The New York Medical Journal:

"As the preventable diseases specially prevalent in Shanghai are mostly caused by infected food, food inspection has been considered of paramount importance. The foreign food supply is under complete sanitary supervision, and the same is gradually being done for the Chinese, premises being licensed as soon as the necessary conditions have been met. The periodical analyses of water supply by the Shanghai Waterworks Company show that filtration is carefully done. The question of the prohibition of water closets is one that chiefly concerns the purity of the water supply, and is, therefore, of fundamental importance to the community."

"There has been a progressive improvement in the quality of milk supplied," says the Colonial Medical Reports of the Shanghai Health Department in The Journal of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene for Sept. 1, 1916. "The standard of cleanliness in dairies has been maintained. The windows of the milkrooms are now required to be unopenable and provided with perforated zinc instead of glass and the door with a spring slam to prevent ingress of flies. Efforts are being made to prevent the smuggling of milk from unlicensed dairies in Postung. As regards the result of punishment, fining is the least effective, the offense being invariably repeated while it tends to increase the price of milk to compensate for losses sustained. On the other hand, imprisonment and the cangue have a decidedly deterrent effect.

"The licensed butcher, poultry game and vegetable shops have been kept in good sanitary condition. The regulation of fruit shops has presented great difficulty. Endeavor has been made to get the dealers to keep their skinned fruits in flyproof cases, but with indifferent success. It is considered best to rely on the public, both foreign and Chinese, to sterilise fruit as it is impossible to insure that fruit is not exposed to inspection by flies at some stage of its journey from the tree to the consumer.

"Residents are requested not to patronise hawkers of fruit and other foodstuffs who come to their houses. The examination of cattle and carcasses at the municipal slaughter house affords adequate protection of the meat supply. Good meat is stamped with a circular stamp for mutton pork, and veal, with the words 'killed municipal slaughter house' and the date of the slaughter. Meat inferior in quality, but free from disease passed for sale on stalls only, is marked 'second quality'".

SAYS AUSTRALIA ABLE TO PRODUCE PAPER AND DYES

SYDNEY, N.S.W. Dec. 5.—Experiments in the manufacture of paper and the production of dyes, which are being carried out not far from Cairns in North Queensland, are attracting considerable attention. The investigator is Mr. Joseph Campbell, M.A., M.I.M.E. who, after graduating at Sydney University won the Belmore Medal for geology and agricultural chemistry, the University Gold Medal for agricultural chemistry and was afterwards university lecturer on geology, chemistry, mineralogy.

The experiments have been privately made, but the success that has attended them is considered justification for the inquiries now being made by the Government. The authorities are particularly anxious to produce in Australia huge quantities of paper now imported.

Mr. Campbell appears to pin his faith to the longblady or lalang grass, of which there are millions of tons in Queensland, and which will produce three crops a year. He claims—and shows the finished article in proof of it—that paper made from lalang is only 10 per cent inferior to that made from esparto grass, and esparto pulp is the best known. Mr. Campbell has obtained 50 per cent. first class paper pulp from the Chinese burr and the Queensland hemp, and he has been most successful with banana fibre.

Banana trees, after bearing, are simply a nuisance, but Mr. Campbell says they can be turned into an excellent pulp and made profitable. Pulp from which bank notes are unliar official paper can be manufactured, has been made from the screw pine, or pandanus,, which has a prolific growth in all low-lying land, and from the lantana, which is regarded as a pest there, can be made a good wrapping paper.

"While experimenting with these various plants," says Mr. Campbell, "I discovered that some of them contain valuable natural dyeing material I devoted attention to it, with the result that I found two plants which hold the basic dye, and with the addition of mordants, are capable of producing all the colors most required. Every one can be made perfectly fast against light and alkaline solutions."

NORTHCLIFFE'S NEW FIGHT

ATTACKS GOVERNMENT FOR CONTINUING THE BUSINESS OF GERMAN BANKS.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—In the course of correspondence recently published in The Daily Mail between Lord Northcliffe and Sir William Plender, a member of a well-known firm of chartered accountants, which is being employed by the Government in connection with the German banks in London, Lord Northcliffe threatened to withdraw from Plender's firm the auditing work of The Times and other papers owned by him "if the German policy of keeping alive German business is to be continued."

Plender, who is described by Northcliffe as "one of my watchdogs" made a reply which is incorporated in the Accountants' Journal, the official organ of the Society of Incorporated Accountants and Auditors. "Plender's attitude," says the Journal, "is strictly correct. He has before him two clients, his Majesty's Government on one hand and Lord Northcliffe and his friends on the other. Sir William claims to carry out the wishes and instructions of the Government in regard to the business they have intrusted him with, and he also discharges in the interests, as Lord Northcliffe himself admits, the duties of a watchdog in many of the large undertakings that have grown up around his Lordship.

"When Lord Northcliffe and his fellow-shareholders threaten the loss of emoluments to their auditor because they disapprove of the policy of the Government who employ him in another capacity, then it is time for the auditor to speak out. Whether Northcliffe and his friends will carry out their threat remains to be seen, but should they be so ill-advised, we hope we know enough of the spirit which animates the accountancy profession to warrant us in believing that no help will be forthcoming from any qualified firm to assist Northcliffe in carrying out his determination, which cannot be in the interests of the British public.

FLOUR TO COME DOWN.

British Government Doesn't Want Any Made from New Wheat.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 5.—A startling report was received here that the British Government has decided to take no more flour from Canadian mills made by the new wheat crop, as only old wheat flour will be accepted. There is no old wheat in the country, it having all been cleared up. This will be a blow to Canadian mills and will affect flour prices downward.

Thousand Passports Are Issued Monthly

Twelve Times as Many as Before War—Women Have Not Heeded Warning.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—The Department of External Affairs under Sir Joseph Pope is now issuing an average of over one thousand passports a month. The number is fully twelve times as many as were issued before the war, and the work of the department in charge of this branch has been correspondingly increased. In view of the fact that the majority of intending travellers to Great Britain leave the question of securing passports almost to the last minute, it is requested that those who intend leaving Canada should give adequate notice of applications for passports, thus avoiding confusion and possible disappointment.

The number of passports issued represents practically the number of Canadians who are leaving Canada for England each month. About half the total of one thousand per month are women. In the past twelve months it is estimated that fully six thousand women have gone from Canada to England. Despite the Government's warning against an influx of women into the United Kingdom, thus unnecessarily adding to the strain upon the British food supply, there is little evidence yet that the warning is being heeded.

MUMM STREET IS NO MORE

The municipal council of Rheims met while an unusually fierce bombardment was going on. It was decided to change the name of G. H. Mumm street to Verdun street.

The street had originally been named after the champagne merchant, who left two sons. The elder Hermann Von Mumm, was in Rheims when war was declared, and was recognized by an inhabitant, when trying to catch a train. He was taken to his own house, kept under guard, and later sent to a concentration camp in Brittany. The younger son, Walter Von Mumm, rejoined his regiment in Germany, in July, 1914, he being a lieutenant in the Brandenburg Hussars. He was recognized passing through Rheims in an automobile when the Germans occupied the city in early September, 1914. He then joined the army of Von Kluck, and has since been heard of as being in Brussels.

GERMANY TAKES CENSUS.

Population of Empire Enumerated in a Single Night.

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—The census of the population was taken Sunday throughout the German Empire. Where formerly army officials were employed to take the census, which is repeated at regular intervals of five years, this time the method was employed of requiring landlords to send in the names of all persons who slept in their houses on the night of Nov. 30. Blanks were furnished for the purpose.

The census will be used in the enforcement of the new civil service law. Census of cattle and certain other domesticated animals took place at the same time.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at 2 p.m. Service will be held at the family residence by the Rev. Mr. Mitchell before proceeding to the Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. HENRY GREEN.

This morning at her home on Perry street, there fell asleep in Jesus, Mrs. Henry Greene, after a long fight with the grim reaper. Succeeding periods of sickness and apparent recovery proved at last too much for the patient sufferer, and the end came peacefully at an early hour to-day. And death came only as a swift transition to a state that is far better. Being a Methodist, she has made St. James' her church home for the last number of years, where she was prominent in all ladies' work as long as she was able to attend them.

An exemplary wife, mother and friend, she leaves behind her many who will miss her greatly. Of the immediate family her husband, Mr. Henry Greene, of the J. J. Turner & Sons Co., one son, J. M. Greene, and one daughter, Mrs. R. C. Braund survive; also one sister, Mrs. A. Wilde, of Havelock, and one brother, Mr. S. J. Mendell, of La Crosse, Wisconsin.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

ANTWERP JEWS IN LONDON.

Over 3,500 Cared for in Communities by the British Government.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Over 3,500 Jewish refugees from Antwerp, who fled Belgium when the war broke out, are living in three unique communities established for them by the British government in London. In these places they enjoy ample comfort, maintain their family ties, and are enabled to get work, waiting for the time when the war will end and they may return home.

The government, at the instance of the Jewish Community of London, of which the wealthy Leopold de Rothschild is the head, provided the three immense homes for them, where they have been taught English.

The communities are divided among what is now called the Poland Street Refuge, near Oxford Circus; Lindrie House, in North London, and a number of flat houses in Whitechapel. In the Poland Street Refuge Ernst Schiff, a nephew of Jacob Schiff, the New York banker, is the head.

The Poland Street Refuge shelters 1,200 refugees. Many aged couples are housed there, and there are some 750 children in it. The younger people are able to earn from $8 to $15 a week.

Nearly all of the Antwerp refugees were diamond cutters, and to find jobs for that character of artisan in London during war time was impossible. The diamond-cutting industry does not flourish so much in London now as before the war. To-day they are engaged in making boots, clothes and in other kinds of work.

The average cost to house, feed and clothe each one of the 3,500 refugees per week is $2.30. Those who work pay for their board, and, if they are able, for their clothes. Whatever deficiency there is the British government defrays.

In all three communities the children are given schooling facilities. Their progress in learning English is remarkable. Milk depots for the youngsters, with skimming apparatus, have been installed at each refuge. A maternity centre has been established at Lindrick House. Hospital wards, supervised by physician refugees from Antwerp, are maintained at Poland Street.

CONSCRIPTION MOTION IS REJECTED

LONDON LADY THINKS MEN HAVE JUST RECENTLY TAKEN TO CONSULTING THEIR WIVES

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 6.—Members of the Local Council of Women, meeting in the Young Women's Christian Association Building, following a spirited debate, rejected a motion favouring conscription for Canada. A resolution endorsing national registration to the end that the country's forces may be better organized, was, however, carried.

Mrs. W. R. McIntosh, wife of the pastor of King Street Presbyterian Church, who was the mover of the conscription resolution, declared that the women of Canada had been accused of holding back the men from voluntary enlistment. "Many men are excusing themselves from enlisting on the ground that their wives won't let them. They were never known to be so obedient before," she claimed. "By endorsing a conscription resolution we wash our hands of the charge that we are holding back the men."

Had Severe Cold

PAIN IN CHEST

SPASMODIC COUGHING

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away in a day or two. This is a mistake for before they know it, it has settled on the lungs.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that on the first sign of a cough or cold it must be gotten rid of immediately, otherwise it may cause years of suffering from some serious lung trouble.

Mr. A. George, 30 Blevin's Place, Toronto, Ont., writes: "Having greatly benefitted from your remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I take the liberty to write you a few words about the effect of that wonderful syrup. Two years ago I caught a severe cold followed by a spasmodic cough and pain in my chest. I was treated by many doctors but without any benefit, and also took many proprietory medicines which all failed to cure. One of my friends recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I recommend it to anyone as a God-sent remedy."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

The Second Battalion Straightened The Line On The Somme Front

Thrilling Story of Canadians' First Battle on Somme—A Brilliant Charge Trench Snatched in Fifteen Minutes—Feats of Cool Courage and Self-sacrifice—The Yyres Influence Made Battalion Grim.

MANY PETERBORO' MEN IN THE BATTALION

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—One of the most graphic and thrilling word-pictures yet written of the Canadians in battle at the front has been received in Ottawa from an officer of the 2nd Canadian Battalion. He tells the compelling story of the Canadians' first battle on the Somme, a record of impetuous valor and of splendid achievement which won at the time unstinted praise from the British Generals in command.

The story is that of the 2nd Battalion, under command of Colonel "Dolly" Swift of Quebec. This was the only battalion directly engaged in the first offensive in which the Canadians newly arrived at the Somme, participated. The dash of the battalion over the parapets; the quick, fierce charge, the individual feats of cool courage, the thrill of successful attack after the weary months of grim waiting in the trying salient at Ypres, are all described by one of the participating officers, who knows the art of the war correspondent.

A Fifteen-minutes' Job.

It was this attack which started the Canadians on the road to Courcelette and the Regina trench. The thousand men of the battalion went over the parapet at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of a bright, sunshiny September day. A moving-picture camera took them as they jumped into No Man's Land for the German salient trench, four hundred yards out. The men disappeared into the smoke which the bombardment of their own heavy guns in the rear had hung over the German trench.

In just fifteen minutes the camera caught 200 Germans with their hands up bursting out of the smoke into which the Canadians had disappeared. At the same time word came back that the job was done. Still 400 yards of rutting trench had been taken and was being secured.

In that fifteen minutes the German casualties totalled 600, while in the attack and the twelve hours' resistance of counter-attacks the Canadians' losses were but 250.

Twenty-Eight Medals and Crosses Won

The character of the action may best be judged from the awards to individuals who distinguished themselves. British Commanders are notoriously chary in the distribution of medals and crosses. Yet in that fifteen minutes of flaming fighting the 2nd Battalion of the 1st Canadian Division won twenty-eight medals and crosses. To the officers went two Distinguished Service Orders and five Military Crosses, to men and non-commissioned officers went fifteen Distinguished Conduct Medals and five Military Medals, and to one went that crown of courage, the Victoria Cross.

Warm Praise from Icy Officials.

The officer's story of "the Iron Second" from Ontario, including men from Peterborough, Kingston, Brockville, Ottawa, and other towns of this district ,is as follows:

"In the field: It is the 2nd Canadian Battalion that has as its motto 'Semper Paratus,' and to the 'Iron Second' was assigned the honour of straightening out a certain piece of line. It was done in a way that brought warm praise from icy officialdom.

From Nightmare to Glorious Morning.

"The battalion was fresh from Ypres. The Ypres salient furnishes poor comfort; the Ypres influence acts in various ways: it either tears the heart out of a man or makes him grim and vengeful. When it produces the latter effect upon a company, a battalion, or a division, it has created in a unit a spirit which, born in battle, is unconquerable and triumphant.

"To 'carry on' for months beneath the eye of the enemy, with the advantage his in all but human endurance and courage, then to be transferred to a sector where the advantage is reversed, is like awakening from nightmare to a glorious morning of sun and spring. Who can describe the eagerness and pleasure of the Canadians when they found themselves—Ypres mud a memory—on the crest of 'that' hill looking down upon their enemy.

Adepts at Trench-snatching.

"A little 'snout' had to be cut off, and the line from X Y Z to A B C put into better condition for operations to follow. In fact, the old game of trench-snatching, at which the Canadians are experienced players, was to be introduced as a pleasant preliminary to big things.

"A minor operation demands as much careful though and studious inquiry as a larger one; there are the hundred and one things to be considered. Information must be exact; the artillery must have their programme worked out precisely; communication is vitally important; the attacking force must be properly distributed; and the consolidating wave must know where and how it is to work. The wounded must be tended. Prisoners are expected, and guards have to be detailed, and everyone knows just exactly what the operation is, why it is done, and when it takes place. The responsibility lies with the Commanding Officer; his operation orders must meet every contingency. Undoubtedly the reason of the latest trench-snatching operation being officially termed 'brilliant' was due to the completeness of the preparation.

Preparation for Attack.

"The order comes: 'Officers commanding companies and details will report to a battalion headquarters immediately.' It is a momentous gathering. With the crispness and precision of a soldier, the commanding officer reads his operating orders, illustrating his points upon a map.

"'Any questions, gentlemen?'

"Yes, there are a number.

"The Lewis gunners will assist the bombers; the direction from H to W is NW., the communicating trench is from G to P, and so on. It is all understood, and zero time,' that will come later.

"Before an attack a soldier is nervous and anxious. Crouched into the parapet, eagerly gripping his rifle and bayonet, his teeth clenched, his eyes on his officer, this is the soldier who, in a moment, is to double, slowing behind the barrage of that distant and mysterious line, which officialdom knows only as the 'objective.'

"The scream of shells is not heard above the deafening crash, as the heavies leave the enemy line. Shrapnel of every calibre bursts overhead, and for the moment all hell is let loose.

"Iron Second" Goes Over.

"With eyes intent upon his watch the second in command counts the seconds as they tick slowly on to the lifting of the barrage. From the right and the left officers look for the signal to send them over. Ten seconds—five—four, and they go. As steadily as if on parade, with the interval between each man marked with mathematical precision, and with the easy swing of conquerors, the 'Iron Second' cleared their parapet became lined with rifles, and at that same moment the German parapet became ingdl with rifles, and above the shrieking of the shells and the deafening bursts of shrapnel arose the vicious, crackling sound of rifle fire.

"The first wave sweeps on; the men fall on all sides; thirty yards from that line of blazing hostile rifles they drop into shell holes, and themselves open fire to silence that against them On the left a machine gun comes into action, and from the front the German bombers throw one incessant stream of vicious explosives at the advancing line.

Lt. Pringle's Heroic Sacrifice.

"Close behind the first wave comes the second, which had moved into the 'jumping-off trench' almost immediately. In the centre the enemy pours a steady fire into the Canadians and here was enacted one of the bravest, one of the most self-sacrificing incidents of the whole of Canada's war history. The situation for a moment was critical; a German machine-gun was being mounted on a parapet, and its position was seen as to command the whole line. With out a moment's hesitation Lieut.

ALLIED FLEET BOMBARD TROOPS OF GREEK KING

Royalists Had Taken up Entrenched Positions in and Around Athens—Situation Decidedly Grave in the Greek Capital—Urged That Strongest Measures be Taken by Allies

CALL UPON GERMANY TO GIVE AID NEEDED

(Special Cable by Louis Edgar Browne. Copyright.)

SALONIKA, December 7.—Communication between Athens and Salonika is interrupted but it is known that the situation in the capital is decidedly grave. It is reported that King Constantine's troops are entrenched in the mountains about Athens and have been bombarded by the guns of the allied fleet.

It is confirmed that after engagements the Royalist troops and the allied detachments in the streets, the latter retired toward Piraeus, and that during the retirement the Royalists began the wrecking of houses and stores of Venizelist sympathizers. Two of the Venizelist newspaper plants were demolished. Frequent clashes occurred between the two factions in the streets of Larissa in Thessaly.

It is reported here that the casualties among the Royalists and Venizelists in Athens have reached 800.

Now that French censorship has been removed because of the withdrawal of allied troops to Piraeus, Royalist newspapers in Athens are taking advantage of the difficult position in Roumania, calling upon Germany to come to the aid of Greece. They praise their "great King who is at last fighting against his enemies." No pre-entente Venizelist newspaper has been published in Athens for several days, owing to brute force restrictions imposed by Constantine's reservists.

AGAINST ANY COMPROMISE.

Officials here urge that the strongest measures be taken, and no compromise be permitted. They declare it is absolutely imperative to prove to the King that his various secret negotiations are ended. The safety of allied troops at Salonika will be endangered. Many other material moral considerations will suffer if the allies hesitate any longer to take extreme measures. None of the guaranteeing powers—Britain, France, Russia—appear eager to interfere with Constantine's sovereignty.

LOUIS EDGAR BROWNE.

TO PROTECT BRITISH CITIZENS.

LONDON, December 7.—Official telegrams show that Athens is quiet, at least temporarily. Steps are being taken to insure the safety of the British colony, part of whose members have gone to Piraeus.

A steamship is being held in readiness to remove the others should it become necessary.

NO DESIRE TO FORCE GREECE.

ROME, December 7.—The allies do not desire to force Greece into war nor do they support any anti-dynastic movement in Greece, asserted Premier Boselli in his report on the war delivered before the Chamber of Deputies Tuesday. Premier Boselli reiterated the determination of Italy to maintain the war with her allies until the restoration of Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro was accomplished. He termed this "the noble and essential object of the war."

At the close of his speech he sent a message of greeting to "our valorous Latin sister, Roumania," trusting for her final success.

The Premier's speech was very long and in it he recapitulated the whole history of Italy's participation in the war and enumerated the reasons which induced King Victor to enter into the struggle. As a proof that Italy was prepared to push her operations vigorously the Premier announced that there were now 2,100 factories working on war material, the workers being one-fifth women, whose participation both in industries and agriculture was increasing daily. The Premier declared that victory would insure the equilibrium on the eastern Mediterranean which he termed one of the chief foundations of Italian policy.

He said that Valona would be Italy's strategic post on the Adriatic from which would radiate her future commercial expansion in the Balkans.

Capital of Roumania In Possession of Germans

Taking of Bucharest Practically Completes Conquest of Southern Part of Roumania by the Enemy—Ploechte, the Important Oil Centre, Has Also Been Captured by Teuton Forces.

BERLIN, December 7.—(By wireless to Sayville).—Bucharest, capital of Roumania, has been captured, it was officially announced last night. Ploechli, the important railway junction town, 36 miles northwest of Bucharest, also has been taken. Ploechti is also the great oil centre of Roumania, where the Standard Oil Co. has immense holdings.

The capture of Ploechti, on the main railway line running north from Bucharest, cuts the main railway line of retreat for the Roumanian armies operating in the Bucharest region.

The official statement does not indicate whether the entry of the Teutonic forces into Bucharest and Ploechti was simultaneous. The capture of Ploecati before that of the capital would be far more serious for the Roumanians. Many military observers looked for the Roumanians not to attempt a defence of the capital to the last, expecting an evacuation in time to save the forces defending it by a withdrawal of the railway route remaining to them.

The taking of Bucharest virtually completes the conquest by the Teutonic forces to the southern section of the Roumanian kingdom, embracing territory of more than 50,000 square miles.

In the early statement yesterday the Petrograd War Office admitted German progress around Tergovista and Ploechti. From the wording of the Berlin official statement, it is not clear which of the encircling arms of the German advance captured the Roumanian capital.

The Berlin statements have mentioned three separate thrusts at the capital. One of these, the southern army, which crossed the Danube, was located in official statements of Tuesday at Gradistea—about eleven miles due south of Bucharest. Probably this was the closest to the city, and it seems likely that this was the army which "conquered" the city, according to the Berlin official statement.

German Forces Captured Newala

LISBON, Dec. 7.—A large German force captured Newala, in German East Africa, from Portuguese troops.

Best Nerve Specialist In England Was Consulted

But Nervous System Failed to Respond to Treatment Prescribed

Nervous disorders frequently result from injury to the nerves in accidents or because of the shock to the system.

The writer of this letter was injured in a mix-up with some colts, sustaining concussion for three months, and in spite of continued treatment in hospital could not obtain restoration of the internal nerves which control the action of the digestive and other vital organs. He travelled to Europe and consulted England's greatest nerve specialist. Relief was only temporary, in spite of many treatments used.

His letter gives the facts briefly and tells how he was finally cured by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Can you imagine any more severe test of this great nerve restorative?

Mr. Henry F. Venn, Cote Ranch Malakwa, B. C., writes: "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has restored my nervous system and given me new health. Having met with a severe accident seven years ago, from which I was unconscious and which left my nerves in a very sore plight. I was treated by doctors galore and consulted one of the greatest nerve specialists in England, but nothing seemed to do me much good. Hypophosphites and, in fact, all and every kind of nerve mixture in almost every form was used, but never with more than temporary benefit.

"But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has acted very differently, for it has built up my nervous system until I feel like my old self again. If this medicine will do for others what it has done for me, I shall not regret having written this letter. I have recommended the Nerve Food personally to many, and shall always esteem its great restorative value."

Lloyd George was at his desk in the war office early to-day, among his first callers was Arthur Henderson, the sole Labourite in the Coalition Cabinet, Minister of Pensions. Henderson called for a conference following a private meeting of the Labour party, held early in the morning.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

A few minutes afterward the door opened again, opened to frame the bulky figure of a man who had swept by those who had sought to announce his coming. The heavy brows of J. J. Malone were contracted over smouldering gray eyes which many men feared and all but a few obeyed. At his elbow followed the slight wiry figure of a companion with nervous eyes, and a cigar which was always chewed and never lighted. This man had come as Ham had come, from the hardness of some barren farm and had obdurately hammered his path by the sheer insistence of his brain into the inner circle of an oligarchy. These two greatest of American money barons ignored the gesture with which the younger Warwick invited them to be seated. In the brief silence that followed upon their entrance was the portent of a brewing tempest. At last Malone said crisply:

"I sent for you, Mr. Burton. Most men come to me when I send for them."

"In several respects I differ from most men." The reply was too quiet to ring flippant. It was merely the assurance of invincible self-faith, and for an instant the man who had not in years been compelled to soften the iron grip of his mastery gazed his astonishment.

Then Malone burst into an oriflamme of anger. He was a whirlwind of fury before whose raging any small or timid man must have shriveled. The yes that shone out under the heavy lashes as he paced the place, with clenched hands, were batteries raining shrapnel of wrath.

From their gray depths they blackened into ink, across which shot the red and yellow flecks of a fiery and passionate autocracy. The iron jaws, inherited from seafaring forefathers, snapped on words of threat, rebuke, and invective. He wore his sixty-five years as lightly as foliage, standing straight and strong like a poplar tree, save as he bent to the gusts of his own passion. Where his clenched fist fell upon desk or table the furniture trembled. Through the frosted glass of the door Hamilton Burton saw the shadows of hurrying figures and knew that the secretaries and stenographers out there were in a flutter of uneasy excitement. Wall street knew what it meant when the "old man" was on the rampage.

While this tempest endured the nervous-looking man took a chair and sat silent. His attitude was hunched up and he chewed on his unlighted cigar while his restless gaze travelled here, there, everywhere. On casual glance one might have overlooked him as negligible, thereby falling gravely into error. The giant and the slight man had this kinship, that in the workings of great finance they were mainspring and balance wheel, and as their prompting many divisions of the world's industrial armies marched or marked time.

Suddenly, J. J. Malone fell silent, and then Hamilton Burton spoke. He spoke with unsurprising calm for one of his uncompromising arrogance. Perhaps it accorded with his whim to chill his words with icy insolence that they might cut the more and point the greater contrast when he chose to unleash his own hot wrath.

"You sent for me, Malone. I declined to come to you. Then you came to me. As yet you have shown no reason for the visit except to swear around my office like a drunken and abusive pirate. If you have nothing for temperate discussion, I will now say good-day to you. Take with you, the honors of war, sir. You have unnerved me. I acknowledge your superiority in billingsgate"—he paused and for an instant his voice mourned, as he added—"and in nothing else."

"Have you reached so secure a stage then, that you can defy and insult Harrison and myself? Are you prepared to declare war on the entire world of finance?" Now Malone spoke with regained composure, but an ominous undernote of threat. "Let us have done with pretense. In so far as any individuals can make or break—we can. When you came, an unlick'd cub, into the world of large affairs it was through us you made the alliances upon which your success is built. However great you conceive yourself to be, 'Consolidated' still represents in us its active heads."

Hamilton Burton replied with a smile of unruffled calm. "You say I came to you. Many men have come to you, only to go away again with empty hands."

"You did not."

"No. You took me to your hearts. But why? Was it because you pitied me? Has pity or gentle courtesy ever yet prevented 'Consolidated' from crucifying a victim? You conceded me my seat at your directorates only because you were compelled to recognize my value there. You lifted me from the ranks to the general staff of finance because of unescapable conviction that I inherently belonged among you; that I should take my place there as ally or an enemy. You had a suspicion then of what I knew before I over saw a city—that I could not be stopped."

"Grant for the sake of brevity that Genius and Destiny are your handmaidens." Malone leaned across the table, resting his weight on his planted knuckles. Under his shaggy brows his eyes burned deeply and satirically. Across from him Hamilton Burton stood, younger, slenderer, and more pliant of poise; his eyes meeting those of his protagonist, level and unwavering. "Grant that all your self-adulation is warrantable. Now that you have attained this place in the councils of the few, do you mean to become only a wrecker and a spoiler? Do you recognize no rules of war? Are you merely a breeder of storms, and a maker of panics? Because, if your are, by the Eternal God, I think we are yet strong enough to stamp you out—to utterly obliterate you!"

"So"—the younger man's lips twisted into a smile of cool irony—"you have come as the guardians of conservatism to admonish me, the fractious child of the Dollar family. It is delightful, gentlemen, to encounter in actual life so humorous a situation." Then the mouth line grew set again, and the voice hardened. "Well, I make you no pledges. I say to you, to the dickens with the laws you draw for your own profit. I acknowledge no rested right in you to assail me as a wrecker—you who have risen on wreckage. You will not obliterate me—you will not even try."

Harrison from his chair gazed very thoughtfully and silently out of the window. He watched a gull dip over the East River. He shifted the cigar to the other side of his mouth, and across his gray eyes flickered a ghost of amusement. After a long pause he inquired in an impassive voice:

"Why?"

"Because, just as you at first accepted me for my usefulness, so you will come again to me when you need me, and you know you will need me. We are playing the same game and it is no child's kissing game. When you have both the wish and the power to crush me I shall expect no kindly warning at your hands. When you need me, you will let no dislike bar my door to your coming. By the way, why did you come?"

"Your ticker isn't silent out there. It is not your custom to be uninformed." It was Malone who spoke.

"You know that the floor is seething—and why?"

"I know that the market opened quiet and that later Coal Tars broke, and there is a flurry—a panicky feeling, perhaps. It doesn't surprise me."

For an instant Malone regarded his former protege across the table. Hamilton Burton's fingers had fallen on a small bronze paper weight. It was an eagle with spread wings, not the bird of freedom, but the eagle of the emperor's standards.

"You perplex me," admitted the elder financier shortly. "You make great pretense of open frankness; brazen defiance even, and yet you choose to cloak every attack and to move by stealth. You know that just now such a flurry may precipitate a general panic that will shake and waste the nation like a fever in its marrow. Apparently your are deliberately breaking the market, yet you speak innocently of the matter as if something with which you have no concern."

For an instant it was Burton who laughed.

"And even yet, gentlemen, you have for active business men, bent on stemming a tide of disaster, spent much time in generalities and little on any concrete suggestion."

"We acted before we began to talk," said J. J. Malone, "we have taken steps to support Coal Tars but the times are perilous. The tidal wave of a panic mounts rapidly. If you insist on forcing us into a duel on the floor of the Stock Exchange to-day the pillars of public confidence may be seriously shaken. By two o'clock this afternoon the president's gavel will be falling to announce failures. The disaster that we have feared will come. In the end we shall beat you but all of us will have wasted ourselves in an exhausting struggle. There will be wreckage strewn from ocean to ocean. We have come to remonstrate. We have come to urge peace among ourselves and to warn you that a war between us is hardly a thing for you to court."

"In short," Burton's words came with a snap that his eyes, too reflected, "you charge this flurry to my authorship. You come urging peace with threats. Almost, gentlemen, you tempt me to do what you charge me with doing. Threats have never seemed to me a persuasive argument for peace." He paused and then laughed. "Go back to your respective sanctums of righteousness and plunder and you will see that this tide will soon turn. It is not in my plans that this day shall go down in Exchange history as a bear day. When I resolve on that, your threats will hardly alter me. This is not that day. The rumour of my attack is absurd. My brokers will be found bracing the market. The next time that you feel an itch to coerce me, regard my answer as given in advance. It is that you may go to the devil. Good-day."

When they had gone Burton sent for Carl Bristoll and smilingly nodded toward the outer door.

Mother-Made, Quick Acting Cough Syrup

Should be Kept Ready in Every Home—Easily Prepared and Costs Little.

Mothers would never know what you are missing until you make up this inexpensive, quick-acting cough syrup and try it. Children love its pleasant taste and nothing else will loosen a cough or chest cold and heal the inflamed or swollen throat membranes with such ease and promptness. It's equally as good for grown-ups as for children.

This splendid cough syrup is made by pouring 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-oz. bottle and filling the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough remedy than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of $2.

The moment it touches the inflamed, cold-congested membranes that line the throat and air passages, the healing begins, the phlegm loosens, soreness leaves, cough spasms lessen and soon disappear altogether, thus ending a cough quicker than you ever thought possible. Hoarseness and ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Excellent for bronchitis, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its quick healing effect on the membranes.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Shoes are up 80% to 100% in price—and going higher. Rubbers cost practically the same as before the war. A good pair of shoes runs away with as much money as five to ten pairs of equally good rubbers.

Yet one of these pairs of rubbers, worn when needed, will make a pair of shoes last half as long again—perhaps twice as long—for nothing destroys shoe-leather like getting wet.

So the money spent in rubbers is returned several times over in the saving of shoes alone, and again in the prevention of colds and worse, with the attendant expense and danger.

Beyond these personal advantages, wearing rubbers is a patriotic duty. Leather is growing scarcer, while its need for the soldiers is as great or greater than ever. Every pair of shoes we save, by releasing that much leather, helps a bit toward winning the war.

WHEN SOLDIERS RETURN

Great Lessons Learned Abroad—New Tasks Faced

Sir Robert Borden, addressing the Lawyers' Club of New York, said in part: "Many hundred thousand men will return after this war to their homes in the Overseas Dominions of the British commonwealth. They will have thronged upon the stage of the world's theatre of action and taken a mighty part in settling world issues and determining the future destiny of civilization and humanity. Upon our Atlantic and Pacific shores, by our inland waterways, in the northern hinterlands of Ontario and Quebec, on our vast western plains and still further west within the shadow of majestic mountain ranges, these men will take up anew the task of developing and up-building our country.

"They will take up that work with a consciousness that Canada has played a worthy part in the fateful struggle which she entered at the call of duty and for the cause of freedom. Theirs will be an imperishable recollection of comradeship with men of the Motherland and of all parts of the King's dominions; theirs also a wider vision and deeper insight from service in a high cause. Hardly less profound will be the influence of the war upon all our people. They have learned that self-sacrifice in a just cause is at once a duty and a blessing; and this lesson has both inspired and ennobled the men and women of Canada."

CANADA'S SCIENTISTS NEEDED TO WIN WAR

Inventive Brains Should be Mobilized, Urged Toronto Professor—England Had Done Marvels

Prof. John C. McLennan, Professor of Physics of the University of Toronto in an address to the Toronto Empire Club said: "Canada ought to requisition the aid of every scientific man who has anything to offer toward the conduct of the war. One thing which strikes the scientific man on coming into Canada is the exceedingly small extent to which the scientists of Canada are making contributions to their country at this time of war. Most of the scientific men in this country are expending their efforts in the teaching of the young men.

"The same condition of affairs existed in England till the second year of the war. The universities were all open and things were going along with the same complacency. Now, University professors are being utilized for war inventions. National matters are handled by special boards, such as the Navy Board. Boards of scientists were formed all over the country to help in the conduct of the war."

Use All Knowledge

The speaker acted on one of these boards and had a chance to observe the work which they did. The work that they did for the Empire thrilled him. He saw then that Canada did not realize that, to win this war, she needs the application of all the scientific knowledge held in the country.

The work done by the English boards of scientists is best known by some instances of the things they did in answer to the call. Our lines were being bombarded by a 42 cm. gun which was stationed some miles behind the enemy lines, and which was so cleverly hidden that our aviators were unable to locate it. An ordinary scientist, who had never done anything but routine scientific work in his life before, evolved a plan for the establishment of three observation stations, where the sounds of the gun could be traced upon a sheet by the vibrations. Thus, the exact location of the gun was found by the direction from which the sound came and the gun was silenced. Several other specific instances were problems occurring in the prosecution of the war had been solved by scientists, who, heretofore had given all their attention to routine work. One of the best inventions was made by a young Canadian, Mr. McLeod, son of a Toronto minister.

Stopping the Submarines

Prof. McLennan stated that the problem occupying the minds of the scientists was to find a way to detect and destroy submarines. They had made an instrument by which a submarine might be detected at a distance of 4½ miles in clear weather and 1¾ miles in stormy weather. He also stated that the North Sea and the English Channel were being charted so that it was now possible to ascertain just how many subs were in that area at any time. The Zeppelin menace had also been destroyed by recent inventions. The solution of the problems offered by Prof. McLennan was the organization of the scientists of the country by the Government into a board which would follow the example of the English boards by helping in the conduct of the war.

Charged Air Squadron

Two British aeroplanes, says an official report, encountered seventeen German machines behind the hostile lines in France. The Britishers dived into the middle of the German formation and attacked. One pilot got to very close quarters with a German machine, which burst into flames, and was seen to plunge to earth. He then attacked a second machine which was driven down and fell in a field. A third machine went down vertically and was seen to crash against the ground.

For supplying signet to a wounded soldier a Ramsgate, England, woman fined £10.

VAGARIES OF BOMBS

Strange Escapes From "Death Messengers" on Battlefield

Some strange escapes from death in the great Somme fighting were described to a London paper representative by a sergeant in a Yorkshire regiment. "Nothing a man does or does not do," he said, "seems to affect his chances. I've seen careful men get winged before the dare-devils, and I've seen the careless man get hit when the cautious man escaped. One man in my platoon first got hit in the mouth. The bullet broke one of his teeth, and, glancing off, just barely grazed his lip. Ten minutes later a bullet scarred across his identity disk, cutting his tunic across his chest; and later, in Courcelette, a bomb exploded in his pocket and, bursting outwards, never touched the man.

"Another man had three bombs in his pocket explode and passed through the experience unscathed; while a corporal had a bullet through his steel helmet. It went in at the front, travelled round his head, tearing the inside padding all round, and went out at the back, smashing up the helmet. And his head showed no trace of the bullet! I saw another bomb burst between a sergeant's feet. Three men were standing together. It blew the sergeant into the air and smashed up his feet, but the other two men were not scratched."

HEROIC CANADIAN

Stretcher-bearer's Devotion to Duty Was Superb

A Canadian official report says: No more beautiful act of heroic self sacrifice can be mentioned than that of Private Camille Sboule, of a Nova Scotia battalion, during the great advance on Courcelette. He was a stretcher-bearer, and while binding the wounded after the capture of the positions was himself severely wounded in the shoulder. His wounds were dressed, but he refused to be evacuated and continued his work for the rest of the day and during the night. In the morning he was again wounded, this time through the leg, but he still refused to leave. Finally, about noon, while he was dressing the wounds of another man, this gallant, gentle soldier was shot through the heart and killed. His general has said of him: "Greater devotion to duty I have never seen."

LIVER TONICS ANTACIDS CARMINATIVES LAXATIVES prepared from

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Live hogs have advanced to 11c locally this week and the market gave signs of gathering strength. But in most of the commodities there has been little variation from the quotations of a week ago.

Butter hovers around 45c and eggs are selling at from 45 to 50c.

In groceries and other markets a similar pause has been noticed in the wave of advances and it may be that the attitude of the people in their demands for government intervention may be responsible for the temporary cessation of climbing costs.

CHEESE YEAR ENDED.

The cheese season at any rate, has ended well, after having gone on record as one of the best in recent years. The make has been much larger than usual, and good prices have been realized.

With the boardings totalling close to 700,000 cheese, the whole make is not nearly represented as a very large part of Ontario's make never sees the boards but is sold by private sale. However, and it is our only excuse for publishing the total, the figures given indicate in a small way the extent of the make.

NON-FERTILE EGGS

This week a 7c advance in the finest eggs is quoted at Toronto by Gunns, says The Sun, who quote 62c per dozen for guaranteed non-fertile fresh eggs; fresh eggs, free cases, are steady at 38c per dozen. Returnable cases are 1c below the free case quotations. Storage eggs are still selling in Toronto at 32c per dozen.

The wisdom of the man who produces the guaranteed and non-fertile eggs is especially apparent at this time, when he gets 25c a dozen more than the man who sells merely 'fresh' eggs in the old style cases. To kill the roosters and market the eggs as quickly as possible is worth while, when it saves 25c on a dozen of eggs. Of course no average person can ship his eggs every day—or even perhaps once a week at this season, but co-operation will make it possible.

These special eggs by the time they get in the hands of the consumers, cost a pretty penny. Last Thursday a Toronto butcher had the nerve to ask 80c for eggs he guaranteed to have been laid on the previous Monday. It happened also that they were from Gunns. Incidentally, from experience the writer can testify that the butcher in question has a habit of "soaking" his customers.

FLOUR PRICES.

Manitoba flour, first patents, in jute bags, $9.00; seconds in jute bags, $8.40; strong bakers, in jute bags, $8.20, Toronto; Ontario flour new, according to sample, $7.40 to $7.50, in jute bags.

After having risen 30c last week in the face of a falling wheat market, Manitoba flour is 60c lower this week, or 30c below the previous week, when the prices began to decline. Ontario flour is now 50c below last week's price, or 80c in two weeks.

COAL FOR ALLIES ONLY

Washington, Dec. 7.—Great Britain has given notice that because of the scarcity of tonnage and coal the Government cannot longer guarantee coaling facilities at British ports to other than British and allied ships and to neutral owners "who have undertaken to utilize their vessels in such a way that British or allied interests are benefited."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

7970

A very good looking apron of the character of the morning dress is shown in this illustration. There is ample fulness all over, yet a neat and fitted effect is noticeable.

The body and skirt sections are joined to a straight belt of material in opposing color. This is used to bring in style note, because in all garments the combination idea continues supreme. The long V neck is banded to correspond in color with the belt, and the sleeve edge is similary favored. A pocket in the right side of the skirt is trimmed to match and the closing is at the back.

If you want such garment for use that will make trips to the laundry necessary frequently you will choose linen, gingham, percale, seersucker, gaiatea or a like durable fabric. Most women like to make these garments at home, not alone because it is economical to do so but there is such a wide range of materials and such pretty colorings that one may have just what she wants in design, material and color, and the garment will not be "ordinary," as is the ready made.

The apron pattern, No. 7,070 is cut in sizes 36 to 44 bust. To make in size 36 will require 3½ yards 36 inch material and 2⅝ yards banding.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

COLONEL SHOT MASCOT

Dog Was Victim Because of Love of Rabbits

At Bedford County Court Colonel Joseph Sunderland, a justice of the peace for the division there, was fined $10 and $2.00 costs for assaulting Private Arthur Horne, attached to a regiment which was manoeuvring over the defendant's land. Private Horne said that on the fatal day he had in his arms a terrier—the regimental mascot—weighing 13 pounds, which Colonel Sunderland, coming into the field, ordered him to put down, saying that it had been after his rabbits. When he refused to do so, the colonel, who was carrying a gun cocked, attempted to throw him. Finally he put the dog down and the colonel fired at it, killing it instantly.

Matches Among Explosives

For carrying a box of matches in his cap in a shed containing ammunition, Walter Shepherd, aged twenty, was fined $20 at Woolwich Police Court.

In six weeks "Barry," a Tunbridge Wells bulldog, collected enough money to support a bed in Kingswood V.A.D. Hospital.

Second Battalion Straightened Line

Pringle, a platoon commander of No. 3 Company, dashed forward. Running through an inferno of bombs and bullets, he made straight for the gun.

"His body was found later lying across the muzzle of the gun, with the crew, dead, all around it. On the right all went well; No. 3 Company advanced steadily over the open. In front of the Boche parapet Major Chrysler and Lieut. Hetherington received the wounds which put them out of action; but the company charged brilliantly into the enemy trench and proceeded to bomb toward the centre and right.

The Enemy Wavers.

"This success assisted matters materially. Attacked from the flank and with their line of riflemen thinned out, the enemy wavered. Leading his men in the attack, Major Williams was mortally wounded, but Lieut. Lyle, taking charge of No. 6 Company, gathered his men and rushed forward. The fire was still intense. Major A. E. McLaughlin and Lieut. Bishop, while directing the fire of No. 1 Company, received the wounds which were to prove fatal.

"Ten yards from the enemy parapet Lieut. Stuart was killed, but the company, led by Major L. T. McLaughlin, recommenced the advance, and the whole line swept forward.

Heroic Non-Com., Corp. Clarke.

"On the left flank of No. 1 Company a section of battalion bombers entered the German trench and immediately started to bomb out the enemy, who were in great strength. Corporal Clarke, assisted by two throwers, essayed the difficult task of 'mopping up' the thickly-clustered Boches, who offered a determined resistance. To the credit of this heroic non-commissioned officer was placed eighteen Germans, including two officers. Three times he recharged his automatic pistol before the last enemy was down.

No. 1 Company was now in the trench, driving the enemy to the left; Corporal Clarke and his bombers were cutting off the Huns' retreat and pushing them back. Caught between two determined lines of grim, fighting Canadians, the German struggled for his life, but bayonets and bombs vanquished him.

Germans Vainly Seek Flight.

"The Germans clambered over their parados and fled headlong across the open. The opportunity was not lost. The Lewis guns were brought up into action, and the fleeing numbers of them were caught by our barrage; others stopped uncertainly, then with hands up ran quickly back to their lost trench.

"Fifteen minutes from zero time, Major Vanderwater, the officer in charge of the attack, was able to send to his commanding officer the report that the objective was gained and the work of consolidating being proceeded with.

Counter-attack Withstood.

"The objective was gained, the trench taken and the parapet reversed but the victory was only half won. The enemy's shelling and counter-attacks had to be awaited, and they were not long in coming.

"Throughout the long night he attacked continuously, and his special objective was the left flank. The bombing post was wiped out several times, and German snipers, crawling into shell holes, were able, in the bright moonlight, to account for several of our sentries. The work of consolidating the left was interrupted continually, the men alternately using their rifles to ward off attacks, and spades to dig in. Early in the morning the left was joined up with the battalion on that flank, and the victory made good.

"It was a minor operation. No one who took part in it exaggerate its purely local character, but in view of subsequent events it was one of the most important events that had taken place on that front or in France.

"It is not too much to say that the success of the great advance made by the British and Canadians on the 14th and 15th September owed a great deal to the action of the 2nd Canadians, and perhaps it was on this account—who knows?—that the generous praise was directed upon the battalion that had carried the attack to such a successful end."

MURDERER FOUGHT POLICE.

Philadelphia, Dec. 7.—Besieged by fifty policemen in a third-storey room where he had barricaded himself after murdering a woman with whom he had been infatuated and seriously wounding two policemen who tried to arrest him, Charles Westcott, a negro, held the attacking force at bay for two hours and finally committed suicide by shooting himself. Hundreds of shots were fired by the negro and the police before Westcott brought the battle to a close by ending his life.

The fire brigade had been called to the assistance of the police and an attempt was made to fill the room with ammonia fumes when the negro killed himself. Thousands of spectators attracted by the shots filled the small uptown street in which the battle occurred.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness and general decay of gue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Albany, Dec. 7.—Governor Whitman has commuted the death sentence of Charles Frederick Stielow to imprisonment for life. Stielow was convicted of the murder of Chas D. Phelps, a wealthy Orleans farmer, and Margaret Wolcott, his housekeeper, at West Selby, N. Y., on March 21, 1915.

After the sentence a man named King made an "alleged" confession seeking to take the responsibility for the deed. Governor Whitman still believes that Stielow is guilty, and that King is a liar, but gave the condemned man the benefit of the faint shadow of doubt which existed, and saved him from the electric chair.

MOTHER LOVE AIDS SON IN TRENCHES

It Brings Relief to Boy Standing His Watch Deep in Mud

Once upon a time, only a few months after this terrible world war had begun, Private Bailey, a soldier in the ranks had stood for days in the trenches "somewhere in France." The cold rain soaked him to the skin; the mud was deep. He had had no rest. Weary and aching from rheumatic pains, he recalled the faith his mother had in Sloan's Liniment. He asked for it in his next letter home. A large bottle was immediately sent him and a few applications killed the pain, once more he was able to stand the severe exposure. He shared this wonderful muscle-soother with his comrades, and they all agreed it was the greatest "reinforcement" that had ever come to their rescue. Royalist Troops Have Thrown Athens Into a State of Terror---Venizelo's Supporters Driven From Their Homes and Tortured in the Streets ---Greek Red Cross Nurses Assaulted---Homes of Prominent Men Who Criticized the King's Policy Have Been Looted.

ROUMANIAN ARMY IS STILL INTACT

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

A New York Herald cable from Athens says: Encouraged and applauded by Princess Ypsilanti and other women Royalists, the regular troops have thrown Athens into a state of terror. In an effort to strike fear into the hearts of sympathizers of Venizelos, elderly men are being driven from their homes and tortured as they are marched through the thoroughfares. Two Greek Red Cross nurses were locked up in a filthy laterine and assaulted by their guards. The homes of prominent men known to have openly criticized the King's policy, have been looted.

On orders from a General high in the King's favour, Venizelist prisoners have been led through the streets in couples to be shot.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—A blockade of Greece as a measure of reprisal for the riots in Athens, in which French marines were fired upon, will be officially announced soon

Asquith Cabinet Lacked Firmness and Initiative

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ROME, Dec. 7.—The Asquith Cabinet lacked firmness, decision and initiative, declared an editorial in to-day's Giernale D'Italia. "It was indirectly responsible for the Greek muddle and the Roumanian disaster. It is to be hoped that the Ministry which succeeds it will be politically and militarily stronger."

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The success of a French surprise attack east of Metzeral was announced in to-day's official statement. The French forces captured a number of prisoners.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The Roumanians evacuated Bucharest in good order, saving their army, it was authoritatively stated here to-day. The Roumanian rearguard was forced to fight strenuously to cover the retreat.

Oil and Machinery Destroyed By Roumanians

Special to Examiner

LONDON, Dec. 7.—General Maurice, British Director of Operations, says that Bucharest and Ploesci were evacuated by the Allies to shorten the line in Wallachia. But he declared that oil and machinery were destroyed by the Roumanians before the Germans arrived. Most of the grain was also removed into Russia. The retirement was due mostly to unorganized railway facilities connecting with Russia.

The Mail asks whether the wheat reported captured by the Germans is that for which England paid fifty million dollars. All newspapers agree that the German advances in the Balkans will serve to lengthen the war.

Paris despatches said the newspapers in the French capital were equally frank in admitting that the moral of the Roumanian campaign is the necessity for a greater speeding up of action by the Allies.—

It was generally accepted, both in London and in Paris, that the Roumanian army has made good its retreat and safely escaped the clutches of the Germans.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The Anglo-French loan sold at 93 1-4 on the Stock Exchange to-day, establishing a new loan mark.

Labour Party Will Be Well Represented

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Central News declares that Lloyd George has offered the Labour Party two Cabinet places, one member of the War Council and three under-secretaryships. It was officially stated this afternoon that the Labour Party will support Lloyd George's Government.

The outstanding feature of the Cabinet crisis to-day is the acceptance by the Labour Party of Lloyd George's Cabinet proposals and the pledging of the Labour Party support to his administration. Labourites are particularly anxious to bring the war to an early conclusion with victory and honourable peace for Britain.

Vessels were advised to avoid all trade routes and converging points. "German submarines may be met anywhere in the Atlantic, especially west of sixty degrees west. Keep good lookouts. Show no unnecessary light," the wirless warning said.

Successful Red Cross Meeting At Lang Last Night

In aid of the Red Cross a very successful supper and concert was held last night in the public hall at Lang, Otonabee. The ladies had prepared an excellent luncheon which was served in the basement. This was but another of the numerous activities the ladies of that vicinity have occupied themselves with for the benefit of patriotic movements. The concert was held in the hall upstairs with Mr. Samuel Armstrong as chairman. He enlivened the numbers by his witty introductions and altogether proved quite a happy director. In addition to the music and other numbers addresses were delivered by Mrs. Mr. McKechnie of Keene, and Mr. F. D. Kerr and Lieut. Quinn of Peterborough. The young subaltern aroused great enthusiasm in his recital of his experiences at the front with the 2nd Battalion. The hall was literally packed to the doors and it was expected that a considerable sum would be realized for Red Cross work

Altogether, the 247th took on eleven recruits in Peterborough for the first three days of the week, which is the best showing in local recruiting since last spring.

For the accomodation of many local people who wish to send money to their soldier friends in France, and who have found that the boys had difficulty in getting money orders cashed near the firing line, Mr. W. H. Dunsford, manager of the Bank of Commerce, has made arrangements to secure a supply of French five-franc notes which he expects here in a day or two. These are equivalent to 15 cents in Canadian money, and the recipient of course has no worry about cashing them.

Private F. R. Little of the 93rd Battalion now with the Signalling Section of the 90th Battalion, France, writing to his mother, Mrs. Jas. Little, R. R. No. 5 Peterborough says: "I have been away from the Battalion taking a four-day course on pidgeons. The weather is turning a little cold. I have been lucky so far, but you cannot tell any minute what is going to happen. I got a parcel from mother the other day and the cake was broken a little. Tin boxes are the best thing to send anything in and small parcels as that of about 2 to 3 pounds and only stuff you can eat."

KINGSTON, Dec. 6.—A business man's recruiting committee has been formed in this city, whose object is to make a complete list of single men in the city and vicinity. These men will be waited upon by some member of the recruiting committee, who will investigate each case and obtain the cause of non-enlistment. This will follow along the lines of the National Service Scheme recently launched.

It is felt that in many cases the obstacles which have prevented men from offering themselves up to this date have been or are being removed, and that as soon as possible these eligible men will come forward themselves or send their own name and signify their intention to join up to the secretary. Business Man's Recruiting Committee, and thereby save the committee a great deal of time and work.

The committee are working for general recruiting, no special corps being in view, as the scheme is to get as many men in khaki as speedily as possible. Naturally local battalions will have a preference, as it is the wish of all to have as many men stationed here this winter as possible.

Pte. J. Black a Peterborough boy who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and is now at the front with the 5th C.M.R. sends the following verses to the Examiner:

A LITTLE BIT

I've just came out of the trenches.
Where we made the Germans dance.
And I'm writing now to let you know,
I'm still "Somewhere in France",
Alive and fit, as fit can be.
Though fightings' not all sport,
And manners "made in Germany"
Ain't quite what kids are taught.
At home but that's not what I want,
Just now in this to say.
But rather that I hope you all,
Are going strong to-day.
And if yours truly doesn't write,
Don't get into a stew;
For though his job out here's to fight,
He's time to think of you.

The story of the gallant work of the 2nd Canadian Battalion on the Somme front, as published on the first page of to-day's Examiner, is of special interest on account of the number of Peterborough men with the 2nd and also because four officers of the famous battalion are now with the 247th. In fact one of them, Lieut Hetherington is prominently mentioned in the interesting story, which tells how he was wounded almost at the German parapet.

Lt. Col. E. M. Dennistoun, of Winnipeg, formerly of Peterbrough, has been appointed chief compensation officer in connection with the new Canadian training brigade at Brighton, Eng.

Among the doctors who graduated from Toronto University recently, and who have immediately enlisted for overseas service, was Ray Scott, son of Dr. Scott, of Peterborough.

PLOECHTI ALSO TAKEN BY TEUTON ARMIES

Bucharest Occupied and Important Railway Centre North of the Roumania Capital Falls Into the Hands of the Huns—More Important Than Bucharest Itself

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE FAILED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Bucharest, the capital of Roumania, is in the hands of the forces of the Central Powers.

Exactly one hundred days after the declaration of war by Roumania against them finds the Teutonic Allies in control of about 50,000 square miles of Roumanian territory—virtually one-half of the kingdom—running from the Transylvania Alps north-west of the capital to the Danube south of it, and a large part of Dodrudja, and probably still on the heels of the retreating Russians and Roumanian armies, which have been endeavoring to hold them back.

The news of the fall of Bucharest was announced in the German official communication to-night. The fact has not been confirmed from other sources, but the position revealed by the previous German and Russian communiques left little hope that the Roumanian capital could be saved.

No official Roumanian statements have been received in London since Sunday, but the Russian official reports recorded the steady retirement of the Roumanians before the victorious enemy forces. The rapidity of the advance of the Central Powers seems to show that no attempt was made to defend the capital, and the actions fought have probably been only of a delaying nature

PLOECHTI ALSO TAKEN.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the fall of Bucharest came the news of the capture of the important railroad junction of Ploechti, north of the capital, the conquest of which places in the hands of the invaders the last railroad in the west and gives to them the head of the line running northward to Jassy, where the capital of Roumania is now situated

The fall of Ploechti, perhaps, is of even greater importance than that of Bucharest. Ploechti is the centre of the great oil districts of Prahova Valley. Unless the Roumanians have been able to destroy or disable the oil wells, machinery and stores of oil the Germans will get a much-needed prize. Moreover, in the Prahova valley they are on the line of retreat of a portion of the Roumanian second army.

No details have as yet come through concerning the climax to the drive of the armies of General von Falkenhayn and Field Marshal von Mackensen, or whether the Roumanians and Russians succeeded entirely in making their escape behind the Bucharest line. But it is believed here that King Ferdinand's armies are practically intact.

It is thought that the Roumanians will be compelled to retire until they can secure a shorter line btween the Carpathians and the lower Danube, which will be within easier reach of Russian reinforcements.

With the fall of Bucharest the Teutonic Allies are now in possession of four capitals of Entente allied States, the others being Brussels Belgrade and Cettinje

In the north-west in the Carpathian region near the Bukowina frontier and along the Moldavia front, the Russian offensive begun as a diversion against the Teutonic advance into Roumania, apparently is meeting with little success, In the Carpathians west of Jablonitza the Russians occupied a height, but later were shelled off the position by the Germans. To the south they succeeded in penetrating to the second line of the German

Pte. H. C. Rumary, 93rd Man Who Was Wounded in Recent Fighting on the Somme Says He Has Not Done Bit Yet

MORE MEN ARE NEEDED

Mrs. H. G. Rumary 87 Smith street has received the following letter from her husband; Pte. H. G. Rumary formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who was wounded a short time ago

No 2 Ward, Queen Mary's Hospital

Lancashire, England.

My Dearest Wife.—Just these few lines to let you know that I am well away from the war now, and I am not sorry, for it makes one tired dodging the shells and whizzbangs. Well dear we had a good trip across, I was carried about all the way. I thought I was back to childhood days again; a nice little cot to sleep in, just like a baby's, and a nice bed on the train I felt like a lord, nothing to do but lie and smoke; it is a great life even a lady to bring you chocoalites and bovril and biscuits. We were treated fine from the time we are wounded We are taken the greatest care of and every one is willing to do something for you. It is a great experience and the adventures one has to go through I would not have missed it for anything. I have got a book of postcards of the place. I was in, it is called Albert on the Somme front. We were getting a hot old time and I was the only one that came out wounded in the battalion that day, all the others were killed so I am sure it was your prayers and little Trixies that helped me through, and I thank God he spared me my life this time. I have got the piece of shell that came out of my head and I will send it to you for I know you will like it for a souvenir. Well dear I should just love to be back with you, but I have not done my bit yet and I should like to get rid of a few more Germans or devils before I quit. They are a lot of cowards and they do not get much mercy from us. You must not think I did not take care of myself. I had just come off sentry and dug a hole in the ground for myself, the first one I dug was blown in on me and I got out of that all right and I had another try in my spare time. I was taking messages down the trenches and I had a few narrow escapes. I had the bottom of my mess can knocked out and I did not know it until I was going to make some tea, I said to my mate, "we will have some tea, as Fritze is sending us over plenty of iron rations" and when I looked the bottom was out and I did not think I had been touched, as I fell flat on my face to dodge the flying shell, the same shell knocked my mate over by my side, two hours after I was hit in the head and the Devils were sending over their gas, so we were getting it all ways. Well dear you are not to worry over me although I feel as though you are. I have not had any mail yet and it is a long while since September 19th when I got the last one I am about 300 miles away from my people but will soon be removed to Epsom, where I shall only be seven miles away from them. Well dear I must close now, remember me to all at home. Tell Trixie and Rosemary that their Dad won't be long before he is back, better kiss them for me now. I must say Goodnight, from your loving husband

P. S.—Tell the boys to hurry up and get the English pluck into them and put the khaki on and make men of themselves, every man is needed to save the necks of there mothers fathers, wives and children

BRAVO PREMIER HEARST.

Premier Hearst, head of the Ontario government, is to be commended upon the possession of a backbone in the matter of the Prohibition Act. He told a deputation of the "labour" interests that he would not be candid if he did not tell them that there was no hope that the act would be amended to permit of the issue of wine and beer licenses. This was urged upon the government in view of the large number put out of employment by the application of the banish the bar act. There is more logic in Premier Hearst's refusal to mutilate the temperance act than in the plea that the abolition of strong drink lessens the employment of those formerly connected with the traffic. Set against this childish claim the fact that with the open bar and free access to strong drink, thousands of workmen and their families were virtually out of employment in that their wages were spent on what injured their industrial capacity, and on what robbed their families of the fruits of employment; and became, in effect, the worst kind of unemployment. We have seen, and are seeing too good results from the application of the temperance act to tolerate anything that would impair its abundantly demonstrated usefulness. The benefit is has been to workmen and, especially, their families, and to the solid interests of the community are too great to be lost. The tendency of public opinion and sentiment is towards making the temperance act tighter—stopping the legislative leaks that permit access of the thirsty to strong drink by side doors. The cooperation of the Dominion government should be invoked in an effort to neutralise or minimize the influence of the distillers and brewers in defeating the object of the Temperance Act. This object is to give the people of the province the benefits of total prohibition of the liquor traffic. Where there is one tenable plea, however specious, for the existence of the traffic, there are ten thousand reasons against its existence or its underground operation after its legalised status has been removed.

SLANDEROUS METHODS.

The Toronto Telegram, in special pleading against a war-time election, is intimidated by the fear that—

"A war-time election would hand the country over to Laurierism, to its anti-recruiting supporters in Quebec."

"Here's rishness," to quote Mr. Squeers. The anti-recruiting element in Quebec is not a hypothetical affair, as it is vainly imagined, under Laurier. It is a fact, and has official endorsement. The Borden cabinet has in it, and has just since it was organized in November, 1911, three or four members, not only, opposed to recruiting, but out and out anti-British, anti-imperial and anti-everything else but the pay cheque, possibly the great first, now with office held on such ground, and the cult of Bourassa Nationalism they represent in a cabinet in a British dominion. It is sheer impudence for the organs and apologists of the Borden government to intimate that Sir Wilfrid Laurier in office would mean anything, even remotely, approximating the conditions that obtain under the present government's official championship of Nationalism.

Everybody knows that there is nothing in common with Nationalism and Laurier. Mr. Bourassa, its prophet, says Sir Wilfrid Laurier is "the most pestiferous man in Canada. The government party has employed Nationalism for years to kill Laurier. When Nationalism first sought to foist a representative of its traitorous doctrines upon Parliament, the present government party, then the Conservative Opposition, helped his election, gave him its moral and material support; and in the shipbuilding of 1911, in order to elect "him Laurier" in Quebec, the election expenses of Nationalist, anti-British, pro-Kaiser Nationalist candidates were fathered out of the Conservative election fund. Nationalism opposed Laurier because he was "too British." It is, then, pure political trap-trap, as well as straight falsehood to assert that if Sir Wilfrid Laurier came into power, the anti-recruiting element, which the Borden government has officially fostered from the beginning, and fosters at the present, would compete with the government's specialty in this regard. It is perhaps superfluous to mention these things which everybody that thinks knows, but when the disloyal policy of discrediting the loyalty of Liberals and the Liberal leader are persisted in, a reminder of where the real disloyalty lies—in a wing of the Conservative party—is not amiss. It is not necessary to defend the loyalty of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Canada and to the Empire, or to the cause of this war. He has made many recruiting speeches and now at 75 years of age, he has planned a recruiting campaign for Quebec, to try to antidote the poison of Nationalism which has, thanks in chief part to government protection and encouragement, operated to kill the recruiting spirit in the sister province.

This is no time to bring up the question of the relative loyalty of Canadians. The rank and file of both parties are working heart and soul for the cause of the Empire in this war, and the leaders of both parties are united in sentiment and action. It is only the loyalty and party morality of the perpetrators of the crime of venomous slander that is to be questioned.

SAVING FUEL.

With the high and advancing cost of fuel, both wood and coal, there is need for lowering their cost, by increasing the work they are called upon to do. In winter the problem in our home is to keep out the cold, that is to keep in the heat. Too many of our houses are built without having this object in view in the erection of inclosing walls, and in these cases especially, expedients to close avenues of loss of heat and in exchange admission of cold, are urgently called for. This can be largely effected by the use of storm doors and windows, commonly known as double windows and double doors. Heat is lost in two ways; by radiation through the thickness of the walls or by leakage through openings around doors and windows. The loss of heat through windows is double or caused in two ways—direct radiation through the window or by the admission of cold air from the outside, through ill-fitting sash. The loss of heat from or through single windows is two and a half times greater than the escape of heat through a wall. A square foot of window surface radiates—loses to the room—as much heat as 2 1-2 square feet of a nine-inch brick wall surface. Storm windows reduce this loss by easily one half, as scientific thermotists assert. he logic of the double window is simple. A layer of dead air is created; and air is one of the greatest non-conductors of heat. The air spaces in the more open texture of wool fabrics explain why wool goods are warmer than other stuffs; why a woollen blanket feels warmer to the body in a bed than in linen or cotton blanket—the woolen blanket is a poor conductor of heat and does not so rapidly transmit heat from the body—produce the sensation of cold; for cold is merely the absence of heat. The dead air space formed by double doors and double windows prevents loss of heat and gives greater comfort from a smaller consumption of fuel, a matter of very great importance at the present level of fuel prices. The cost of double windows is saved many times over in the saving of fuel in the course of a hard winter. In this severe climate, a house without a roof—that is, if we are should be considered as incomplete without storm doors or windows as a house without a roof—that is, we are to have reasonable comfort with economical use of fuel.

EVADING THE NICKEL ISSUE.

From the howls of delight now going up from the party papers over the cable of Mr. Bonar Law on the nickel question, it would be imagined that the cable is a complete answer to the charges which have been made regarding the ultimate destination of Canadian nickel. As a matter of fact it is nothing of the kind. The charges, emphatically and specifically made, are that the Deutschland has been carrying Canadian nickel from the continent to Germany, to aid Germany in the war against the Allies. This charge the Government have not answered. Efforts of various kinds have been advanced. It has been variously suggested that the nickel on the Deutschland was mined in the United States that it has been obtained by purchasing nickel articles and melting them down; and that it came from the French mines in Caledonia. And now a cable from Mr. Bonar Law, saying that the British Government had approved the arrangements made by the Borden Government for exporting refined nickel "to American plants," is put forth as a complete answer to the charges. In order that we may properly appreciate Mr. Bonar Law's cable it is necessary that Sir Robert Borden should publish his cable to Mr Bonar Law asking for such an expression. Meanwhile what Canadians are objecting to is not that a supply of Canadian nickel shall be forwarded "to American plants" making munitions for the Allies, but that Canadian nickel should be finding its way to the Deutschland for export to Germany.—Montreal Herald.

Recent German Activity An Exhibition of Heroics To Get Better Peace Terms

During the past few weeks we have been witnessing a feverish outburst of German activity in all directions. The most marked of these is the Rumanian campaign, which has been carried out with a burst of energy, speed and a recklessness in the use of men and materials that has frankly surprised the world. Then we have had ill-fated but desperately-earnest Zeppelin attacks on England, a renewal of the ruthless submarine campaign; the sending of submarines to this side of the Atlantic, and the destroyer attack on the British Channel service. What is the meaning of all this? Is it all based on sound strategy and incontestable strength, or is it an exhibition of heroics?

Mr. Edmund Dane, in an interesting article on this subject in the London Chronicle, seeks to prove by an analysis of the situation, that it is an exhibition of heroics resigned for the express purpose of attempting to wind up the war on more or less favorable terms. He claims that the Germans are already on the ragged edge of collapse, through an enormous wastage in man-power and through the failing morale of the people. The impressment of Poles and Belgians into work in Germany, and the employment of prisoners of war, indicates how serious is the drain on Germany's manhood. He makes an exhaustive analysis of Germany's army, and he arrives at the conclusion that of the total of 9,600,000 Germans claimed to be capable of bearing arms Germany actually has at her disposal only 4,292,000; in other words, that the total of Germany's casualties and wastage to date is 5,308,000. "It looks very high," he says, "and it is—too high. But it is too high not because the enemy troops in the field are more than has been here indicated but because the round totals of men embodiable have all through been weighted in favour of the enemy. If lists which are both behindhand and unreliable, especially as regards wastage from sickness and hardship, the enemy has admitted losses amounting to over three and a half millions. Almost certainly the concealment forms the larger element of it, and considering at once the pace of the war and the character of the German campaign, unlike any before known for extravagant disregard of casualties and wastage, an estimate which would put the losses at between four and a half and four and three-quarters millions, is known to be nearest the mark." He holds that the following are collateral indications supporting this conclusion:

(1) The U-boat activity. The relations of this to the land campaign is important. The Germans converted their armies in effect into garrisons, holding what were thought to be continuous impregnable fronts in the hope of making Germany artificially as secure as an island, and they did this in order to be able, being thus secure, to fight Britain into submission, and so recover their overseas communications, which are vital to them.

(2) The fact that Germany has now to support nearly the whole weight of the war. This with the drain it involves, has made her more than ever anxious to wind up the war on something like her own terms. And that is the real explanation of the apparent "heroics."

(3) As part of these heroics, and of the hope of a quicker wind-up the attack on Rumania. Failure here will be a crippling disaster, but in spite of the manifest military risks the attack had to be entered on because the mastery of Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey is at stake.

(4) The change in the enemy's defensive, brought about by the Allies' offensive in Russia and France. That attack has shown the notion of continuous impregnable fronts to be a military chimera. Germany has to hurry on before the fronts break. At the present rate of wastage, and with present demands, the breaking point can, in the matter of time, be calculated pretty closely. While striving to wind up the war by their U-boat attacks, their onset against Rumania, and their exhibitions of heroics, the Germans are striving concurrently to put off the break by concentrating their defence on selected points d'appui.

This is certainly a very sensible analysis of the situation, and it is one which we ought to bear in mind in the period through which we are passing. We must never lose our sense of perspective; never forget that while the enemy is still capable of local successes he is being beaten to his knees in the war as a whole. These local successes are after all but incidents in a tremendous drama, and they should but serve to increase our energies to make sure of the victory already in view.—Montreal Herald.

GLAD TO SACRIFICE ALL FOR ENGLAND

Observer at the Front Says Even the Roughest Die Like Bayards.

Bear Mortal Wounds with Sublime Resignation and Send Messages of Comfort Home.

S. H. Rvlett, an English writer, recently visited the Somme battle-front and on his return to England he wrote an article which he entitled, "Going West," the expression used in the allied armies in referring to officers and men who give their lives in battle. The article was turned over to the Official Press Bureau in London.

"On my return from France," writes Mr. Rvlett, "one of the first questions put to me was: 'What impressed you most in the firing line?' This is the hackneyed kind of question which is often put to people who have enjoyed unusual experiences, and is generally very hard to answer. But in this case I found no difficulty in replying, for without question the most impressive feature is the sublime manner in which men leave this world, or to use the beautiful colloquialism of the trenches, 'Go West.' I am at the moment particularly referring to those who, not having been killed instantly, are conscious that their wounds are mortal, and often have to travel the last short stage of their earthly journey in pain, even in agony.

"All enjoy, consciously or unconsciously, the sweets of self-sacrifice in a noble cause. Such self-sacrifice is always ennobling, and a source of wonderful strength. I have seen swaggering, cursing, rough men, falling mortally wounded, become metamorphosed during their last moments into beings from whom all former marks of coarseness have been wiped away, leaving nothing but the subtle expression which is the hall-mark of a healthy and pure manhood. Suddenly a revelation has come to them, just as their spirits hovered on the border line of the great unknown, which has washed all stains away, leaving their faces stamped with an expression of placid happiness that one associates in the living with a person who holds the faith and lives the true life.

"I do not wish to deduce anything from these facts, but the following remark of our regimental chaplain is interesting. We were discussing the question of redemption. He remarked: 'I am firmly convinced that however evil his past may have been a man redeems it by giving his life for his country's good. When he goes before the judgment seat of God his sacrifices for his country will outweigh the sins of his past in the scales of Divine Justice.'

"The wonderful spirit and attitude toward death which animate those fighting on our various fronts are finely reflected in an extract from a letter written by a fellow-officer. He wrote it over a year ago, and placed it in the hands of a friend, with instructions that it should be sent to his mother in the event of his being killed at the front. He was a schoolmaster of great scholarly distinction. To him, war was horrible in the extreme. Yet, in the firing line, he performed his duties with a dignity and courage which gained the admiration of all who knew him. He was killed at ——, where he showed conspicuous bravery. This extract has already appeared in print, but the further dissemination of its contents is justified by the happy expression of the inspiring ideas which the words contain:

"'Dear Mother: If I fall in this war I want you to remember that in offering for Imperial service I responded without hesitation to what was an obvious duty, well aware that the achievement of the task which the civilization of Europe has undertaken was worth my life among many thousands of others. My only prayer is to have the courage to play the man. Be confident that no spirit perished, and wait for a not distant reunion. Much remains for you to do here, and that is your part for the present.

"'Resolutely put aside grief. You cannot grieve nobly that I have done my duty, and selfish sorrow must be suppressed. Wear no mourning, but look the best you can in cheer and dress. Do not waste your life because I have lost mine. I have this very much at heart.

"'With deepest love I shall remain your affectionate son.'

"The spirit expressed in the above letter was exemplified in a remarkable manner by a Lance-Corporal in my regiment, whose 'Going West' was of such a nature that all who were with him in his last moments were filled with awe. He was shot on a beautiful summer's morning. We were in trenches not far distant from the heights of Notre Dame de Lorette, whose brown slopes were splashed here and there with acres of scarlet poppies. There was a strong breeze, and near at hand the graceful blue cornflower could be seen mingling with her more gaudy sister. I was going along the trench enjoying the quiet loveliness of the scene when a shot rang out. Not dreaming that one of our men had been hit, I proceeded leisurely on my way.

"Suddenly, on rounding a traverse, I came upon a group near a wounded man, who was supported by two comrades. This man was shaking the hand of an officer. I then saw him shake hands with a Sergeant. The next scene in the drama happened with lightning rapidity. He turned away from those around him, and hurried to the corner of a traverse, where he fell on his knees and folded his hands in prayer. A companion followed him and placed his arm round the shoulders of the wounded man. Suddenly, crying in a clear voice, 'Tell mother I died happy,' the brave fellow collapsed into the arms of his friend, and his heroic spirit passed. As I gazed at the body of this soldier, somebody told me that directly he was shot he had known that his time to 'Go West' had come, and had at once asked for his platoon commander and Sergeant so that he might say good-bye to them before his departure.

defences in the Trotus valley, but were held by the defenders from further advance. North of the Oituz pass and south-east of Kedzi Valsahely the Austro-Germans took positions from the Russians.

If the Roumanian situation is capable of early relief the only way it can be afforded is by the success of the Russian effort in the Trotus Valley to open up the way to Kronstadt.

The fall of Bucharest is, in itself, not serious when, as in this case, the nation involved forms a subsidiary field of operations. In any event, it is often the case that the importance is more from the political viewpoint than the military. That is the case here. And here, even the political character of the fall of Bucharest would be minimized by the fact that the conflagration is so general in character.

CONSERVATIVES TO CONTROL SENATE AFTER 15 YEARS

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—After a Liberal ascendancy in the Canadian Senate for upwards of fifteen years the political pendulum has swung the other way, and the Conservatives now have a prospective majority of one. They have not got it yet, but they will have it when thirteen vacancies now existing are filled.

The death Tuesday of Senator J. K. Kerr of Toronto, caused this thirteenth vacancy.

The party standing now is forty-three Liberals, thirty-one Conservatives, and thirteen vacancies. When appointments are made to the vacant seats the two sides will stand: Conservatives, forty-four; Liberals, forty-three. There are a few senators on the Liberal side whose attendance because of old age or of ill-health is very irregular.

It is fully anticipated that before or early in the session of Parliament the Government will fill the vacancies and there is no dearth of aspirants, including many members of Parliament. What operates against their claims is the desire not unduly to increase the vacancies in the House of Commons. Already they number seventeen.

There is some reason to expect that now that their party is to be in control of the Senate the Government may reintroduce certain Bills which were ejected in the days of the Liberal majority. The principal measures rejected, apart from the Navy Bill, were the Bill creating a tariff commission, and that providing for federal aid to highways. It is not known yet what if any rejected legislation will be reintroduced.

COST OF LIVING PROBE DELAYED WHILE CITY FATHERS ARE AT QUEBEC

MONTREAL, Dec. 7.—With practically the entire civil administration at Quebec and those members of the governing body who remain here are absolutely in the dark regarding what the Board of Control or the Council want to do with the problem of bringing about a reduction of the cost of living in Montreal. This matter is apparently no nearer a solution than it was six months ago. The Council has voted the necessary funds to finance the investigation of an, as yet, unappointed committee. Current conversation has it that Mr. Albert Cowan, of Montreal, has been appointed to organize a committee, when as a matter of fact, the records of the Board contain no mention of Mr. Cowan's appointment, while, the city clerk who is the official secretary of the Council, has not to-day, the slightest idea what he is to do regarding the resolution adopted by the aldermen that the cold storage and warehouse proprietors in Montreal be compelled to furnish the corporation with details of the food stored in their plants for the past four months, together with a table of comparative costs of different commodities this year, last year and the year before.

One thing is certain. That is, that not a move can be made to bring down the price of eggs, butter, milk or bread one cent until the Board of Control and the aldermen have returned from Quebec. And even the return of the administration will not ensure speedy action.

The City Clerk, Senator David, and Assistant City Clerk Bauset, who are the official recorders of the Council's deliberations state that they were quite aware of the resolution adopted by the Council, which approves the suggestion put forward at the Board of Control meeting and adopted by the controllers, that all the cold storage and warehouse men in Montreal should give certain information, the possession of which will help to inspire legislation which will effect a reduction in the ever mounting cost of living.

The city clerk and his staff are also aware that the aldermen on Monday last unanimously approved a report of the Board of Control recommending a credit of $1,500 to meet the expenses of the investigating committee to look into food prices. The Council also knows that certain suggestions were made to the Board at the instance of the Mayor by Mr. Albert Cowan, but the fact that Mr. Cowan was not officially appointed to undertake the inquiry free, and also the fact that the $1,500 was voted is leading city officials to-day to ask why the $1,500 was voted.

TEMPERANCE ACT WAS NOT INFRINGED

A charge of selling liquor in the province in contravention of the Ontario Temperance Act, which was laid against the Reinhardt Salvador Brewery Limited, was withdrawn in the Police Court yesterday. The charge was based upon the following facts: A dealer, named E. Dennis, trading in Montreal as the Montreal Bottling Co., purchased from the brewing company a quantity of beer, and gave instructions that it be held here subject to his order; a resident of Toronto sent to the Montreal Bottling Company an order for a keg of beer, the Montreal company then wrote to the Reinhardt Brewery giving instructions that the keg be delivered to the Toronto man through a local carter and its orders were carried out.

It was contended that there was no sale by the brewery to the Toronto purchaser, and that the transaction between the Toronto man and the Montreal dealer was a bona fide one, and as such was permissable under Section 130 of the Ontario Temperance Act. In this view the Crown concurred and the charge against the Reinhardt company was dropped.

This case differed in character from the recent local charge against the Calcutt Brewing Co., which pleaded guilty to delivery in this city from an order through a Peterborough agent.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have read in the City papers of the probability of certain persons aspiring the office of Mayor of Peterborough for 1917. Last January Mr. Duffus, amongst a field of three, was elected to the office, and during the year he performed the duties of his office to the satisfaction of the people. Is there any good reason why Mr. Duffus should not be accorded the office of Mayor for a second term, as has been the custom for many years where there was no justifiable reason for turning him down? All our Mayors have belonged to some church, and of what church is nobody's business. This is a free country, we are all Christians and we are all at liberty to select our own creed and none may make us afraid. We take our choice, and no one has a right to discipline us because we selected the church on this hill instead of the church on the other, or one of the many on the flat. To our shame there are too many churches, too many creeds.

Now let us do the decent thing and do with Mayor Duffus as we did with so many of our Mayors in the past. Give him a second term and don't let any one say that he was deserved the honour of a second term because of the charge he entered when he went to church over one common Lord.

D. W. DUMMER.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In the papers, last evening there were published letters from Mr. H. B. Rye and Mr. John Carlisle that require correction.

Mr. Rye stated that the Council "intended to buy, without the ratepayers' consent, 25 to 30 acres at about $70,000, using a small part of this for disposal plant, say about five acres," and hand the balance over to the Agricultural Society. The Council had not expressed an intention of taking the action Mr. Rye states they had.

The site selected for the sewage disposal works and approved of by the Provincial Board of Health, is on McKellar street, between Lock and Park streets. The Council and a number of residents of North Monaghan, opposed the use of this site, and, as you are aware, called a meeting, and later waited upon the City Council, and asked them to consider their objections. The City Council earnestly desires to live in a neighbourly way with the adjoining Townships and it appointed a committee to meet a committee from the Township to ascertain if, in any way, the objections could be met. These committees have had a number of meetings and one suggestion made by the Provincial Board of Health, as well as by others, was that more land should be taken in, in order to overcome objections from residents near the proposed site. The Council Committee stated they were quite ready to consider taking in more land, to ascertain what the expense would be, and after obtaining all the facts to consider whether the proposal was a feasible and an advisable one. That is how the matter stands to-day. I might add, however, that the prices so far obtained, if adhered to, would make the taking in of the land outlined to the committee prohibitive, and all the members of the Council are decidedly agreed upon that.

The Council is willing to take any reasonable action to meet any objection, although the Council is quite satisfied that there will be nothing objectionable in the disposal plant, but they do believe that it would not be unwise to go to a reasonable distance to avoid, not only litigation, but any bad feeling. However, what will be done depends upon what will satisfy the residents of the Township and the expense it would be to the city, for the Council cannot, of course, recommend a course of action that would be unreasonably expensive to the city. When the Council has come to a decision as to what should be done, the ratepayers of the city will, as a matter of course, be advised, and given all information.

Yours truly,
Jos. J. Duffus,
Mayor.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Please allow me to give your readers a few lines from the report of the last meeting of our City Council, with the members of the Monaghan Council, which report was printed in The Examiner of Dec. 1st, viz.: "City seemed willing to purchase enough ground for Exhibition Park if Township will expedite necessary preliminaries." . . . Apparently the city is prepared to unite with the Agricultural Exhibition directorate in securing sufficient ground for a public and exhibition park."

Now, Mr. Editor, we are living in times of stress and strain, especially the poor and I would like to say that this is not the time to be spending our people's money on parks or Exhibition grounds, more especially is it grievous when it is proposed to buy said park, etc., with money that has been specially set aside for sewer work.

Whether the city purposes to give this land either to rent, lease, or as a gift to the Exhibition directorate matters little; we don't want such extravagances now. I would just add that the Chairman of the Board of Works, Mr. A. McIntyre, has opposed this last move of the Council, and insists that this money should not be used as above recited, without the consent of the people.

Jno. Carlisle.

AFTER BUCHAREST RUSSIA IS LATEST PLAN OF GERMANS

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY AT PITESCI, Rumania, Dec. 4., via Berlin and London, Dec. 7.—Bucharest's fate has been decided.

To an observer of this German achievement in Rumania, the goal of the offensive in the present movement is not Bucharest alone. Germany's object is first to destroy the Rumanian army, and then to march toward Russia, with perhaps Odessa as the final goal.

All officers here believe that the present operations in Rumania are only the beginning of a gigantic operation by Field-Marshal von Hindenburg in the Eastern, instead of the Western theatre of war, designed to bring the decision in the war to this field.

The desperate efforts which Rumania is making to crush the German steam-roller offensive by striking towards the Danube can only delay Bucharest's occupation by the Teutons and result in further weakening of the Rumanian forces, officers declare.

The great part of the Rumanian army is wholly demoralized. The swift advance by Field-Marshal von Mackensen and Gen. von Falkenhayn cut Rumania into three parts.

To-day's operations are expected to sew up three holes, forcing the Rumanians either to defend Bucharest from the north—or evacuate their capital.

TREMENDOUS ARMY MOVING

To one who for the past ten days has followed the advancing German troops by automobile over 1,200 miles through Craiova, Alexandria, Slatina and Pitesci, Bucharest is not the sole object of the German offensive.

To such an observer Germany's object is destruction of as much of the Rumanian army as possible, preparatory to a march toward Russia—perhaps with Odessa as the final goal.

The German operations are moving forward here on a gigantic scale. For miles over Rumania's roads thousands of columns pass in a ceaseless moving picture. Beside these advancing columns are wagon trains of desperate-looking refugees and in the villages, packed with troops, are the Rumanian army prisoners.

The desparation of the Rumanian army staff in its efforts to mobilize all possible forces against the German advance was evidenced here today when a force of landsturm troops clad in civilian clothes and armed with hunting rifles was captured. Their ammunition was lead bullets fitting into sporting rifles.

I have visited two battlefields shortly after the fighting. The Rumanian losses in dead and wounded seem staggering, while even German regiments finished the battles with only seven to eighty-three killed. In the same battle the Rumanians lost from 500 to 700 dead and wounded per regiment, with an almost equal number of prisoners.

The momentum which the German offensive has already gained, with the strong forces en route cannot be halted by Rumania.

WM. GRAY M. P. SERIOUSLY ILL

Special to The Examiner:

Northwest Wind On Testing Day

To-day the first Thursday of the winter season is regarded by weather scouts as "gauge day". It is supposed to indicate the predominant character of the weather that shall be the fashion during the next three months. This morning, for example, it was observed that the wind was blowing from the northwest, hence it may be supposed that northwesterly winds will be most frequently mentioned in the winter weather bulletins. If the cold season is to blow in from the northwest and continue its progress from that direction it has chosen the coldest possible route of entry. A short one might conclude, if there is any ground for concluding anything that this winter will likely be a cold one; But the real Weather man, Dan Wheeling and he has not yet published out winter medicine.

Galloped Horse On Simcoe Stree

Stanley Black was dismissed with warning in Police Court this morning for a breach of the traffic bylaw. On Sunday he had galloped a horse at immoderate speed on Simcoe street, a sort of horseback stunt. Magistrate Drumble warned him that this was a breach of a local bylaw and told him to remember that fact in future.

Christmas Ideas in Handkerchiefs

Direct From Ireland

There probably isn't another adjunct of the well-dressed woman that is quite so important to the reflection of good taste, culture and refinement as a well chosen handkerchief. And keep in mind that the gift you make reflects your individual qualities, too. Nothing expresses a lack of refinement quicker than the display of course, unattractive "Kerchiefs."

For these reasons we were particularly careful in the selection of our splendid assortment of Irish Linen Handkerchiefs. From the plain pure linen varieties to the more showy affairs of lace and embroidery. You will find here just the quality and style you are thinking of, at a lower price than you expected to pay.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

A sermon for those who do not go to church.

St. John 11th Chap. 3rd Verse and 4th Verse.

He whom thou lovest is sick this is and I will deliver thee, God means sickness is not unto death.

When Lazarus felt sick his sisters sent this message to Jesus, they knew that they had a friend and sympathizer in Him, they knew that he had a heart to feel for them and assist them in their troubles, this is what we should do—Psalm 50, 15th Verse—Call upon me in the day of trouble and I will deliver the, God means what he says in his word, He is able and He is willing now there is nothing too great and there is nothing too small to bring to Him. In everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving make your requests known unto God in prayer, cast thy burden on the Lord, trust him with soul and body, they knew he loved them, He had loved them from all eternity, He drew them with a meeting love, with a pardoning love and had blotted out all their sins, so they sent him this message, "he whom thou lovest is sick". Learnn to plead with Christ for all we need, we often ask amiss, we do not receive because we do not ask aright we ask as if it was our right to receive and use for our own interests solely the blessing that God bestows upon us, we can only plead Christ's free love and say:

Chosen, but not for good in me,
Wakened up from wrath to flee;
Hidden in the Saviour's side,
By the Saviour sanctified.

The sisters send their message to Christ, they lay the object of their love at his feet and leave it there they do not say come and heal him come quickly Lord, they know his love they know his wisdom, they leave the case in his hands, they did not plead but let their misery plead for them, urgency in prayer does not consist so much in vehement pleading as in vehement believing. He that believes most the love and power of Jesus, will obtain most in prayer.

THE ANSWER.

A word of promise, "This sickness is not unto death, this was an immediate answer to prayer—he did not come he did not hear but he sent them a message of comfort and hope, to make them glad. This sickness is not unto death. Away sped the messenger crossed the Jordan and before sunset enters the village of Bethany, tired and weary, with anxious faces the sisters met the messenger saying, what news, good news. This sickness is not unto death's weak promise, the hearts of the sisters are comforted, and they tell their joy to the dying man, but he gets weaker and weaker and as they look through their tears at the pale face, their faith begins to waver; but Jesus said it—but the last Lazarus breathes, his last sigh, beside his weeping sisters, he is dead, and yet Jesus said "not unto death". The friends assemble to carry the body to the rocky sepulchre, and as the sisters turn away from the tomb their faith dies, their hearts sink within them, what could he mean by saying not unto death; the lesson we are to learn is to trust Christ's word, whatever sight may say, but behind this dark cloud, a ray of sunshine comes and we ask the question why was Lazarus sick and the answer comes. But for the glory of God that the Son of God might be glorified thereby—God's plan was that Christ might be made known, that his amazing love to his own might be made manifest, his sympathy for those he loved might be seen and his divine power showing him to be the Son of God. Christ was more glorified than if Lazarus had not been sick and died. So in all the sufferings of God's people the chief end is the glory of God and our good if we suffer with Him we shall reign with him. Paul had to suffer great things for Christs' sake and yet in the midst of all he could rejoice and say. I can do all things through Christ strengthening me, he would glory in his weakness that the power of Christ might rest on him—the triumphs of all great achievements have been purchased by sacrifice suffering and death, Christ laid down his life to save a world. In my next I will refer to this subject showing Jesus' love for this family—why his delay is coming, because He is God, and He was teaching the disciples a lesson in faith that the great end of all his dealings with his people might be seen, when trouble comes upon us we begin heart searchings and we hear the spirit saying thou shalt suffer for my sake as Jesus said to St. Paul, when we have peace under suffering it shows the power of Christ's blood. St. Paul could say I can do all things through Christ strengthening me; it gives peace in times of trouble, comforts and gives happiness in sickness, poverty, trial and death, so let us glorify God and we will see the fruits in graces that cannot be seen in the time of health. It is the breading of the grapes that brings out the sweet juices of the vine, so it is submission to the will of God that means us from the world and teaches us to rest in God.

Leave God to order all they ways,
And hope in him whate'er betide;
Thou'lt find him in the evil days,
Of all sufficient strength and guide,
Who trusts in God's unchanging love,
Builds on a rock which naught can move.

Yours sincerely,
JAMES SUTHERLAND

CLEVELAND STREET BATTLE.

Automobile Bandits Escape in Fusillade of Shots—Citizen Killed.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 5.—Auto bandits who have terrorized the city with their boldness fought a revolver battle in the street, in which E. B. Miller, a bystander, was killed. Three of the bandits entered the apartments of W. C. Richardson and looted the place, while two pals watched outside in the car. Richardson opened fire as the bandits left the apartment, and attracted the attention of two policemen, who jumped on the running board of the bandit car, but were shoved off. As the machine dashed through the downtown streets several policemen fired at the robbers, who returned the fusillade, and Miller, standing on the sidewalk, was killed.

Since the bandits have been at work a saloon, four stores and an apartment house have been held up in Cleveland and two men have been killed. Citizens demand that the police force be increased.

STOMACH MEDICINES ARE DANGEROUS

DOCTORS NOW ADVISE MAGNESIA

Just how dangerous it is to indiscriminately dose the stomach with drugs and medicines is often not realized until too late. It seems so simple to swallow a dose of some special mixture or take tablets of soda, pepsin, bismuth, etc., after meals, and the folly of this drugging is not apparent until, perhaps years afterward, when it is found that gastric ulcers have almost eaten their way through the stomach walls. Bagrecs are then unavailing; it is in the early stages when indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, flatulence, [illegible] excessive acidity of the stomach and fermentation of food contents that precaution should be taken. Drugs and medicines are unreliable and often dangerous—they have little or no influence upon the harmful acid, and that is why doctors are discarding them and advising sufferers from indigestion and stomach trouble to get rid of the dangerous acid and keep the food contents bland and sweet by taking a little pure bisurated magnesia instead. Bisurated Magnesia is an absolutely pure article which can be readily obtained from any drug store. It is absolutely harmless, is practically tasteless and a teaspoonful taken in a little warm or cold water after meals, will usually be found quite sufficient to instantly neutralize excessive acidity of the stomach and prevent all possibility of the food fermenting.

We are not in tents now. I am sleeping in a barn where there is lots of hay. It's got all the tents beat. We get very good food. It has been raining here nearly every day. Your parcels must have gone astray."

In a previous letter Private Gadoua inquires about parcels his mother had notified him of. Mrs. Gadoua says nine packages have not yet been received by her son.

WILLARD HAS ADVANTAGE

Taller and Heavier Than the French Champion.

New York, Dec. 7.—Carpentier, the French boxer, matched with Willard, has not engaged in a prize ring battle since July, 1914, but as the result of his army campaigning he is reported to be in splendid physical condition and ready to step into the ring after a short period of boxing practice.

The only possibility of a hitch in the arrangements is a demand on the part of Willard for a share of the purse out of proportion to the estimated gate receipts. If this develops it is Rickard's plan to match Carpentier with Les Darcy, the Australian middleweight champion, who is understood to be en route to this country.

Willard, should the pugilists meet, will outweight Carpentier by fifty to sixty pounds and will tower fully six inches above his French opponent. Notwithstanding these physical handicaps many boxing enthusiasts who have seen Carpentier in action abroad, have expressed a willingness to wager even money that he will win his bout with Willard.

If a man should learn to love another woman it is usually because his wife makes the lesson easy for him.

Dear Mary:

I am a day ahead with my letter, but I want to tell you about what is coming to-morrow.

I want you to do me a favor. It is nearly Christmas again and I must buy some presents. I want you to go over and see my sister Agnes and my husband's mother and find out what they would like best for their homes.

I know they would rather have furniture than anything else for a Christmas gift, but I want you to diplomatically learn just what they would like and let me know.

I'll return the favor. And then I want you to help me select. Will you?

Thanks in advance—HELEN

P. S.—If you will look in to-morrow's paper you will find a big list of furniture, at very specially reduced prices for Christmas selling at

A PRESENTATION TO MR. AND MRS. DRISCOLL

Otonabee Residents Will Reside in Peterborough

Friends and neighbours, numbering about seventy-five gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Driscoll on Friday night to make a presentation of two large leather chairs and a set of china dishes. Mr. and Mrs. Driscoll are moving to Peterborough and will reside on Euclid Avenue. The following address was read by David F. Thompson.

To Mr. and Mrs. Driscoll:

We, your friends and neighbours, meet with you to-night to bid you farewell as a neighbour and to try to show you in some measure how we have appreciated you.

People take kindness from their neighbours without a thought till the time of parting comes. You, Mr. and Mrs. Driscoll have endeared yourselves to us, young and old. Your hand was ever ready to help us, and we had come to depend upon your cheer and kindness to be with us in trouble.

We, your neighbours whom you have lived among all your lives, only realise at this late hour the good neighbour we are losing.

We have come to your old home this evening with regret that you are leaving us, but glad to think you will not be so far removed that we may not keep you as a friend, others may take your places, but none will fill them.

We ask you to accept our best wishes and our sincere hope that happiness may be yours in your new home, and as a remembrance this token which we feel is all too small to express our feelings toward you.

THE SPEECHES.

The presentation was made by Messrs. John Lancashire and D. Hayes. Speeches were then made by Messrs. Dave Rice, John Lancashire and William Rutherford in which regret was expressed of the removal of Mr. and Mrs. Driscoll who are held in high esteem by their friends in Otonabee. Mr. Driscoll acknowledged the kind words and gifts in a few remarks on behalf of Mrs. Driscoll and family.

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

JOFFRE TO BE SUPERSEDED?

French Political Writer Intimates That the Great General Has Been Worn Out.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The New York Times this morning publishes a special cable from Paris, based on a "French political writer who has exceptional inside knowledge of affairs" intimating the possibility of a change in the supreme command of the French military forces. In part, he says:

"After two years of war and after great battles, is not the revision of the supreme command necessary? There are men bred of their great efforts to whom advisory posts could be reserved in recognition of the great services rendered and there are others whose talent has been revealed who could be promoted to positions which need their energy and initiative.

MEN WEAR OUT

"At a time when once more the flower of French manhood is to be called to arms, regeneration is necessary, beginning at the top, whatever the civil or military situation of individuals who, by their age, vigor and capacities, are no longer up to the level of what the hour calls for. Here again, comparison between men and their armaments comes in. Big guns are very efficacious, but quickly wear out. France has had not only to renew her armaments, but to invent and create new ones. That is the task she is now engaged on.

CREATING NEW MATERIAL

"She is creating new human material, new brains, new energies. It is necessary to hurl at the enemy with increasing rapidity a new crushing weight of our resolution to conquer."

Crown Will Drop The Simpson Case

SINCE JULY DISAGREED, CONSPIRACY CHARGE WILL NOT BE PROSECUTED FURTHER.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 7.—The Crown's case against Lieut.-Col. R. M. Simpson, M.P., is to be dropped. R. A. Bonnar, K.C., chief Crown counsel announced yesterday afternoon as the result of the grand jury's report that they were unable to reach a decision on the case, no further action would be taken by the Crown.

Dr. Simpson was charged with conspiracy to defraud the Province in connection with the Parliament Buildings and with conspiracy to keep William Salt out of the Province where his evidence was wanted.

"According to law" said Mr. Bonnar, "there has been no return by the grand jury one way or the other. We are of the opinion that we should not take advantage of our strictly legal position, as we desire to be fair and have no desire to have any of our actions clothed with even an appearance of persecution. We had decided not to proceed further with the case."

This announcement followed a conference between Mr. Bonnar, associated counsel and Attorney-General Hudson.

Dr. Simpsonn was brought back from England several months ago to answer the charges. During the summer he held an appointment at Camp Hughes.

100 Drowned When Storm Sank Ship

Spanish Vessel Went Down Off the Canary Islands—Only 22 of Crew Saved.

MADRID, via Paris, Dec. 7.—One hundred members of the crew of the Spanish steamship Pio IX., from New Orleans for Barcelona, were drowned by the sinking of the vessel in a storm when 200 miles off the Canary Islands. Twenty-two members of the crew were saved.

The Pio IX., laden with cotton, carried no passengers. She was a steamer of 3,995 tons gross and was built at Sunderland in 1887. The steamship Buenos, which was in the vicinity, was able to give but slight assistance on account of the high sea.

Ships Torpedoed.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Spanish steamship Uribitarte 1,756 tons gross is reported to have been torpedoed. Her crew has been landed.

The British steamer Elswick Park which left Philadelphia Sept. 8th for Santos, has been posted at Lloyd's as missing.

FOUND LONG LOST CHILD

Mother Searched Twelve Years for Her Baby.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 7.—Asserting that in the person of Dorothy Brokley, a fifteen-year-old High School girl of New Haven, she had found her daughter, for whom she had searched twelve years through Philadelphia, the mountains of Pennsylvania, Chicago and portions of Connecticut, Mrs. Florence Padmore of this city to-day instituted proceedings to obtain custody of the child.

Mrs. Padmore says that twelve years ago when she separated from her husband she placed the child in the home of the Brickleys in Philadelphia, agreeing to pay for her support. Subsequently the Brickleys moved away and she could get no trace of the child.

Today she obtained an order directing Eli J. Brickle and his wife of New Haven, to appear in the Superior Court in Hartford and show cause why the custody of the girl should not be given her.

More About the City's Bank Account

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I observe by reports of Monday evening's Council meeting, appearing in the Press, that Alderman Stratton, replying to Alderman Edgar's statement that the city was refused accommodation of $100,000.00 by the Bank of Toronto two years' ago, said that he wished to correct this, that the Bank had not refused the money, but urged the city not to go into the Hydro scheme at that time—that the Council hurried to Montreal and acted too quickly.

On the face of it this statement appears to me to be very peculiar, and still more peculiar, for he got away with it, as I do not see that he was further replied to. It is surely evident to everyone that the city was turned down, and the refusal must have been peremptory, without hope of any further consideration, or else, why proceed to Montreal? It is all bosh to say that if they had been less precipitate then they would have been accommodated by the Bank of Toronto. The long and the short of it is they were turned down flat.

I would not have taken any notice of these circumstances if it were not for the fact that the Review, the mouthpiece of Finance Minister Stratton, announces that though defeated now, the question will be reopened by the incoming Council in 1917, when it may be assumed a more favourable consideration will be handed out to the Bank of Toronto.

In the event of this occurring I wish to make some observations which the question seems to warrant for those who may be in control of affairs at that time.

(1) By whose mandate has the management of the Bank of Toronto become the dictator to the City re Hydro? (See report of Alderman Stratton's remarks in both evening papers).

(2) It is apparent that the Bank of Toronto only wishes to serve the city in times of prosperity, therefore

(3) The case of the city would be lamentable whenever depression in the financial world exists, if the serious mistake was made of re-transferring the account to them, as

(4) Any application to other Institutions would be hopeless in view of these occurrences.

DEPORTED MEN MAY BE TRENCH-DIGGERS

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The one hundred thousand of French citizens who have been deported from the regions occupied by the Germans, and sent back to France by way of Switzerland, arrived at Annemasse from Geneva. They came from the department of Meurthe-Et-Moselle. Most from Conflans and Jarry, not far from the battle front.

"We were gathered at Conflans in barracks built along a railroad for Belgians being brought by force into that region," said one repatriate Frenchman. "The Germans say the Belgians are coming to repair roads but it is more probable they will be occupied with anything else than digging trenches behind the battle front.

"I have seen between two thousand and three thousand Belgians brought here under strong guard, shivering with cold and tormented with hunger, pleading with the inhabitants for a morsel of bread as they passed along. The Belgians were lodged in barracks such as those at Conflans. They were within the range of cannon and often were under bombardment."

Safe Home Treatment For Objectionable Hairs

The electric needle is not required for the removal of hair or fuzz, for with the use of plain delatone the most stubborn growth can be quickly vanished. A paste is made with water and a little of the powder, then spread over the hairy surface. In about 2 minutes it is rubbed off and the skin washed. This simple treatment not only removes the hair, but leaves the skin free from blemish. Be sure you get genuine delatone.

It is estimated that it is considerably in excess of $100,000. Mrs. London is given not only the real estate including the London ranch, but any and all improvements, royalties and rights in plays, books, translations etc.

The writer's mother, Mrs. Flora London, is given $50 a month. Bessie W. London, his divorced wife, bequeaths $5, and during her single lifetime she is allowed the use of the Oakland home.

To his daughters, Joan and Bess London is bequeathed $25 a month until their marriage. London directs that any additional help they may want shall not come from the estate. To his old "mammy" Jennie Prentiss, London leaves $15 a month, and directs that she be properly housed. Mrs. Eliza Shepard, his sister, is left $2,300 and $35 a month.

The average wife looks askance at washing soda. It ruins both colours and hands; yet it is very useful. Very dirty or soiled linen may be cleaned by boiling in fairly strong soda water. A little soda dissolved and added to the blueing water prevents streaking. A good bleacher is made by boiling one pound of soda in a quart of water. Add a packet of chloride of lime, strain and bottle, and discoloured doorsteps and tables that are a bad colour may be cleaned with the fluid. Brush over well and leave for the night, then wash thoroughly in the morning.

NEGROES CANNOT VOTE.

Solid South Has No Use For Black Republican Votes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—A bitter partizan contest is foreshadowed in Congress by the announcement that Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, will introduce a bill for Federal supervision of national elections. It is not expected that the Penrose bill will be enacted, but it will serve as a text for Republican orators in Congress to set forth the claim that through the suppression of Republican votes in the "solid South" the Democrats were able to bring about the election of Woodrow Wilson.

Senator Penrose says it is about time that the negroes of the South were allowed to exercise their constitutional prerogatives. The election laws are flagrantly violated, and negroes, naturally Republican, are cheated of their franchise.

The Southern States are represented in the Electoral College by 145 votes, and an attempt will be made to abolish this system of electing the President.

SIR DAVID BEATTY'S QUOTATION

Grant thou with zeal and skill this day I do
What me to do behoves, what Thou commandest me to do.
Grant that I do it sharp, at point of moment fit
And when I do it, grant me good success in it.

Sir David Beatty has done many brave things in his time, but I doubt if he has ever done a bolder than in adopting this quotation. For the four lines are a translation of a part of a hymn written by a German—Johann Heermann, the writer of a long row of hymns, who has been in his grave in Poland for nearly three hundred years.

British Liberals to Hold Meeting To-morrow

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—A meeting of all Liberals of both Houses of Parliament is scheduled for to-morrow. Asquith will preside.

Lloyd George was busy almost all morning conferring with Bonar Law, Sir Edward Carson, Arthur Henderson, and others. Due to the Cabinet crisis and the fall of Bucharest, the Stock Market opened weak to-day, with business almost at a standstill. Nearly all prices declined.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Commons met and adjourned to-day without any announcement being made concerning the new Ministry to be headed by David Lloyd George. The House was in session only two minutes, and adjourned till Tuesday.

Arabia Was a Troop Transport Says Berlin

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Germany set up the contention that the steamer Arabia was a troop transport, and admitted she had sunk it under that impression, in her answer to the American enquiries made public by the State Department to-day. At the same time Germany agreed to promptly draw appropriate consequences if the United States showed the vessel was an ordinary passenger liner rather than a transport.

It is understood here that the United States Government regards Germany's explanations re the Arabia very weak, and photographs to hand to-day of the Arabia sinking clearly show many women and children passengers escaping in life-boats, but no soldiers.

Russian Offensive Continues in Carpathians

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—The Russian offensive in the wooded Carpathians is continuing, with an increasing fire in Moldavia and skirmishes north of Dorna Vatra and in the Trotusul Valley. All attacks were repulsed.

Sarnia Man Expires Soon After Rescue

SARNIA, Dec. 7.—William Leathorn, 136 Vincent street, lost his life, virtually by drowning, though he did not expire until after he had been taken from the water.

He had rowed across the river to Port Huron Tuesday, and upon returning to this side attempted to land at the tram of the Cleveland-Sarnia Sawmills Company. The boat was upset by huge waves, and he was thrown into the water.

Men who were working near by went to his assistance, and pulled him out of the water, but he expired in a few minutes.

The pulmotor was secured, but was of no avail.

Dr. R. G. R. McDonald decided that no inquest was necessary. Mr. Leathorn was aged 58 years and 6 months. He was employed at the G. T. R. round-house and is survived by a widow and family.

Edward Gurney Estate Is Valued at $817,803

Late Stove Manufacturer Leaves Annuities to Family.

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—Probate of the will of the late Edward Gurney, which disposes of an estate valued at $817,803, is being applied for.

The will, dated December 31, 1912, directs that his widow, Mary Frances Gurney, receive an income of $20,000 per annum and all the furniture, motors, carriages and household effects, with the use of the house on Walmer road for life. The desire of the testatir that the residue of the estate be preserved until January 1, 1930, is expressed in the will.

To the testator's sons and daughters $8,000 per annum is bequeathed, while F. F. Skinner, a brother-in-law, receives $8,000 per annum.

Foe Wants Back All His Colonies

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 7.—A Berlin despatch says that the war aims of the German Radicals have been set forth by Prof. Karl Doorman, leader of the Radical party in the Reichstag, as follows:

"We don't reject annexations if our rulers believe them necessary from a military or economic point of view. We cannot permit the Entente to declare an economic war against us after the present war. We must get back all our colonies. Germany must be assured of her right to exist independently and develop as she chooses."

Big Cholera Outbreak

GALT, Dec. 7.—A bad outbreak of hog cholera has been discovered on the farm of Richard Lloyd, near Galt, and Dr. Henderson of Toronto, of the Dominion Veterinary Inspectors' Board, visited the farm and destroyed sixty-nine pigs thought to be infected. About forty animals had died before the arrival of the inspector, cholera not at first being suspected. Feeding garbage is attributed as the cause of the disease. Dr. Henderson states that this case is the worst he has yet met in his experience. The Lloyd farm is under quarantine until the spread of the disease will be avoided.

BARRED FROM SING SING.

New York, Dec. 7.—Thomas Mott Osborne has been barred from Sing Sing prison where he was the 'reform' warden. It is within the discretion of Acting Warden Derrick to permit any other person who may wish to visit the place and talk with such prisoners as may be willing to converse with him. Mr. Osborne, however, cannot pass the prison gates.

CANADIAN OFFICER REGAINS HIS HONOR

Soldier Though Court-martialed Won Back His Commission—Daring Deeds in "No Man's Land"

A London correspondent writes: Some time ago Lieut. O. B. Jones, a Canadian officer, was dismissed by court-martial. Like that other distinguished officer, Colonel John Hillington, Lieut. Jones determined to "make good," and so win back his honor. He thereupon enlisted as a private in a well known Montreal battalion. Gallantry in the face of the enemy won him his corporal's stripes; then he was promoted to be sergeant. His reckless courage brought the D.C.M., and, later, a bar. It was said of him that he was "always out killing Germans."

He was appointed wiring sergeant then bombing sergeant, but it was as a scout that he most distinguished himself. On March 31, 1916, he went over to the enemy trenches to examine them and stole a sniper's plate (metal shield). A month later he again went over to the enemy trenches and secured another plate.

Daring Idea

After that Sergeant (as he now was) Jones was put in charge of the bombers, and then came the big fight at the end of June. We had difficulties in ascertaining the enemy's new lines and Jones was ordered to go out at night and find out exactly how the line stood. Knowing how hopeless it was to move about at night, Jones had the daring idea of going out by daylight. At 7 o'clock in the morning he slowly crept across "No Man's Land," and followed an old communication trench. He finally reached a strong sandbag block, and, hearing the enemy on the other side knew that he had arrived at their lines.

He secured an entrenching tool from a dead German, and started to make a tunnel right under the sandbags. He eventually got through to the other side, covered himself with a sandbag, and crept into a hole. Although a German sentry was firing at random he stayed there for two hours unharmed.

Counting the Enemy

He was able to count the number of the garrison, and to fix the exact location of the new line, and all bombing and machine gun strong points. The result was that after a few hours our artillery were able to drive the Germans out of their positions. In this work Sergt. Jones was assisted by Sergt. W. A. Thompson, who was since been killed on the Somme. Both sergeants got the D.C.M. for this great act of heroism.

Some weeks later Sergt. Jones was out patrolling for twenty hours under much the same circumstances on which he won his bar to the D.C.M. He amused himself reading "Omar Khayyam." This was the occasion when he was wounded by machine gun fire on the Somme.

CANADIANS HAVE HUMOR

Praise For Commander From Son of Neutral General

"I'm an American, but I've got to say this: the spirit of the Canadians at the front is wonderful. They've got a sense of humor, and that's what pulls them through," declared Pte. Harry W. Wilmer, in Ottawa, after having been wounded at the front. Wilmer's father is a retired adjutant general of the United States army, L. A. Wilmer of Baltimore.

Pte. Wilmer got off the Cunard liner Ascania at Quebec with several bits of shrapnel still embedded in his left shoulder and as he put it himself. "Goodness knows how many bits they took out of me in the hospital at Boulogne." He is from Baltimore and San Francisco, and came all the way from the last-named city in October, 1914, to enlist in the 21st Battalion, the famous Eastern Ontario battalion which rendered such yeoman service during the early days of the war. Back after ten months' hard fighting at the front, he said, "I guess I got a few of the Huns." He expected to go back again.

Pte. Wilmer says the only things with any life in them inhabiting Ypres are rats, and cats gone wildly insane with the shell fire. The city is flattened out, not a building standing. Near Hill 60 a "whizz bang" sailed over and exploded near him. He received the majority of the flying pieces in his body. One of the most thrilling experiences was in an attack on the Hun trenches at St. Eloi. Wilmer dashed over the ground with bombs in his hands. "I was so excited I didn't know what was happening," he said laughing.

When the pastures are dried up give the hogs clover or alfalfa hay.

The shorthorn breed owes a deep debt of gratitude to Scotland, especially Aberdeenshire, during the years since the famous Dunmore days. The reports, briefly recorded under "Current Events," show that the Collynie herd has made a new record for the breed. "Collynie" is, by the way, a tenant of Lord Aberdeen.

Solemn Protest By the Allies

PARIS Dec. 7.—The Foreign Office issued a note concerning deportations from Belgium, saying that the allied Government join the Belgian the civilized world against the barbarous acts of the German authorities in Belgium. The note affirms that the Entente Allies, "desiring to mark publicly their consciousness of their obligations toward Belgium, unite in a declaration which will establish in the eyes of the civilized world that the treatment of Belgian persons and their property is contrary not only to the elementary principles of international law and treaties signed by Germany before the war, but also to agreements made recently, when the neutral committee to provision Belgium was instituted."

Quotes Hague Treaty.

Articles of The Hague Treaty are cited in the note, which comments upon them at length, asserting that their object is to protect the inhabitants of occupied territories from what has been wrought in Belgium. The note details the seizure of domestic animals, stocks of food throughout the country, machinery and factory equipment and the means of making a living in Belgium, thus, it says, bringing about unemployment, starvation and misery.

"The allies," the note continues, "have no intention to change their policy nor to abandon at this moment, the oppressed population of Belgium, and they engage solemnly for their part to continue, as they always have done, not to try to get advantage from the working of the committee of relief, which is extremely neutral.

Regarded as Duty.

"In making this engagement they regard it their duty to make an appeal to the civilized world, not for their own benefit, but for the innocent people who cannot protect themselves.

"In Belgium, as in the north of France and the territories occupied by the Central empires, men and women suffer, notwithstanding the aid the allied powers have given them at whatever risk to themselves. They suffer in slavery through the barbarous conduct of the occupant whom no consideration for the right of humanity and no promise and no engagement restrains. The allies must denounce this conduct to the public opinion of the entire world and appeal to the universal conscience."

Swiss Govt. Stands Clear.

GENEVA, Dec. 7.—The Swiss Government has refused to consider the petitions presented by the Cantonal councils of Geneva, Vaud, Valais and Neuchatel, asking the Government to protest to Germany against the deportation of civilians from Belgium and north France.

The Government points out that since the war began it has received 3 protests against alleged violations of the law of nations, thirty-seven from the Central powers, forty-eight from the allies, and four from one neutral state, and explains that as it has been unable to investigate each case adequately it is reluctantly obliged to refrain from action.

WATERLOO TOWNSHIP BOASTS IT IS DEBT FREE

Also Boasts of Its Bridges—Last Wooden One Gone.

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—Waterloo township has removed the only remaining span that crossed the river Speed at Coles Mills. The bridge, which was known for generations as the "Old Black Bridge," had been kept in repair by being rebuilt and fixed for more than a half century. This season it became dangerous to traffic and was condemned. Contractor Vance of New Hamburg, was awarded the contract to replace it with a steel structure, with concrete cement piers and abutments. He completed his contract this week.

Waterloo Township has many bridges within the municipality, and years ago adopted structural steel for permanance in bridge building. The municipality boasts that it is free of debt and has not had a debenture debt for a number of years.

WOULD WED A WAR WIDOW.

Montreal, Dec. 7.—B. M. North, 1920 Caton avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y., has written the city clerk of Montreal asking him to find him a war widow, between the ages of 18 and 30, "with a view to matrimony."

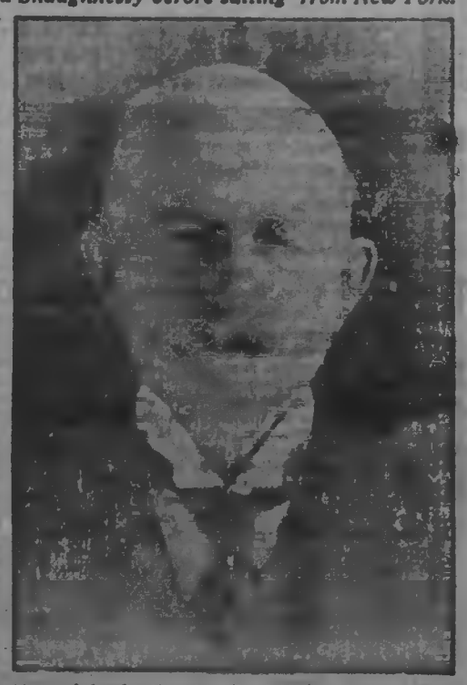
CANADA'S BIGGEST ROLE

In Play of Nations is in the Future.

Forecast of Lord Shaughnessy before sailing from New York.



NEW YORK.—Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who sailed for Europe on Wednesday on the Kroonland, in an interview, made the following statement before his departure:

"Though bleeding with sacrifices and bending with effort in behalf of the great Empire of which she is an integral part, Canada's biggest role in the play of nations is not now, but in the future. Bright though her record may be, it is only a glimpse of what is to come. Her greatest opportunities, although secured through a trying present, will be shown when, with the war settled, she undertakes to assume the place she has fought for. Success will come measured by forethought. By fulfilling duties as presented to-day, Canada will be able to reap abundantly of the prosperity which the years, surely not far distant, will bring.

"Canadian history shows that what mistakes have had to be rectified have been those due to short vision, and that the deeds most criticised have been of over-anticipation. Between, the two is the straight course of steady development. Blind faith in the country has been, to a large extent, the guiding star of the men who have built. Speculation has been a ready growth in a ground rich beyond the dreams of the most hopeful. Cairo, conservative business sagacity leads the pioneers discard the thought of spanning the prairies with a transcontinental line, while bold daring builds not one, but three. The success of the Canadian Pacific, the pioneer, urged others to be reckless, perhaps, but then there were those who said the construction of the Canadian Pacific was folly.

"Canada's course is the centre one, and to choose is no easy task. We do not wish to cramp our future by a narrow, limited imagination, neither do we wish to greatly over-develop and thus render the load we are now carrying too great. It is sometimes hard to realize that on the shoulders of the present the material for the future must be carried.

"Canada is an empire in itself. Its population is not a fraction of what it should be, of what it is capable of becoming, or of what it will be after the war. We are taking steps to prepare for the future, and are anticipating an immigration that should be unprecedented in Canadian history.

"When peace is declared Canada will naturally be looked upon as the promised land by many peoples of Europe. She will be in a position to choose carefully. She need take not but the best, and only by so selecting her citizenship will she build up a nation capable of performing the tasks which undoubtedly will be allotted to her.

"The war has taught Canada self-reliance as probably nothing else would have done. She has been forced to do rapidly and efficiently things which were impossible. She has expanded commercially and industrially faster than ever before, and has confidence in herself to do the things which she formerly expected others to do for her.

"In the same manner that she unhesitatingly mobilized the largest army that ever crossed the Atlantic, she has developed a sea traffic on both the Atlantic and the Pacific that is tremendous. This will be undoubtedly further developed, proving to be a powerful aid in upbuilding trade connections favourable to Canada after the war.

"Canada cannot go back. She is committed to expansion, but not to over-expansion. Keeping within limits justified by conditions has been hard. It is difficult in being optimistic to be not too optimistic, and here perhaps is the greatest problem.

"In the past Canada has been too eager and is now faced with the problem of over-development in certain lines.

"Politically Canada will undoubtedly take a more prominent part in the destinies of the British Empire than ever before. She will probably be asked to become one of the senior members of a firm in which before the war she was merely regarded as a junior, bright, full of promise, to be sure, but one on whom a full share of the burden should not be placed. The future is undoubtedly bright, but the advancement is fraught with problems which will require good judgment and forethought rather than good judgment in afterthought."

LAUNDRY MARK BETRAYS

Suspected Murderer Located After Long Search.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The laundry mark "G-111" led to the arrest of Alexander Schuster on a charge of murder, and the recovery of all the jewels and part of the money stolen when Mrs. Rose Zamkin was slain in her home at 126 West 101st street on November 27.

Schuster, who had been befriended by the Zamkin family, and who had boarded at the home, had gone when the police arrived soon after the murder. The detectives found a stained shirt bearing the laundry mark "G-111". The several large steam laundries which was clothes for the small laundry shops through the city were asked to watch for the appearance of that mark and notify the police.

A little laundry in the Wallabout Market district of Brooklyn sent in linen with that mark a few days ago, and the police were notified. Detectives watched the laundry until yesterday afternoon, when Schuster called for his linen, and was arrested.

In his room near there the detectives said they found Mrs. Zamkin's jewel case.

AN INTERESTING ADDRESS BY CHIEF OF POLICE THOMPSON

Law Enforcement Formed the Subject of an Address That Was Delivered to the Calebite Club of St. Andrew's Church—The Education of the Children.

At a meeting of the Calebite Club of St. Andrew's Church, an interesting address was given by Chief of Police Thompson on the subject of law enforcement and police efficiency. The report, which is given in part, makes a plea for educational laws for children, believing that such training would tend to raise the standard of the nation and better prepare children for the responsibilities that are before them. The report, in part, contains the following:

POLICE ORGANIZATION AND DEPORTMENT.

The principal object of the police organization is to enforce law and order, so as to give our citizens the protection to which they were entitled and which they might reasonably expect.

A number of years ago an Act was passed in England with a view of giving the people of London and other cities and towns throughout the country better police protection. Policemen, or watchmen, as they were called, were to see that all doors were safe and well secured, and to prevent to the utmost of their power and ability all burglaries, robberies and affrays, they were to apprehend all loose or disorderly persons.

We are told that this Act, however excellent in intention and carefully designed, failed really in execution; the policemen or nightwatchmen often proved unworthy of their trust, and it is recorded that no small portion of them who were paid to protect the public, were not only instruments of oppression in many ways but were frequently accessories in aiding and concealing the commission of crime, which it was their duty to detect and prevent.

As a natural consequence, the police of the time came into disrepute by the public in general, and it was not until some years later, when a better police system was inaugurated with man at the head whose reputation and ability was such as to inspire the people with confidence in the organization, that the police had any standing whatever with the people whom they served. It took many years of the most careful management before confidence in the organization was restored.

Constables' Association.

And in 1909 with the same object in view some of the leading chief constables of Canada decided to organize what is to-day known as the Chief Constables' Association of Canada in order to enforce the laws as we believed they should be enforced. We realized that we required the mutual assistance of every other police department over this broad Dominion and also the assistance of police departments throughout other countries. We have met in convention annually since and I am now in a position to tell you that the standard of the police departments has been raised seventy-five per cent., and I believe I can safely say that at the present time we have the confidence and mutual support of the large majority of the citizens throughout the Dominion of Canada.

Police organizations stand for clean administration, which is absolutely necessary to the growth and well being of the police system, and this fair Dominion. And I hope that our coming together at these conventions will still have a beneficial effect not only in the enforcement of the law, but also in helping to solve the social problem of our time, as it is only by united action, and by an enforced acceptance of the good features and a willing rejection of the bad ones, and by cultivating a broad and generous spirit toward each other by mutually considering our plans and our difficulties, that we can look for the endorsation of a discriminating public, and the favour of Divine Providence.

Law and Order.

The police forces of Canada hold their positions for the enforcement of law and order, yet how often do we see them treated lightly, and our scope is restricted, although we are nearly always in a better position to know the actual circumstances of the case, and what really should be done. Cold-blooded murders are committed, the crime brought directly home to the guilty party, yet he escapes his just punishment, political, or sentimental or some equally illogical reasons are brought to bear on the matter, and the death sentence is reduced to a life in gaol, embezzlements, thefts and petty crimes are of daily occurrences, yet they are hushed up by settlement of cash, and the culprit escapes legal punishment, sometimes to become a better citizen, but more often to fall into the same ways again, thinking he will get off just as easily the next time. These matters are nearly always known in local circles, and it can scarcely impress upon weak minds that respect for the law which all should hold, we hear on every hand that dollars and cents, and influence count for everything, and that a man can do almost anything, if he only has these goods, and so instead of news, [illegible] control and be looked up to, they, many times, become the most veritable farce.

Educational Law.

From the rank of the patrolman to the chair of the Chief, one is continually passing through an educational process in law subjects which is a detail of our calling, it has often struck me how the majority of the people treat the position of a policeman, serves my memory coming the remembrance of a song entitled 'Only a Jew,' in which the despised and persecuted Israelite is depicted as rising to the greatest heights of humanity.

If one could tell in a song of only a policeman, what deeds of valour offer of fittings will be entirely changed. We shall have a better and purer population, which will be a reform congenial to all sides, the citizen of to-morrow will reach the highest standard of efficiency, and from his conception of that which is right, will build up a nation that will make this vast and glorious Canada a shining light to other countries. They may follow in our footsteps, but Canada will have given birth to educational laws which will be a foundation for the betterment of humanity.

HUNGRY BOSCHES LICK CANADIANS' HANDS

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Canadian officers recently returned from the front remark generally on the development of bombing operations. One even declares that the rifle stands a fair chance of becoming obsolete. "Bombing is the only sure method of clearing a trench," he says. "Give me a live party with full aprons and I will go anywhere. One man will carry as many as sixteen bombs. What one can accomplish in the way of annihilation is wonderful. The time was when we lost many men because the Bosche was so deep in the dugout, but he is up to our methods of bombing him out, so does not hide as low down as formerly. One man taken in the last little bunch of prisoners declared on his way to the cage that he simply had held up his hands in taking his usual morning Swedish drill. Believe me, they are not as fat as they used to be. They fairly lick our hands when we give them some of our food, which continues of the best."

VISITORS FROM THE GRAND LODGE

A joint meeting of the Mount Hebron and Hiawatha Encampments was held last evening in the Oddfellow's Hall at the corner of George and Hunter streets. The Order was favoured with a visit from the following Grand Officers: M. Sinclair, Grand Junior Warden and S. G. Johnston, Assistant Grand Scribe, both of Toronto, also A. H. Blackaby, P.G.R., of Kingston. Each of the visitors gave an address respecting the work of the Order and current events. During the evening the degree was conferred on five candidates. Refreshments were served.

BULGARIA FOLLOWS SUIT.

Will Mobilize Labour for Production of Munitions.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 6. — Premier Radoslavoff, of Bulgaria, has announced that Sofia will follow the example of her allies and mobilize labour for the production of munitions, according to a Sofia despatch to the Berlin Mittag Zeitung. Premier Radoslavoff is quoted as saying: "Nobody in Bulgaria dreams of peace until the entente allies are chased out of the Balkans, and until Russia has abandoned forever her hope of capturing the Turkish straits."

Liquor In Belmont Tp.

Two Charges Heard in Havelock Yesterday Suggest That Traffic Has Only Been Diverted

CONTRADICTORY EVIDENCE

The existence of an illicit traffic in liquor in Belmont Township in the vicinity of Preneveau, was indicated in the evidence taken by Magistrate Langley yesterday at Havelock in the hearing of two charges laid by Inspector Stewart under the Temperance Act.

In the case of William Anderson, who was charged with selling liquor and having it for sale, judgment was reserved until Saturday morning at 9:30 at the Court House.

William Smith, Anderson's nephew, a young man of 23 years, and a cousin of the late Lorus Smith, who met death in Peterborough last week by asphyxiation, was charged with keeping liquor in a place other than his dwelling house. This charge was dismissed. Both hearings were characterized by evidence that was decidedly contradictory.

It was shown that Anderson, who is a farmer, ordered two cases of liquor from Toronto on November 14th, and that they arrived at Havelock on November 18th. George Chase, Anderson's hired man, secured the liquor from the C.P.R. express office. He had asked if Anderson's liquor had come, and after getting Anderson's horse from Dineen's hotel yard, drove to the express office, paid for the liquor and took it away.

Anderson admitted ordering the liquor, but denied having sent Chase for it. Chase, however, told him it was in the driving shed. On opening them four bottles were found missing. He placed them in his cellar on a board between two joists up against the floor. They were all there now except the four missing bottles, and three more which Anderson said he himself had drunk.

Inspector Stewart stated that a week after the liquor had been taken from the station he had visited the Anderson home. Mrs. Anderson told him there was nothing of "that kind of stuff" in the house. The Inspector searched the premises from cellar to garret without a single clue to the shipment.

A C.P.R. employee named Wright swore that Chase had driven to the station with Anderson's horse.

Chase Vamoosed.

On the Monday following the liquor transportation Chase disappeared from Anderson's. Inspector Stewart traced him to Toronto and forwarded papers to the police, but they returned with the information that Chase was at Kingsville in Essex County working. On Dec. 4th Mr. Stewart sent a summons to the Kingsville police and Chief Thompson was notified yesterday afternoon that it had been served. Hence he must return to Havelock or be arrested.

The Smith Case.

While Inspector Stewart was investigating the Anderson case he learned that William Smith had signed a receipt for two cases of whiskey. When he visited the Smith residence the father stated that there was no whiskey there. The son, William, drove and told the Inspector that he had hidden the two cases in a barn, which was about a mile and a half from the house and likewise a mile from Anderson's. That was four cases of whiskey in the Anderson environs. But someone had stolen the cases from the barn. The young man showed Mr. Stewart where he had stowed them under the table of a reaper, with a carpet over them to keep out the frost.

"How could they steal the liquor if the door was locked?" asked Mr. Stewart.

"I don't know," replied Smith. "I believe you did it."

Smith maintained his story in the face of a vigorous examination by the Inspector in Havelock that night. Coming to Peterborough the next day Mr. Stewart observed Mr. Anderson coming into Peterborough.

Whiskey in Cellar.

In court yesterday the boy swore that the whiskey was in his father's cellar and was kept there for the family use.

Mr. W. Dineen stated that in his sixteen years in Havelock he had never seen Smith, father or son, in his bar. He was satisfied that neither of them drank. But the boy swore that he had got two full cases for himself and his father.

Magistrate Langley expressed his disbelief in the boy's story, but the evidence was such that nothing remained but to dismiss the case.

ROYAL ARCANUM TROUBLE.

New York, Dec. 7.—Between 60,000 and 100,000 members of the Royal Arcanum in the United States are expected to quit because of the increase in the cost of certain classes of insurance, officials of the society admitted Saturday night.

The advance in rates was made necessary, according to Secretary Sheffield by the Mobile insurance law, effective in thirteen states.

It became apparent to the Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum as early as 1905, that the rates of the organization for certain classes of insurance, was not based on sound insurance principles, and an effort was made at that time to impose a new scale of charges. This attempt was resisted by those who had taken out insurance at the original rate, and who insisted that the order was obligated by contract to carry out its side of the bargain.

LIVELINESS IN DUMA.

Progressives Call for Further Reconstitution of the Cabinet.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The Progressive party in the Duma is continuing attacks on the Government, according to a Reuter's despatch from Petrograd. The despatch says that after a lively debate on a statement issued by the Administration regarding Cabinet changes, the Progressives moved a resolution to the effect that as the reconstitution of the Cabinet is incomplete and consists rather of a change in individuals than in a change of administration, the Duma declares that all irresponsible influence must be removed. The resolution adds that the Duma will aim at the formation of a Cabinet united on a thorough apprehension of existing problems and which is prepared to base its activity on the support of the Duma and carry out the programme of the majority of that body.

MORE SUGAR FOR THE BABIES.

London, Dec. 7.—An investigation into the increasing infant mortality in Berlin, has established that the rising death rate is due to an insufficient sugar allowance, according to an Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The despatch says that it has been decided that each child born after December 1st shall receive an additional half pound monthly of sugar, the rations of the rest of the population being proportionately reduced. The allowance up to this time has been 750 grammes monthly for each baby.

United Men Should Desert

Montreal, Dec. 7.—Lieut.-Col. Tancrede Pagnuelo, officer commanding the 206th Battalion, appeared before a court martial presided over by Major-General Lessard, commander of this military district to answer a number of charges touching on the administration of his command while at Valcartier. The colonel is charged with issuing false statements regarding the payment of the men and of conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline.

The charge contains the allegation that on July 15, 1916, in an address to the regiment, said the officers had been dismissed, and he was afraid it was revenge because they were French Canadians.

The colonel further said that the regiment was to be shipped to Bermuda to give it a lot of misery. If the men were clever enough to read between the lines they would know what to do. He would give them passes to go where they liked, and they could take it for garnted that money subscribed for regimental purposes would not be spent to look for them or chase them.

The colonel repeated that the men had been condemned to go to Bermuda, where it was very hot. They could do as they liked, and not be afraid.

Pagnuelo pleaded not guilty to the charges.

THE ROUMANIAN ARMY IS RETIRING IN GOOD ORDER

Allies Are Now Prepared To Deal With the Greek Situation

Bucharest of No Military Value

LONDON, Dec. 7.—"The fall of Bucharest is without military significance, but I have no desire to underrate the fact that its surrender has a considerable moral and political effect," said General F. B. Maurice, chief director of military operations at the British War Office, in discussing with the Associated Press to-day the latest military operations of the entente allies.

Bucharest and Plesti were evacuated by the allied forces in order to shorten the line in Wallachia, General Maurice declared here to-day.

"Oil and oil machinery were fairly well destroyed before the Germans arrived," he continued. "The grain was also removed."

"The Rumanians were short on heavy guns, although amply supplied with light artillery, and dependent for ammunition on Russia. The retirement was principally due to the railroads, which were ample, but unorganized.

BOOS, GROANS, HISSES GREETED THE SPEAKERS

Stormy Meeting Marks Opening of National Service Campaign in Montreal—Dispute Statements—Premier Borden However was Given Respectful Hearing—Patenaude Howled Down

BROKE UP ABRUPTLY

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—Except for the fact that Premier Borden's address was listened to in silence, the opening meeting of the National Service campaign in Quebec, held in the Monument Nationale Wednesday night, indicated anything but agreement with the argument of the speakers.

Hon. E. L. Patenaude, Minister of Inland Revenue, and R. B. Bennett, M.P., Director-General of National Service, were frequently interrupted by noisy elements in the audience of over 2,000 people. Mr. Patenaude was hooted throughout his remarks. He continued for fifteen or twenty minutes, but no continuity in his address was possible, and the last part was completely drowned out in the noise. When he spoke of the freedom Montreal enjoyed under the British flag he was met with cries of "Boo" and "Chaux."

Mr. Patenaude declared with some heat that the demonstration was the result of another campaign carried out in the Province of Quebec during the past two years. A counter-demonstration followed this remark, and in the lower part of the hall there was heard a pronounced British cheer in reply to French cat-calls and booing.

Not Representative of French.

The chief disturbance came from the gallery, filled with young men of seemingly military age. They represented, it was stated, the younger elements of political clubs, and included a great many students from Laval University. After continued interruption from this section, Mr. Patenaude exclaimed: "I say in the face of the whole country as the University of Laval that the institution has not honored itself by its students' part to-night." He stated emphatically that the demonstrations were not representative of the great mass of the French people. "the great majority of whom do not share such sentiments."

Once during Mr. Patenaude's address and again during Mr. Bennett's remarks, Chairman Gravel appealed to the French-Canadians to give the speaker a fair hearing. He received

ALLIES MAY INSTITUTE BLOCKADE OF GREECE

Greece Has Sufficient Supplies to Last For Possibly Twenty Days Against the Sort of Blockade Which the Allies Propose to Inaugurate—Enemy Will Try to Make a Junction With the Greeks.

TEUTONS STRONGLY RE-INFORCED

LONDON, December 8.—Disciplining of Greece by the Allies begins to-day. A blockade of Greek ports was to be formally announced by the French Government which, combined with previous British and French orders against the movement of Greek vessels from their harbours, was expected absolutely to cut the kingdom off from supplies. Despatches from Athens to-day said the Italian colony was the only colony of allied citizens remaining in the Greek capital. Greece has sufficient supplies to last for possibly twenty days against the sort of blockade which Admiral Du Fournet probably will institute against her.

MAY TRY TO AID GREEKS.

LONDON, December 8.—Salonika despatches to-day indicate that Teutonic forces on the Macedonian front have recently been strongly reinforced, presumably from the Germanic armies which have been engaged in the Roumanian invasion and have been released by the partial conquering of Roumania.

Germany will probably throw heavy forces against General Sarrail's Allied troops which are based on Salonika and endeavour to drive them "into the sea." The Teutons will try to make a junction with the Greeks and provide communications between Athens and Bulgaria, thus offsetting the results of the Allied blockade of Greece. There is little doubt here that the Greeks would generally line up with the Germanic powers if they can.

To Abolish Bonded Liquor Warehouses

WINNIPEG, Dec. 7.—Proprietors of liquor warehouses in Winnipeg are deluging Chief License Inspector MacLean for information regarding a recent order issued by Minister of Customs at Ottawa, stating that after December 31 bonded warehouses would be illegal.

This order is taken to mean that liquor warehouses, where it has been the custom to keep intoxicants in bond will cease to exist in all Provinces where prohibition is in effect.

There are thirty bonded warehouses in Winnipeg and the recent order is welcomed at the License Department as it gives the department more power in its administration.

The withdrawal of the privilege from wholesale liquor stores will place further surpluses on liquor business, but Mr. MacLean points out that the chief hardship will be felt in Ontario when Bonded liquor warehouses undertook as Dominion Licensees, to deliver from their establishments in Ontario direct to consumer. They claim they did so without infringement of the Provincial Temperance Act. A similar system might have been started in winning but for this move by the Dominion Government.

Mr. MacLean pointed out that the situation caused by this order will be discussed at a meeting of representatives of Attorney General's departments in various dry Provinces which is to be held in Ottawa December 14. Such a meeting will recommend what policy should be taken with regard to any violation of this particular order.

THE WOES OF IRELAND GROWING ONCE MORE

Food Scarce and Expensive, and Coal is Almost Unpurchasable—People Weakening—Drained of Its Young, Erin Has an Ever-increasing Proportion of the Old.

COAL MORE THAN DOUBLE

The weekly paper Ireland, published in New York Says:

The Irish party in Ireland passed the following resolution:

"That the serious failure of the potato crop in Ireland and the enormous rise in prices of potatoes and other articles of food constitute a grave and urgent crisis, requiring immediate action, including the prohibition of the shipment of potatoes out of Ireland."

Last year the average yield of potatoes was 6.2 tonns per acre. This year the average yield was 4 tons per acre.

In 1914 the wholesale price of potatoes was 6.2 tons per acre. This year say 80 cents, a hundredweight. At last reports the wholesale price was 8 shillings, say $2.64, a hundredweight, with further increases expected.

Potatoes sold retail in Dublin at last report, at 1 shilling and 11 pence say 46 cents, a stone (14 pounds).

A FORCIBLE EMBARGO

At Tuam, Galway, the people forced buyers for export to desist from buying.

At Athy, in Kildare, Gorey, in Wexford, and other places, the example of Gort was recommended to be followed.

Ulster potato production was reduced by over 9,000 acres, which went into flax culture. Large shipments of potatoes from Ulster to Scotland are reported diminishing the normal Dublin supply.

At some market towns buyers for export have taken to meeting the markets waggons far out on the road. The practice is producing strong resentment.

The four-pound bread loaf which before the war was 12 cents costs now 20 cents in Dublin, 22 in Cork, and is expected to go to 24.

Irish eggs sell in England at 9 cents apiece. Irish mutton chops at 30 cents a pound.

COAL MORE THAN DOUBLE

Coal costs 72 cents a bag, against 32 in former years.

Tea and sugar are double the prices of three years ago, milk half as much again.

One consequence of the failure of the potato crop may be to change the outlook on conscription. Not that there is more conscription than usual for Ireland in any of the departments in London, but because in Great Britain itself they are face to face with a food shortage, and have begun to take measures to increase the home supply.

In England men are being taken out of the army service by tens of thousands and restored to agricultural. In Ireland vast areas have been held out of cultivation by landlords who object to changing their accustomed scheme of farming. If the war goes on intensive cultivation will have to be resorted to in every corner of the islands, all the more so now that the stores of food in other parts of the world have been so largely drawn upon as to endanger the interests of the home population. It would appear that in Ireland the last census figures attribute to the agricultural class 721,000 males of all ages, of whom 327,350 were between the ages of 18 and 41. But the same census reveals that there are large and small 550,675 agricultural holdings in Ireland. Evidently there do not begin to be enough men in Ireland to work the land as it should be worked if the food shortage in Great Britain is to be sensibly relieved.

THE POPULATION

Moreover, it is being pointed out that, having regard for the future, the census figures must be interpreted. The males represent not the normal population of a country but a remainder whose vitality has been weakened, so much of what was best having gone in emigration. In other words conscription may mean something in its consequence upon a normal population like that of England and quite another thing when applied to the abnormal conditions which prevail in Ireland.

"The Irish population at the outbreak of the war," comments a recent

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"The folks out there seem excited," he commented drily. "Kindly suggest to them that it is unnecessary for them to advertise their lack of confidence in their chief, by scurrying about during my interviews like chickens when a hawk hovers overhead." Then he recounted what had occurred—for this was one of the matters in which the secretary might be admitted to his confidence. At the end of the recital Carl shook his head. "I think you are magnanimous, sir. Although you didn't start it you might have taken toll of the downward movement and lived up to your name of the Great Bear. They are playing into your hands, I should say."

Hamilton Burton laughed.

"Carl, you are young. A man can fork Hades up from its bottom-most clinkers only once in so often. I don't butcher my swine until I have fattened them. When the day comes, be assured that they won't call me off but until I am ready I won't strike." He took a turn or two across the floor and halted at the centre of the room. His eyes were burning now with an intense fire of egotism.

"Their anger—their threats: it's all incense they burn to my power, but, good God, Carl, how they hate me!"

* * * * * *

As the ship which was bringing Jefferson Edwardes back to his native shores drew near enough for the Navesink light to wink its welcome, the banker found himself in a pensive mood. The last evening of the voyage was being celebrated with a dance on deck, but Edwardes, who had remained somewhat of a recluse during the passage over, was content to play the part of an onlooker.

The expectant spirit of home-coming lent a cheery animation to the rhythmic swaying of the dancing figures and brought a light to their eyes. Jefferson Edwardes realized that his own mood was difficult to analyse. His childhood had been spent in world-wandering and his youth in the exile of a battle for life in the mountains. His later young manhood had found its setting in such capitals at St. Petersburg and Berlin. It had been a life full of activity, yet strangely solitary and dominated by dreams and imagination. Now he realized that the most tangible thing to which he looked forward at home was a meeting with Mary Burton. And with the thought that to-morrow morning would bring the sky-line of Manhattan into view, a decided misgiving possessed him. He had hitherto treated the thing half-humorously—as a pleasant, but vague, dream. It could no longer remain so. He realised that it had been a definite enough dream to keep the door of his heart closed upon other women. He must see her and, if, after seeing her, his dream could no longer exist he knew that it would be to him and his life a serious matter. A chance acquaintance of the voyage had known her and spoken other. He was an Englishman of title, and a thoroughly likable fellow. Somehow Edwardes fancied that this man's own heart carried a scar and that he had sought to be more than a casual friend to Mary Burton—and had failed. So the American felt a delicacy in asking those questions that might have enlightened him. Yet the talk that had passed between them had heightened his already keen impatience to see the girl with whom he had so strangely and intangibly fallen into an attitude which in his own thoughts was not unlike that of a lover.

For a time he would be very busy. His duties as head of the banking house which had for generations borne a high and honorable name in large affairs would occupy him with strenuous activities. The house of Edwardes and Edwardes stood as a pillar of conservatism in finance. He meant that its splendid record should under his guidance suffer no loss of prestige.

Unlike the tigerish methods of the more modern school, from which sprang such spectacular figures as Hamilton Burton, there was in the older days a different conception of business—and of that conception the firm of Edwardes and Edwardes was a worthy example.

The men who had founded it had recognized ideals and grave responsibilities beyond the importance of mere profits. A deep pride in the honor upon which they had based their upbuilding had actuated them, and in none of the line was that pride stronger than in this new head who feared nothing save dishonor and prized nothing above integrity.

CHAPTER X.

Mary Burton had not long been back from Europe when heated windows and boarded entrances began to give a sepulchral blankness to the houses of the rich. Society was leaving town, and for Mary Burton to remain when her set had gone would have been like reigning in an empty court, for already she had entered upon her dominion, and her triumph was secure. New York society had at first received the over-seas report of her great charm and loveliness with such sceptical indulgence as New York accords to any excellence alien to the purlieus of her own boroughs.

Judged by every ordinary standard Mary Burton should have been a very happy young woman, sitting crowned and in state, while before her Life passed in review. This afternoon however, certain reflections brought the harassment of unrest to her eyes, and a droop of wistfulness to the curve of her lips.

Self-analysis, that rude guest who comes sometimes, as unbidden and unwelcome as constable to set all one's favorites vanities out of doors, and evict one's self-complacency, had intruded upon her thoughts. Though she had the amelioration of a pier glass which gave her a view of all her beauty, from the coronal of burnished hair to the satin points of small slippers, she did not seem quite happy. Mary was discovering that Nature had endowed her with a brain which refused to accept longer its heretofore placid function of augmenting her physical allurements with its cleverness and its powers of charm. Now it was in insurrection. Vassal no longer to the sense-thrilling appeal of eyes and lips and color and delicate curves, it was turning its batteries inward and preying upon itself.

Self-accusation had come to dispossess self-adulation.

Perhaps the silent voices of the mountains were in part responsible. Haverly Lodge lay in acres not only smooth, but elaborately beautified. Yet the margins of the estate met and merged with nature's ragged fringe. Metaled roads ran out in lumber trails where the Adirondacks reared turrets of granite and primal forests. In summer, ease loving guests took their pleasure here, but when winter held the hills, wild deer came down and gingerly picked their way close to the sundials and marble basins of the sunken gardens. Foxes, too, stole on cushioned feet across the terraces at the end of the pergola.

The master of Haverly Lodge was great littel man who chewed always at an unlighted cigar and built industries as a child rears houses of blocks. This Adirondack "camp" was one of H. A. Harrison's favorite playthings. Here alone the nervous restlessness that drove him gave place to something like peace. Among the guests now gathered there was Mary Burton. Hamilton Burton was absent, as he was always absent from the purely social side of the world into whose centre he had forced his way. For such diversions he had neither time nor taste, but like a general who, under the dim light of his tent lantern, sticks pins into a war map, it pleased him to have his sister take her triumphant place among the court idlers whom he scorned.

Now she sat in her room overlooking the terraces and the gardens at the side of the mansion. Just outside her window was a small gallery over whose wide coping clambered a profusion of flowering vines. Through half-drawn curtains as she lay in a long reclining chair she could see the purple veil of the young summer draped along the distance where rosy fires burned in the wake of day—or she could turn her eyes inward and have the other picture which the mirror offered. Her slender hands lay inertly quiet in her lap, holding an envelope.

Suddenly she turned her head and spoke to the only other occupant of the room—her maid.

"Julie," she said, almost sharply, "you may go; come back in half an hour."

"But, mademoiselle," exclaimed the little French woman who had put by dreams of a small millinery shop in Paris, to come with her mistress to America, "dinner is not far off, and you are not yet dressed."

Mary Burton did not answer. Her thoughts were elsewhere and after a moment's hesitation Julie went out and closed the door quickly behind her. The pearls lying near the mirror caught the light and echoed it in their soft shimmer.

"Hamilton Burton's collar," she murmured.

Then she slowly drew from the envelope in her lap a letter.

Its writer subscribed himself with many adoring superlatives, 'Thy Carlos," but that was an abbreviated signature. In Andalusia, where his estates lay, his prerogative was to sign himself Juan Carlos Matieto y Carolla, Duke de Metnah.

She read the letter and let it fall from her listless fingers. Her eyes went again to the portrait in the glass. Very slowly she rose and studied herself standing. The lacy softness of her negligee fell away from her slenderly rounded throat. The creamy whiteness of arms and shoulders and bosom was touched with the rosiness of blossom petals.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

DODGING THE BOMB

Easy to Sidestep a Missile Flung From a Zeppelin.

SIMPLE RULES FOR SAFETY.

Provided a Person Can Sight the Airship Before It Gets In Its Work, Dashing Out of Its Range Is Merely a Matter of Seconds and Agility.

There are well defined rules for the avoidance of Zeppelin bombs. These rules, it seems, depend upon the laws of spherical perspective, and however eccentric and complicated the calculations upon which they are based the actual practice of bomb dodging is relatively simple and easy to master.

When a "Zep" is sighted in the offing the first thing to do is to determine its course. This is done as follows: If it appears to be standing on end and is practically vertical you are, leaving out of account any cross wind there may be, pretty nearly in its path and should get ready to run to right or left—that is, at right angles to the course it is pursuing. Even if you are directly in its path there is no danger from the bombs except when it is nearly over your head.

And because the bomb takes a very considerable time to reach the earth (probably twenty-five seconds when the Zep is at an altitude of a mile) you will have a reasonable time to "sidestep" it even after seeing it start. But any one who can't run a hundred yards, which is about the limit of the destructiveness of one of these missiles, in twenty-five seconds, especially with the stimulus of a bomb chasing him, hasn't very much excuse for not being blown up in this athletic age.

If, on the other hand, the Zep when sighted appears to be tipped one way or the other—that is, its front or upper end points to the left or right—you are in no danger and can watch its destructive fireworks without any of the unpleasant thrills associated with the peril of imminent death. If the bow appears inclined to the left the vessel will pass to the left, and if tipped the other way, of course, to the right. Some allowance, however, must be made for cross winds, as these great, unwieldy bags have a very considerable side drift.

It is said to be usually easy to make these observations by means of the unaided eye with sufficient accuracy to protect oneself. But in case the Zep should appear very close to an upright position it may help the observer to get into a place where the vessel is partially covered by the edge of a house, a flagpole or other vertical line. If the Zep appears to be climbing the edge of the house or the flagpole toward the zenith the observer is likely to have an immediate personal interest in its visit. In case there is no house or flagpole available a plumb line made by a stone tied to a string will serve the same purpose.

By following these few simple rules, says Professor E. C. Pickering, there is little excuse for any one on the lookout and able to get about with reasonable speed being caught by either a Zeppelin or an aeroplane bomb.

It may be of interest while on the subject to make a few abstracts from the description by a British scientific observer of the fall of these bombs:

"The bombs could be heard approaching as they rushed through the air. The whistling noise—a little like the tearing of calico or the noise made by a gigantic rocket—became a crescendo shriek of terrific intensity just before the bomb struck the ground and the explosion occurred. I estimated the height of the Zeppelin as about 4,000 feet, and, neglecting air resistance, this would give the bombs a final velocity of about 500 feet per second. The actual speed was probably less than this and is considerably less than the velocity of sound (1,100 feet per second), which accounts for the fact that the bombs can be heard before their arrival.

"Standing, as I was, at about 200 yards from where one of the bombs fell the noise of the actual explosion did not appear to be very loud. The reason is probably to be sought in the almost complete numbing of one's senses. The feeling was much the same as if one had been given a hard blow between the eyes with a bolster or some relatively soft object. I heard a piece of bomb 'zip' past me and afterward found it imbedded in a balk of timber about two yards from where I was standing."

Upon the explosion of the bombs a huge cloud of black smoke rose into the air. The destruction caused in their immediate neighborhood showed a curious frankishness. The worst harm was done in what appeared to be pockets of high pressure extending out in various directions, but apart from the possibility of being struck by flying missiles the danger zone did not much exceed twenty-five yards.

Over.

"I guess their honeymoon is about over."

"What makes you think so?"

"He's quit helping her with the dishes and she's stopped watching him through the front window."

A Hardware Talk.

"Yes," said the nut to the nail; "it gave me a terrible wrench to part from him, but I knew it would be only a matter of a few days before he would bolt anyway."

Orders From Italy.

It is expected that Canadian knitting mills will receive some further orders for knitted goods from the Italian Government through the Knit Goods Association of London. The mills are at present working upon a contract for 500,000 shirts for Italy. The order was placed with the Knit Goods Manufacturers' Association of Canada, and the value of the contract is something in excess of $600,000. A similar order was filled last year. The goods now being manufactured will go forward from New York.

It is expected that this order will net the mills a fair profit and supplement their regular business favorably. The results should be seen in the annual statements. At the same time the taking of these orders is likely to make it increasingly difficult for late retail orders to be filled for fall delivery. The larger merchants invariably benefited by the universal experience of the last two years and placed their fall orders early this spring, but a number of the smaller men were content to "trust to luck" or to the chance of the war closing in the early fall and bringing about a slump in the wool and yarn markets, with a downward reaction to themselves in the manufactured gods. However they did this in the face of repeated warnings both of the mills and the wholesale dealers.

Meals for M. P.'s.

When next the Parliament of Canada meets in session, probably some time in January, the members will not have to travel so far for their meals. After the fire, when the two houses moved into the Victoria Memorial Museum, there was no longer a Parliamentary restaurant, nor space in which to put one. Members who had been accustomed to travel no further than an elevator could take them, were forced to seek pastures new and often distant. The steward of the restaurant found his occupation gone. To overcome in part this discomfort, a large house across the street from the Museum has been taken under lease and is now being remodelled and equipped as a restaurant for members and senators. There will be a dining-room, smoking-room, etc., and it is probable that the sergeant-at-arms will have quarters in the building.

When the Back is Lame

IT IS A SIGN OF

KIDNEY TROUBLE

Backache is the signal sent out by the kidneys the minute they become overtaxed.

Those who heed the warning when it first comes, usually have but little trouble. The danger lies in delay. You can cure the lame, aching back by curing the aching kidneys beneath—for it is really the kidneys aching and not the back.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a special remedy in kidney and bladder trouble only, they are not a "cure all."

Mrs. Wm. Traverse, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to your Doan's Kidney Pills. I have been using them for kidney trouble which used to affect my back so I could hardly bend down, nor could I lift anything. I learned about your pills from your B.B.B. Almanac, so I began using them, and in no time I was completely cured. I give all the praise in the world to Doan's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my friends."

When asking for Doan's Pills always see that you get the oblong grey box with the trade mark of a "Maple Leaf."

TERRIBLE IVAN'S LIBRARY.

Supposed Burned in 1812, May Be Still In Existence.

A short time ago a professor of theology in the university at St. Petersburg purchased at a shop in Moscow a manuscript copy of the Gospel dating from prior to A. D. 1000. On examination it was found to have belonged to the great library collected in his youth by Ivan the Terrible, when he believed that he had a divine mission. This library was supposed to have been burned in the great fire of Moscow of 1812.

On a subsequent visit to Moscow the professor traced his book to the family of a laborer, who said that he had found it with several similar volumes in a subterranean passage near the Kremlin.

The famous library of Ivan the Terrible is now supposed to be still hidden in some underground vault, which the efforts of generations have hitherto failed to discover. It was Ivan the Terrible—whose reputation as a great ruler has been obscured by the fascination of his extraordinary excesses—who established the printing press in Russia.

There is a wide field of conjecture as to what might not come to light in the event of this curious library one day being discovered. Ivan the Terrible was in close communication with all the rulers from London to Pekin. One branch of knowledge is almost certain to be well represented in this lost library, and that is the science of black magic. It is equally likely that new codices of Holy Scripture may yet come to light, for Ivan the Terrible undertook to print the Scriptures in the vulgar tongue. Only one thing is certain, that such a library existed and has never been found, nor is it even known to have perished in any of the numerous fires that devastated Moscow. References in the archives to its existence, as well as to the existence of the subterranean roadways, are sufficient to whet the keenest curiosity, but not enough to afford much practical assistance to the investigator.

"Canada in Flanders."

Obed Smith, Commissioner of Emigration, has received, by order of the Canadian Government, ten thousand copies of Sir Max Aitken's book, "Canada in Flanders" for distribution in English schools. Letters acknowledging the books are most striking. The head master, St. Thomas, Bolton, for instance, writes: "Over a hundred of my old boys enlisted in the Canadians." Miss Botheroyd of Grimsby remarked: "My girls correspond with those of a Canadian school, and love it." Miss Brown of Cheltenham says: "We have twenty scholars corresponding regularly with scholars in Canada." W. J. Walsh of Cheetham Hill says: "My eldest son, a sergeant in the 10th Battalion, fell in the charge in the Wood in April, 1915." David Reckie of Bolton says: "My son was killed at Ypres."

Fisheries' Yield.

America's fisheries yield a return of $20,000,000—double that of England.

Laying Bridge Floors.

The most interesting and dangerous looking stage in the construction of a suspension bridge is the building of the floor, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. In this work the builders have nothing to rest their work on and must build out each way from the towers, securing the floor piece by piece to the heavy steel bars suspended from the main cables far above. The work is done with derricks that are equipped with booms long enough to reach out ahead of the finished structure and hold the girders suspended while they are being riveted in place. As each section of the floor is completed the derricks are moved ahead and the construction of the next section is begun.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable." writes Mr. Fred Hinz, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief, and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

HOLD FAMINE PARADE.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 7.—A famine "parade" was arranged here for next week in which 25,000 women will march as a protest against the high prices of food. The parade is being directed by the Housewives League, and the Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Worse Golfer.

An amusing incident was witnessed on the Braid Hill golf course: A gentleman, evidently a tiro, was going over the course, making futile attempts to propel the ball in the direction required, and, indeed, sometimes missing it.

His caddie meekly followed at his heels while he continued his exertions, and eventually the gentleman broke one of his clubs. At this he turned round and remarked deprecatingly to his caddie: "I don't suppose there are many worse players than I?" "Oh, ay, sir," responded the caddie "but I dinna think they play."

A Rabbit and a Whistle.

Did you know that a short, sharp whistle from the mouth would stop a rabbit? It surely does. Next time you see little Molly Cottontail leap from her burrow and make off don't shoot; just whistle. Whether from fear or curiosity I cannot tell, but she will stop still in her tracks. An antelope has been known to do likewise. An African hunter once said that the elephant is the most timid of all animals and can be frightened into a cold sweat by a mysterious noise.

Medicine and Mortgages.

Certainly no patient could receive a dose of medicine like that prescribed to Brown and have the patience to take it. Yet Brown's doctor was a land speculator. When not making out prescriptions he was making out mortgages. It was when in a dual state of mind that he gave Brown the following instructions along with the prescription:

"One half down and the balance every six months for four years."

Danish Germany Suffers More.

A Danish-American who has been visiting the country of his birth this summer and spent several weeks in the districts along the Danish-German border, writes to a friend in London that practically everybody there, on both sides of the frontier, is in mourning, for all these people have relatives or friends fighting in the German front. The Germans have sent the regiments consisting of young men from northern Schleswig to the most exposed positions, and the number of Danish-speaking men who have lost their lives is already larger than the total number of Danes who fell in the war against Prussia and Austria in 1864.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

6530

The closing outline of this dress shows that Fashion tried her hand at novelty with pleasing effect. The little frock is in one piece from the shoulder to the lower edge—a distinctly popular idea in fall dresses for juniors.

In each front and in each half of the back a tuck is made, turned toward the armhole. This treatment adds to the grace of line and gives a fitted effect. A belt at a lowered waistline holds in the graceful folds of the skirt section.

The collar is of the very newest cut and quite becoming; in contrasting goods and in opposing color it gives a touch of smartness and gayety that is appropriate in such models. The sleeve is long, with a snappy cuff to match, although the short sleeve may be chosen finished with a neat roll cuff.

A practical and comfortable frock in style that will impress any girl of taste may be made after this design in serge, gabardine, chevia, plaids, wool poplin or similar weave. A thoughtful parent knows the saving in time and money that the pattern of such dress will mean.

The dress pattern, No. 8,030, cuts in sizes 6-12. To make in size 8 requires 2¾ yards 36 inch goods with ½ yard contrasting and a leather belt.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

PEER AND BUSHMAN.

Earl of Kintore is a Mighty Scot and a Backwoodsman.

Two interesting facts regarding the Earl of Kintore, who has just celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday, are that in his youth he was a very good footballer, while his chief hobby is applied mechanics. Although he is one of the big men of Scotland, where he owns a couple of fine seats and close upon thirty thousand acres, the Earl is one of the most unpretentious of men and added in no small degree to his popularity "down under" when, as Governor of South Australia, he performed the feat of crossing the Australian Continent clad in rough bushman's clothes, boiling his own "billy" of tea by the camp fire and smoking a stubby briar pipe.

Of imposing and handsome appearance, Lord Kintore is a courtier of old standing, for he was Lord-in-Waiting to Queen Victoria for some years, as well as captain of her Yeomen of the Guard, resigning that post when he went to South Australia as governor. It is forty-three years ago since Lord Kintore married a daughter of the sixth Duke of Manchester. He has one son, Lord Falconer, who is famous—as is also Lord Kintore himself — among the crack shots of the day.

It is interesting to note that Lord Kintore represents the ancient family of Keith, Hereditary Knights Marischal of Scotland, a dignity granted to the sixth Earl of Marischal for preserving the regalia of Scotland from the hands of Cromwell. Sir John Keith adopted the expedient of having it buried by night in Kinneff church, previous to making his escape to France. Cromwell thought he had taken the regalia with him, and so abandoned the search. The incident is commemorated in the family motto, which, translated, reads: "What was lost is safe."

TURKS IN GERMANY.

A New Plan for Spreading Kultur in the Orient.

Some 250 Turkish scholars, including a few girls, recently arrived in Germany in order to avail themselves of arrangements which have been made for the more or less free education of a number of Turkish youths at German high schools. This is part of the Teuton scheme to Germanize Turkey. Up to the present 22 different German towns have offered to provide the necessary maintenance for one such scholar each, while 20 German families in Berlin and the provinces have declared their willingness to receive and educate one of the visitors free of charge, and the Turkish war office is paying for the journey and equipment of 15 others who will then be supported by the Germani-Turkish Association. In other cases semi-maintenance is to be provided, and in others still the children will be educated entirely at the expense of their parents. The choice of candidates was entrusted to a committee of the German-Turkish Association, which, it is stated, found it possible to accept almost all the applications received. Asked as to what profession they desired to follow, a large proportion of the children, who range from 14 to 17 years of age, promptly answered, engineering; and it was noticed that nearly all expressed a preference for a practical calling.

Dr. Wilhelm Feldmann, the special correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt in Turkey, writing from Constantinople to his paper, made a point of recommending the visitors to the very special care of his fellow-countrymen. For one thing, he observed, it would probably be very difficult for the young Turks to accustom themselves to the German war menu. The majority of them, he explained, came from good Turkish families which, while the fare of the lower classes was very sparse indeed, were accustomed to live extremely well, while the war had made little difference to their mode of life, meat, eggs, fats, fruits, and excellent white bread being still available in Constantinople for those who could pay the high war prices. He further recommended the greatest circumspection and gentleness in dealing with the children on the ground that the majority of young Turks are very much spoiled, and, therefore very sensitive and likely to permanently resent an affront to their pride. It is of great importance that these Turkish scholars should feel comfortable in Germany, wrote Dr. Feldmann. Teachers and foster-parents may assuredly be looked to to recognise clearly the importance of the mission entrusted to them.

Folkestone's G. O. M.

Alderman J. P. Hoad, twice Mayor of Folkestone in the seventies, is 100 years old. He has an appetite as good as a man of fifty, gets up daily at eight o'clock, and retires at ten o'clock at night. He takes a walk every day, and, although a little deaf, his sight is quite good.

South American Ants.

The ants of South America are even more industrious than those of other countries. Ant tunnels three miles in length are found in Brazil.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It clears out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

MANY RICH FINDS.

Stefansson Party Has Made Valuable Discoveries of Copper.

The seven members of the party of Dr. Rudolph M. Anderson, commander of the southern branch of the Stefansson Canadian expedition into the far north, are preparing to make reports to the Canadian Government. They report many interesting discoveries, including findings of great quantities of copper, new species of small mammals, and perhaps new species of flowers. Stefansson, it was reported, was believed to be continuing his explorations north of Prince Patrick Island.

"We were instructed to survey the copper deposits already known and seek new ones. Every explorer from the earliest times had noted that the Esquimos east of the Mackenzie used knives, spear heads, and other weapons and utensils hammered from copper, and the Coppermine River, which empties into the Arctic, got its name from mineral discovered many years ago. We found on Coronation Gulf and Bathurst Inlet vast deposits of copper of low grade. We were not equipped to undertake mining operations, but upon the sides of cliffs we could measure the depth of successive flows of amygaloidal lava containing nuggets of copper. An Eskimo brought to us a lump of copper weighing forty pounds. There were seams in the lava that had been filled with pure copper. Geologist O'Neill took many samples of rock, which will be assayed. He also made many estimates of the area of ore in sight. This information is for the Canadian Government, and not to be published by us. The ore had many of the characteristics of the Lake Superior copper rock. It is workable from the surface, and is near navigable waters. It would be feasible to construct a railroad from the Mackenzie River, which is navigable five months of the year, to Great Bear Lake, which also is navigable much of the year. A further railroad line could be built from the lake to the copper fields, enabling the transportation of the ore to the interior of Canada by way of the Mackenzie River.

"We probably have discovered a number of new species of small mammals, and we shall find out about that when the skins and skeletons are examined at Ottawa. It would not be possible to find a new species or even a new geographical variety of the large mammals. Our botanical specimens probably contain new species of flowers, but we do not yet know for a certainty.

"The expedition we regard as having accomplished its purpose."

Crooked Genius.

Once upon a time the city of London had to pay a county rate, but this was legally abolished many years ago. A certain alderman, who had at one time been connected with local taxation, hit upon the brilliant idea of reviving this obsolete rate and turning [illegible] the proper demand notes printed, distributed them in the usual fashion and the recipients paid up like lambs. The swindler had a regular office, a collector and all the usual accompaniments. It is said that he made over $15,000 a year, and no one ever thought of questioning the legality of the rate. If the crooked genius had been satisfied with a couple of years' profit and then quietly discontinued the collection of the rate the chances are that no one would ever have been any the wiser. But he was greedy and kept on year after year, until by chance a demand note fell into the hands of someone who knew.—Passing Show.

FLOGGED OUT OF THE ARMY.

Melancholy Fate of "The Whistler at the Plow."

Among the many pen names of the past "The Whistler at the Plow" was the happiest. It was chosen by Alexander Somerville, long since dead, who wrote the sweetest prose ever penned about the fields and woods and hamlets and the beasts, birds, reptiles and people of Canada.

I glimpsed him once—a stupendous Scot, with long white hair hanging over his shoulders and an expression of supreme sadness on the noble face. But he had the clear blue eye of the Scot—an eye that had an amber glint in it when he was roused.

He was an ex-soldier, but he did not serve out his term of enlistment in the army; neither did he get an honorable discharge.

Alexander Somerville was a private in one of the crack cavalry regiments of Great Britain and Ireland—I think it was the famous Scots Greys, but I am not sure. He must have been a magnificent looking soldier.

At the time of the great Chartist movement in England he was stationed with his regiment somewhere in the Midlands. The Chartists were looked upon as an incipient French revolution. Their meetings were forbidden, coercive measures were undertaken, and things began to look bad. The Chartists—honest, I can't tell you what a Chartist was, but he was, I fancy, an ultra Liberal or Radical of those days—decided to hold a procession. The authorities decided to prevent it, and a bloody clash was billed for the next Sunday.

The Scots Greys were ordered to rough whet their sabers in preparation to resist the mob. A saber so treated breaks bones and tears and bruises the flesh, but it doesn't sink deep. It was a terrible order, and Alexander Somerville, the future "Whistler at the Plow," refused to obey. He could not draw his sword on his fellow countrymen who were demanding liberty.

A corporal's guard seized Private Alexander Somerville. He was tried for insubordination by a court martial and was sentenced to be flogged and then dismissed from the army. He suffered a fearful flogging, with the whole garrison and as many of the citizens as could see looking on—suffered without a cry or a groan—and when the cruel, brutal business—a business that would have made Sitting Bull or Red Cloud miserably ashamed—was over he came out to this free land, a lone, broken and melancholy man, to sing of freedom among the free hills.

HAD BOILS

FOR SIX MONTHS

B. B. B. DROVE THEM AWAY

When the blood becomes impure the very first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, sores, etc., and to get rid of these troubles you must cleanse the blood thoroughly with a good blood remedy.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters.

Thousands of people from one end of Canada to the other have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but words of praise for its cleansing properties.

Mr. Rufus Berry, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I want to say a few words about your medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters. I had boils for over six months and sometimes was so bad I could not work. I tried lots of cures but nothing would drive them away for good until I took B.B.B. In a short time I was all better. It is a dandy medicine. I keep it in the house all the time."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., but so well and favourably is it known that there are many imitations on the market. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

Indigestion Resulted From An Inactive Liver

The Bowe's Became Constipated and the Whole Digestive System Upset

With many people constipation becomes a habit. And it is a dangerous habit which is certain sooner or later to cause serious disease.

"Daily movement of the bowels" is the first and most important rule of health. When the liver becomes torpid the flow of bile into the intestines is stopped and the bowels become constipated. But you can readily overcome this condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. There is no treatment obtainable which so promptly awakens the activity of the liver and bowels and thereby corrects derangements of the digestive system.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, of Beaver Brook, Albert Co., N.B., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a great medicine for constipation. I have suffered from constipation ever since I can remember, but got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so benefited that I began to study this malady. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion. I cannot praise this medicine too highly, and would advise anyone suffering from indigestion or constipation to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. My husband also claims that these pills have done him more good than any medicine he ever used. You are at liberty to use this letter."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills positively relieve and cure torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, indigestion, backache and kidney disease. Put it to the test. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

SENT HER SIX SONS

Ottawa French-Canadian Woman Did Her Bit Nobly

One of the most inspiring examples of a mother's patriotism that surely can be found anywhere is that of Mrs. Marie Lafrance, of 542 Wellington street, Ottawa. She had six grown-up sons, every one of them enlisted. One returned to Ottawa because flat foot failed to get him by in the final medical examination. One son fought in France 27 months before he was wounded; another, after fighting a year, went into hospital in England with prostration from the hardships of the trenches, which brought on rheumatism. Another son arrived in England about that time with a battery, another then joined a battery and the only other son was reported as missing from his battalion since the attack on Courcelette. The sons of Mrs. Lafrance are: Pte. Joseph Lafrance, enlisted Aug. 22nd, 1914; Pte. Alfred Lafrance, enlisted July 24th, 1915, aged 39 years; Pte. N. Lafrance, enlisted July 28th, 1915; Gunner Max Lafrance, enlisted March 5th, 1916; Gunner Oliver Lafrance, enlisted May, 1916; ex-Sergt. Henry Lafrance, rejected on final medical examination, enlisted Aug. 2nd, 1915.

The sad news that Noe, her favorite son, had been missing came from the Militia Department and the little woman was beside herself with grief. Noe was 28 years old. He was with the famous French-Canadian battalion that took the village of Courcelette and was found to be missing from the ranks when the roll-call was made after the Germans had been decisively pushed back. His brother, Fred, was in the same charge and writing from Lansdowne Road Hospital, Cardiff, Wales, where he was sent to recover from trench sickness, he said, "When we jumped the parapet Noe had to go with his own section, and I never saw him after. When we came back I looked around to see if I could find Noe, but I could not see him. Then I asked the boys if they had seen him and they said, 'No,' so I don't know if he is wounded."

"ALL IN ONE MORNING"

Canadian Soldier Experiences Several Very Narrow Escapes

A Port Elizabeth soldier writes: "In one hour on Saturday I was buried twice by great shells. The second time my pals had to dig me out. Again on Sunday I was buried almost at the same spot. From 10 a.m., when the fun started, I had a good many close calls. My rifle was badly damaged—hit in four places. First, the bayonet was smashed by a bullet; second, a bullet went clean through the butt about eight inches from my shoulder; third, a bullet smashed the woodwork about the centre. The rifle was still good then, but the last shot damaged it altogether. It struck the bolt just above the magazine, and split the steel so much that I couldn't work the bolt. I threw it away then and took one from a dead man lying near.

"One bullet made a hole right through the top of my steel helmet, taking a little hair with it. Another struck the top cartridge pouch of my equipment just below the heart and exploded seven cartridges. Another took the front of the pouch clean away. Another severed the strap attached to my water bottle. Another went clean through my waterproof sheet which was rolled and strapped on the back of my belt, and a whizz-bang shell nose-cap knocked a small roll of sandbags clean off my shoulder, to the strap of which it was fastened with a piece of string. How is that for a narrow shave? All in one morning, too."

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

BROTHER AFTER BROTHER

Seeks Shortest Route to Front on Hearing Tragic News

Garfield Silcox, whose name appeared among the Canadian killed, was a well known civil engineer. During the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway he was engaged on that road on the Skeena river section in British Columbia, and on the section just east of the Rockies. When the war broke out he had a residency on the Hudson Bay railway. He enlisted in Winnipeg with the 45th Battalion and left for overseas in March, 1916, and transferred to the Mounted Rifles. He was a native of Swansea, Wales.

L. B. Silcox, a brother of the late Garfield Silcox, who has occupied a position in the M. B. railway as a divisional engineer for some years, arrived in civilization on the same day en route to England, where he intended joining the flying corps, after visiting his mother, who was seriously ill at her home in Swansea. When he read of his brother's death he immediately signed up with the engineers to leave for overseas at once. Mr. Silcox carried out important location and constructional works for the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay railways during ten years.

MISSIONARIES AND WAR

Canadians Give Money and Lives—Averted Revolutions

That had it not been for, the missionaries Great Britain might not have been able to hold India, and that had it not been for the missionaries Africa would have been in a blaze of insurrection at the time the European war broke out was asserted by Rev. Dr. Endicott, general secretary of missions for the Methodist Church in Canada, who labored for nearly twenty years as a missionary in the Oriental field.

Dr. Endicott said the heathen of the world was praying not for the downfall of the British Empire in the present war but for its success, because the heathen was favorably inclined towards the Union Jack. This feeling was due to the work of the British missionary who while ultra-loyal to his own country and the empire, was absolutely devoted to the country in which he labored. He championed the cause of the people among whom he worked and therefore won their sympathy and confidence.

Dr. Endicott said the missionaries on his Church had contributed very largely of their salaries to patriotic work. There was not a son of a foreign missionary of eligibility for military service who was not at the front. Some of the missionaries themselves had donned the khaki.

"DILUTION" OF LABOR

How Men Repair and Women Watch Shell Lathes

The setter-up, in a British shell factory where women do the machining, is the man who keeps the lathes in order. His duties are equivalent to those of a chauffeur who undertakes running repairs. Previously the setter-up was the machinist, and in this capacity he tended the machine as well as working it. When the dilution of labor came, five out of every six setters-up were 'combed out,' the remaining one undertaking the setting up of the six machines, on to which girl operators were introduced. He makes $30 to $35 a week, for, in addition to his wages, he receives a bonus on [illegible] under his care.

The mechanic is the specialist who, when the machine is so out of repair that it cannot be used, takes it down, puts it in order, builds it up, and hands it back again to the care of the setter-up.

ELIMINATES MIDDLEMEN

Chicago, Dec. 7.—Mayor Benjamin Bosse of Evansville, Ind., is not waiting for Congressional investigations to reduce the high cost of living. He expects to do it himself by produce business. Bosse is in Chicago contracting with the wholesalers for carload lots of potatoes and other food products, which he will sell to the public direct from the cars, thus eliminating the middlemen's profits.

OLD-TIME HORSEBACK DUEL.

Man and Horse Killed, Opponent Dangerously Wounded.

LEXINGTON Ky., Dec. 6.—One of the old-time duels, such as made the blue grass country the chosen field of honour on which to settle disputes of the local aristocracy, was staged at sunrise the other day in Clinton County.

Mounted on blooded horses, Jeff Blevins and Steven Hubblestone cantered with their seconds over the dewy grass to a secluded spot previously selected.

The men shook hands, then galloped on their horses 25 feet in opposite directions, with revolvers drawn. Wheeling at a given signal they opened fire.

Hubblestone was killed and his horse was shot from under him. Blevins was dangerously wounded.

CANADIAN DISCIPLINE

"Thorough" Became Real Motto of Kitchener's Own Battalion

Perhaps the strictest military discipline ever seen in Canada was that introduced in the 244th (Kitchener's Own) Battalion organized by officers of the Victoria Rifles, a Montreal militia regiment. Canada has never been noted for the niceties of military discipline, the free Colonial spirit tending to nothing but the essentials of military law and order, but a new standard was set by the organization which from the first sought to do credit to the name and memory of the late Earl Kitchener of Khartoum. When this body first went into quarters in Montreal citizens began to notice that officers of the 244th were saluted by their men even in such places as departmental store buildings. Coming up the stairs from the basement to the street floor of such buildings privates were seen to come to attention and salute their superiors, who smilingly returned the salute. Officers of other units were frankly amazed at such conduct, recognizing it as entirely unnecessary for rankers to "bother" with salutes unless on the street. At this the staff of the 244th only smiled; it was part of their system. "Thorough" was the motto of Kitchener's Own Battalion—and if the men took it too literally no harm was done.

"We do not ask the men to do such things; we don't even suggest it, but we are pleased, because no regiment can be too smart and this is evidence that the 244th is going to be as different as its name," said an officer in explanation of the punctiliousness of his company in regard to the details of saluting. He also pointed out that as the 244th was taking men of all classes from all parts of Canada there was no pride in locality or in old regimental history to create that intangible something "esprit de corps" without which a battalion was a mob of 1,100 persons. Thoroughness and efficiency and pride in these things would have to make up for the drawbacks and make the battalion fit to bear into battle Lord Kitchener's colors. The regiment had assurance, from Sir Sam Hughes to Lieut.-Col. McRobie, that it would not be broken up in England to reinforce other Montreal or other units and it had to give the authorities a chance to make good their promises.

LINEMAN ELECTRIFIED LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED.

Moses Tyrrell of Oakville Held Wire Which Touched Radial Cable

OAKVILLE, Dec. 7.—While engaged in stringing a new line into a residence here yesterday afternoon Moses Tyrrell, aged 36, an employee of the Oakville Electric Light & Water Commission, and a life-long resident of this place, was electrocuted. He was standing on the ground beside a pole holding a live wire, which in some manner caught over the cable of the Radial Railway, and, short circuiting, killed the lineman almost instantly. Dr. H. Stead was hastily summoned, but the pulmotor was used, but life was extinct. A jury has been empanelled and an inquest will be held.

THE WOES OF IRELAND

writer, "was in an abnormal condition. It had been drained for three generations of its most vigorous stocks. Upwards of two million of its men had gone away and been as completely lost to it as if they had been wiped out by high explosive shells in the trenches on the Somme or on the slopes of Gallipoli. While Ireland's man power was considered merely as an economic and industrial factor, we were accustomed to be told even by friendly economists, that emigration was a gain, not a loss. It was, we were assured, a natural process, tending to equalize the Irish population to Ireland's economic capacity; good for those who went by leading them to more prosperous lands, good for those who remained by raising the average wealth and the standard of living. Even such a broad-minded Unionist as Lord Courtney put on record his opinion that not until the population of Ireland had fallen to three and a half millions would the proper balance between population and industrial resources have been struck. Only now, when mature manhood is being considered in terms of 'gun-fodder' has the waste of Irish man-power come to be regarded as possibly a mistake. 'Missile troops' are needed, and the 'missile armies' of the Celt are to be found mainly outside the bounds of the British Empire".

THE YOUNG GO, THE OLD LEFT

The populations of Scotland and Ireland are not far apart. Ireland has four and a quarter millions to Scotland's four and three three-quarters, but upon the quality of the population, viewed from the standpoint of their ability to continue a national existence, emigration has made a world of difference. From Ireland went in 30 years 544,397 males; from Scotland 155,961. It follows directly that whereas there are over 2,000,000 children under in Scotland, there are only 1,250,000 in Ireland. Per contra, the number of persons over 60 is proportionately large in Ireland. There are 576,789 to Scotland's 391,029.

The moral of all this is that "Scotland would have to lose from 200,000 to 300,000 men killed in action before her comparative power would be reduced to the Irish level, even in Ireland did not lose a man." What conscription means to Ireland in the light of these facts, is not sacrifice, in the same sense as that term applies to England and Scotland, but immolation; not the protection of a country, but a lowering of the vitality of the race, to be followed by stagnation and decline.

little more consideration than those for whom he spoke.

Return Cards January 1.

Mr. Bennett was given more respectful attention than Mr. Paterson received, but he, too, was often interrupted, and had difficulty at times in proceeding. The first interruption from the gallery was received with a storm of hisses.

"This is a time when you, young man, should ask yourself 'What am I doing for the State?'" Mr. Bennett then told of his visit to the front.

"Why didn't you stay there?" asked a voice in the gallery.

"Why didn't you go?" shot back Mr. Bennett.

Broke Up Abruptly.

Mr. Bennett stated that the keynote of National Service was 'duty' and 'service.' All men could not join the colours, but all could serve the State. He explained in detail the card system census and stated that all cards must be filled in by January 1.

At the conclusion of Mr. Bennett's address the chairman asked the audience to sing "O Canada" again, "just to show we are patriots." There was a chorus of refusal, but when the band struck up the air the audience rose and sang. The meeting then ended abruptly, following another outburst of noise from the gallery.

In his address early in the evening Premier Borden was well received. He was introduced by Judge Gravel, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and H. B. Walker, president of the Board of Trade. Mr. Walker observed that "there are in Canada a great many people doing nothing, and doing it well."

Sir Robert was given an ovation on rising, and the audience sang "O Canada." He began his address in French and the use of the Provincial language was received with applause. In his main address, which was in English, the Prime Minister spoke of the justice of the British cause, and of the splendid effort put forward by the Canadian army. He emphasized the need of mobilizing the human energy of the country. "Do not mistake me," he said. "I have not come to make a recruiting speech, but to address you in the interest of national service." Continuing, he said, in part:

"Mere numbers do not constitute an effective army. Men must be trained, disciplined and equipped. Every arm of military service must be organized. There must be long preparation before a modern army with effective striking power can be created.

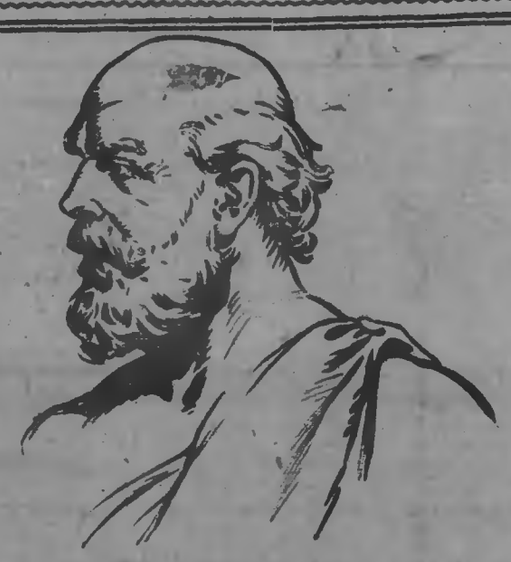
"To this end the Government have determined that an estimate shall be made of the man-power of Canada. The work thus undertaken is of supreme importance. I have, therefore, come before you to urge that the response of the Canadian people shall be adequate to the need.

"Canada is a state within a greater state, the Empire itself. To the state each citizen owes a duty of service; there never has been and perhaps there never will be occasion in which that duty is more manifest, more insistent, or more imperative than at present.

Render Service to Empire.

"So the Director-General and the Board of National Service find it their present duty to estimate the human energy of Canada, and to have that estimate accompanied by such information as will enable each unit to render for the need of the State the service which he is best qualified to give, the service which is of the most value to his country. They have invoked the aid of all representative bodies and persons who seem best qualified to give the necessary assistance. Members of parliament and of the Legislatures, the clergy, the teachers, all representative associations and societies, the Boards of Trade, the commercial and financial institutions of the country—all these have been asked to co-operate in this most important and necessary work. But in the end reliance must be placed upon the appreciation by the people of the need and their conception of the duty which lies at their door.

"It is the united and unconquered spirit of France and Belgium that I would commend to my fellow countrymen if it were my last word. The Entente of Great Britain and of France has been consecrated by the blood of their children shed in a cause which concerns issues greater even than the destiny of these great nations. Let that Entente be crowned likewise in Canada by our united and inspiring devotion to the same imperishable cause."



SOCRATES WAS RIGHT!

Cattle Markets

Receipts at the Union Stock Yards yesterday were 78 cars, made up of 702 cattle, 34 calves, 2,866 hogs, 822 sheep and lambs.

Cattle market is strong, and choice quality Christmas beef steers were selling high. Offerings for yesterday were comparatively light, though many loads of very choice well-finished were coming in for the market and annual Fat Stock Show. Prices were ruling high for anything sold, indicating that some high prices will be realized at the annual sale.

Sheep and lambs were strong.

Lumber Life Was Too Much For Students

Two fortunes remain uncarved in the wilderness of Saskatchewan. They are those of Paul Martin and Matthew Dick, fortune hunters of Chicago.

It was tough.

The two young men in lumberjack mackinaws, cruiser boots, and fledgling whiskers, are on their way to Chicago. Instead of two prodigal sons coming home, the homes have gone to the prodigals. Messrs Dick and Martin probably will find what they have sought—their fortunes. For they will be back with their folks.

Young Messrs. Dick and Martin were "discovered" in a lumber camp, north of Prince Albert, Sask. The atmosphere of Yale University, which they deserted to seek fortune in the wide spaces of the bleak north, had suffered slightly. Their faces were tanned and whipped by the sun and wind of the Canadian plains. Replacing the nifty raiment of the undergraduate, they wore the rough woollens from the slop chest of the lumber camp "push".

WENT INTO "WILDERNESS"

About three weeks ago they left Yale with the announcement they were bound for the open world. They landed in Winnipeg, broken in purse, but haughty in spirit. They pawned their remaining effects, and pushed on into the wilderness. It was decided to work through the winter in the lumber camps and then break west and north into the gold fields in the spring. Spring was a long way off.

In Prince Albert the young men applied to A. L. Mattes, the manager of the Prince Albert Lumber Company, for employment. They were told a waggon would be going out to the camp in the morning. Fortune was smiling. It had been no trouble to land a job.

In the morning the westarers were on hand. They found the driver of the waggon and were told it was about to start for Shoal Creek. Nothing slack, they prepared to mount the waggon and thereby learned a lesson in woods manners. "Tote" waggons are not for lumberjacks. Lumberjacks walk. A "tote teamster" is the king of his four wheeled realm. Messrs. Dick and Martin hit the trail.

BACK HOME FOR THEM.

After six miles each of their feet weighed fifty pounds. At evening twenty miles had been negotiated and the young men began to be afraid they wouldn't die. It appeared that the lumber business was not any great shucks anyway. Their boots were busted, their toes leaked out, and their soul ached for a kind word.

They caught a kind teamster back to the Prince Albert ferry. The little Canadian town was the most beautiful thing they had ever seen.

At the Avenue hotel they opened diplomatic relations with the world they had cut off. At first, according to advices from the northwest town, there was silence. Finally came transportation. They started for Minneapolis with the prospect of meeting their families there.

SWISS NOT TO OFFER BELGIAN PROTEST

Geneva, via Paris, December 7.

The Swiss Government has refused to consider the petition presented by the cantonal Councils of Geneva, Vaud, Valais, and Neutchatel, asking the government to protest to Germany against the deportation of civilians from Belgium and North France.

The government says that since the war began it has received 89 protests against alleged violations of the law of nations, 37 from the Central Powers, 48 from the Allies, and four from one neutral state, and explains that as it has been unable to investigate each case adequately it is reluctantly obliged to refrain from action.

COUGHED TERRIBLY

How This Canadian Girl Was Cured.

We want you all to know that all letters like the following are truthful and genuine.

"I am a chocolate dipper. I work and breathe the fumes. I contracted a bad bronchial trouble. I coughed and coughed so it almost unstrung my brain. I became all run down. I got discouraged because no remedy seemed to help me and it was beginning to interfere with my work. Finally I remembered that Vinol had done wonders for my mother and decided to try it myself. I noticed an improvement in three days and it has completely cured my trouble. Before I took it I used to be sick to my stomach. Vinol cured that."—Agnes Hepworth, 319 Dundas St., Woodstock, Ont.

The reason that cough syrups fail in such cases is because they are palliative only, while Vinol removes the cause being a constitutional remedy in which are combined beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates. It strengthens and revitalizes the entire system and assists nature to expel the disease.

BERLIN CLAIMS THE CAPTURE OF 10,000 ROUMANIAN TROOPS YESTERDAY

Retreat of Roumanian Forces in the Predeal and Altschanz Passes Has Been Cut Off According to To-day's Berlin Statement---Teutonic Allies Have Made Overtures to Greece Offering to Reopen Land Communications Provided Greece Throws in Her Lot With Them.

BULGARS AND HUNS BEATEN BY SERBS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, via Sayville, December 8.—The German advance on the line beyond Bucharest and Ploesti is proceeding so rapidly that the Roumanian forces on the frontier mountains in the Predeal and Altschanz passes have had their retreat cut off, to-day's official War Office statement asserted. In the whole section of Roumania between the mountains and the Danube the German pursuit of the enemy continues. The German ninth army yesterday took over 10,000 prisoners.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 8.—Mutual intermittant shelling was reported by General Sir Douglas Haig from the British front to-day.

Lloyd George Is Assured of Success

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, December 8.—David Lloyd-George stood assured of success in his formation of the new government to-day, and the very promptness with which he surmounted all the obstacles in the way of such a "reconstruction," served to solidify the nation behind the "Little Welshman." The new Premier's whirl wind mastery of the political situation yesterday was universally taken as indicative of his future general conduct of the administration in tackling difficult problems either foreign or domestic. "The success and rapidity with which Lloyd-George is fulfilling his commission," the Gazette asserted, "indicates we will shortly have an administration not only with a strong personality and practical talent, but armed with the nation's confidence. Yesterday's achievement gives a more vivid impression than anything else of the striking gifts of leadership which the new Premier possesses."

German Troops Are Driven From Positions

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), December 8.—German troops were driven from positions east of the slope of Hill 304, on the left bank of the Meuse, which they occupied Wednesday, to-day's French official statement declared French troops ousted the enemy. This was the only incident reported from the western front.

SALONIKA, December 8.—Repeated counter attacks against positions they lost to the Serbians recently by heavily reinforced Teutonic columns in the region of Grunishte were in vain, the Serbian official statement declared to-day. There was serious fighting in progress yesterday along the entire Macedonian front. The enemy lost heavily.

ROME, December 8.—Germany and Austria have offered to reopen land communications to Greece if Greece will declare war on the Allies, according to a wireless despatch received here from Switzerland to-day. "The reopening of land communications" can only mean that Germany and Austria have pledged the clearing away of all Allied forces from Bulgaria, south to Greece, possibly also from the Macedonian front.

LONDON, December 8.—The British Anchor liner Caledonia, 9,800 tons, is believed sunk, Lloyds announced to-day. She was built in 1904.

CARRIED 730 OF CREW

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, Dec. 8.—The French battleship Suffren is officially classified as lost in a statement issued to-day by the Minister of Marine. Apparently all hands were lost. The vessel left Gibraltar for the Orient, November 24th and has not been heard of since. This vessel was rumored lost some days ago. The Suffren was an 18 knot battleship of 12,750 tons and carried 730 men, four 12-inch guns, ten 6.4 inch guns and various lesser armament. The Suffren was authorized in July 1899 and cost $6,000,000.

THE SUBJECT OF PROPHETIC TRUTH

Interesting Topic Will Form a Series of Sermons to Be Delivered in Bethany Tabernacle

Many people, in these days of world upheaval, are very much interested in what the Bible teaches about "things to come." To all such, a good opportunity is offered to study this engrossingly interesting subject by attending for the next few Sundays, the evening services at Bethany Tabernacle, where Pastor Doner is taking up this subject. He speaks eloquently in a convincing manner, and does not confuse his hearers in a maze of figures or imagining, but bases his assertions on the Bible. He evidently believes the Book through and through. This series of talks began last Sunday evening, and will be continued for a week at the evening services. He is wonderfully helped by the singing of Miss Jones, the congregational Deaconess — who gives the message in song from the heart, and believes in what she sings.

$10,000 Car of Salmon Received By Mr. Rishor

A shipment of canned salmon recently received by Mr. Chas. Rishor, wholesale grocer, comprised 1,400 cases representing a total value of over $10,000. This carload fresh from a British Columbia cannery approximated 100,240 tins, half of them pounds, and the remainder of half-pound size. The pack of first grade salmon this year was a comparatively light one, and pound tins retail at 20 cents. Mr. Rishor's shipment is of course for the retail trade in this city, and throughout an extensive district for whom orders are already being made up and forwarded.

ASKS MANUFACTURERS NOT TO HIRE MEN WHO ARE FIT FOR ARMY

Lt.-Col. Ackerman Takes Up This Important Question With Heads of Local Industries--Applicants For Positions Should Have Rejection Slips or Be Able to Show Their Discharge From the Forces--Three Recruits Added This Morning---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Lt.-Col. C. H. Ackerman of the 247th Battalion took up with the manufacturers of the city to-day, the question of employing men physically fit for the army. The Commanding Officers of the Peterborough Battalion asked the manufacturers not to employ men who could not show a discharge from the army or a rejection slip testifying that they were unfit for military service. He found the manufacturers anxious to assist him in this and young men who endeavour to find employment in local manufacturing concerns in the future had better make sure that they are not fit for active service before they ask the manufacturers for a position. In one local factory twelve women have recently replaced men and this system it is considered likely will be extended, while the increase in the number of returned soldiers will also help to boom things in the labour market.

Three recruits were taken on the strength of the 247th Battalion this morning, Ptes. Wesley Everitt, A. W. Lewis, and John Fagan, making a total of fourteen secured so far this week, by far the best showing for months. The 100 mark is now in sight and Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his officers and men are making every effort to get around the first century buoy as soon as possible.

Last night Mrs. R. R. Hall kindly threw open her home on McDonnel Street to the Otonabee Chapter I.O. D.E. for a recital given by Mr. Frank Whithouse on the Aeolian Vocolian. A large number, over 60 attended the recital and expressed themselves delighted with the programme. The financial results were very gratifying over $15.00 being realised.

Although there have been no official developments in regard to the home coming of the 93rd band, it is known that at least one member of the organization has reached Canada. The relatives of Bandsman R. A. Browne have received a telegram reading, "Arrived in Canada to-day". The wire was a surprise inasmuch as the last letter received from him did not state he was leaving. It is not known whether or not any other bandsmen are with him. Although one report says that an advance guard of six 93rd bandsmen has arrived bringing the band instruments with them.

GUNNER DORRIS WOUNDED

Mrs. Wm. Dorris, Wescott street has received a field card from her son Gunner Ambrose "Buck" Dorris, stating that he was wounded on November 1916 and admitted to hospital. The card said that he was not seriously wounded. Gunner Dorris was a member of the 4th Battery, C.F.A. and left Peterborough with the first quota of men for the front as one of the recruits enlisted by the 24th Field Battery.

Orderly Officer for Saturday—Lieut A. H. Cameron.

Next for duty—Lieut. C. G. Shaw.

(3) STRENGTH.

No. 1060065—Pte. Wm. H. Musgrave, is taken on the strength as of December 6th, 1916 and posted to A Co'y.

(4) DISTRICT ORDERS No. 946—Rations and Allowances:—It is published for the information of all concerned, that all ranks in receipt of rations or allowance in lieu an extra twenty-five cents has been authorized for December 25th. The extra amount will be credited in the Pay List to be expended by the Officers Commanding Units as thought best.

R. B. Brooks, Lieut and Acting Adj. 247th Battalion, C.E.F.

In Wednesday's casualty list appeared the name of Pte. Richard Gregory, of Haliburton, who died of wounds at the front. Pte. Gregory, who was the first member of the 109th Lindsay Battalion to make the sacrifice, was a married man with two children. He formerly resided on a farm, but moved into the village of Haliburton just before enlisting. He was a man of splendid physique and a crack rifle shot.

Peterborough citizens will be interested in knowing that Col. Proudfoot, who was twice buried alive on the Somme front, and is now in an English hospital recovering from severe wounds is a first cousin of the Misses Lendrum, 699 Water street, who have nine Canadian cousins of their name serving the Empire as well as many English cousins, including Major General Lendrum. Their brother, Lieut. W. G. Lendrum, formerly a photographer on Charlotte street here, enlisted in Calgary and was one of the officers entertained by the Duke of Connaught on his last visit west.

The following decorations have been awarded by the general officer commanding-in-chief of the British forces in France to members of the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion for bravery at Courcelette.

Military Medals — Pte. J. Brice, Sergt. F. Maheux, Ottawa; Pte. D. B. Bell, Port Hope; Lance-Corp. J. D. Golding, Port Hope; Sergt. A. A. Trappitt, Ottawa; Corp. W. Ferrier, Pembroke; Pte. A. Jockham, Pte. J. R. Hill, Lakefield; Pte. A. W. Coleman, Cobourg; Pte. D. Rae, Pte. C. Roberts, Kingston; Lance-Corp. F. Davern, or Davey, Peterborough; Lance-Corp. C. Manners, Peterborough; Lance-Sergt. A. J. Kitchener, Newcastle; Lance-Corp. F. H. Gillette, Belleville; Pte. V. L. Fraser, Kingston.

It is thought probable that the F. Davern in this list is really F. Davey of Peterborough. There is no Davern in the list of the 21st signallers, while Frank Davey of this city has been a member of the section since it was organized. If this is correct it means another Peterborough soldier has won the military medal.

Instructions have been sent to medical officers examining recruits with respect to the new eye test, as follows: "(1) Standard of vision to be as follows—If he can read D-200 at 20 feet, with the right eye without glasses, and not less than D-80 with the left eye at the same distance without glasses, he will be considered 'fit'."

LIBERAL PARTY WILL SUPPORT THE NEW GOVERNMENT

Lloyd George is Assured of the Backing of 584 Votes in House of Commons—Asquith Explains the Recent Crisis

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Dec. 8, 3 P.M.—A meeting of the Liberal members to-day adopted resolutions of confidence in their leader and the former Prime Minister, Herbert Asquith, and expressed their determination to support the new Lloyd George government in the prosecution of the war.

Former Premier Asquith presided at this meeting. He explained in full detail all the circumstances leading up to the change in the government, particularly defining his own position in the crisis which led to dissolution of the coalition cabinet. About 200 Liberals from both houses of Parliament, including a number of former Ministers, attended the meeting of the party, which was held at noon in the Reform Club. Lloyd George is now assured of the support of 584 votes in the House of Commons out of 670.

Referring to Lloyd George's suggestion for a smaller war council, Asquith said the conditions were so stipulated that he could not accept. The former Premier charged the existence of a carefully engineered campaign against Foreign Secretary Grey and himself, but he acquitted Lloyd George of any complicity in this movement. Asquith warmly commended Lloyd George's services during the war and paid equal tribute to Grey. Lloyd George's courage and foresight have been invaluable to the existing government, he declared.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—According to the Chronicle, King George yesterday wrote to former Premier Asquith offering him an Earldom and the Order of the Garter. It is understood that Mr. Asquith asked permission to decline both honours.

Asquith's speech before the Liberal meeting was described as a splendidly patriotic utterance, a vigorous appeal for unity in war. He pointed out that each of his late colleagues in the coalition cabinet had acted in accordance with his own dictates of conscience, and concluded with a rousing appeal emphasizing the importance of strenuous adhesion to whatever government was in power, for the purpose of winning the war. The late Premier was repeatedly interrupted with cheers.

Asquith did not resign the leadership of the Liberals in the Commons, but merely his position as Prime Minister.

FIRE ON A CANADIAN HORSE TRANSPORT

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The second fire within a week on ships carrying supplies to the Allied governments was discovered to-day, aboard the Canadian Transportation Company's ship, Armonia. The boat was lying in the Erie Basin taking on horses for France. Fire boats flooded her until she listed badly. The damage was slight.

Clarence Sampson Is Arrested in Watertown

According to Private Information Received by the Examiner the Much-Wanted Dummer Man Was Located in New York State Town

FOR COMPLICITY IN THE CATTLE STEALING CASES

Clarence Sampson, who is wanted by the local authorities for alleged complicity in the recent Dummer cattle thefts, was arrested in Watertown, N. Y., to-day, according to a private wire received by the Examiner this afternoon. He is a brother-in-law of Davis and William Hill, who were sentenced on Tuesday, Dec. 5th to terms of five and two years respectively in the Kingston penitentiary for stealing cattle from James Matthews, E. A. Carveth, John Dean, Wm. Davis and other Dummer farmers.

It will be remembered that when the authorities raided the Hill household their only material capture was Davis Hill. Some weeks later William Hill came into the city and delivered himself up to Chief Thompson, but Clarence Sampson eluded numerous and active posses that combed the Dummer countryside for miles. The police expressed the belief that he had made his way to the lumber camps on the North Shore, but on the face of it this was the veriest conjecture.

But it remained for Chief Thompson's long arm to reach over into Watertown, N.Y. and to confront Sampson with the warrant he evaded by his intimate knowledge of the runways and hiding places in the Dummer woods. The information of his arrest in a New York state city certainly contained a big element of surprise. The fact that he had succeeded in making so clean an escape was even more than most people in this vicinity expected. On the other hand the law is fully if somewhat tardily vindicated. Its arm is evidently as long and its peering eye as undimmed as ever.

Wanted as a Witness.

When Davis Hill received his hearing, Crown Attorney Hatton, who by the way is out of the city to-day, the case was more or less held up for a short time in the expectation that a "very material witness" would be obtained. But that proved but another unfruitful effort by Detective Boyd and his cohorts to locate Sampson.

Sampson will doubtless be brought to Peterborough at once and charged with complicity in the theft of certain cattle. In fact it is believed the Crown intends to use against him most of the evidence that convicted Davis Hill. Witnesses told of the man who was with Hill the day he drove the cattle to Mr. Collins' farm near Trent Bridge. It was generally understood, although not stated in court, that this individual was Clarence Sampson.

ST. ANDREW'S BAZAAR IS A SUCCESS

A bazaar with a novel feature is being held by the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Church at the Curling Rink on Charlotte street, the novel feature being a good, substantial 'high tea' which will be served this evening, between six and seven. The bazaar itself is a great success. A gift for any one and every one can be bought, and gifts which will be appreciated. Everything is dainty and tasteful and the booths, which are charmingly decorated, are a delight to behold. They are in charge of:

Fancy work—Mrs. C. McFarlane, and Mrs. Briggs.

Children's wear—Mrs. McWilliams.

Tea and supper table—Mrs. Kerr.

Home-made cooking—Mrs. Edmison.

Aprons, Caps and Handkerchiefs—Mrs. Waram, Mrs. Fred Weir and Mrs. Henry.

Fish Pond—Mrs. Atkinson.

Rummage sale—Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Henderson.

The most attractive feature from the children's standpoint is the fish-pond, where a present worth twice the price can be obtained for ten cents.

Mr. Greene, with his customary generosity, has kindly loaned a splendid New Edison, and a great many valuable records.

St. Paul's Presbyterian Mission Band will hold its annual Christmas Sale of Fancy work, Aprons and other useful articles, Home-made Cooking and Candy, on Saturday Afternoon, Dec. 9th from 3 to 6 o'clock in the Sunday School Room. Afternoon Tea will be served in the Japanese Tea Room.

NOXIOUS INACTION.

The Monetary Times calls attention to the fact that it has received official information from Ottawa— from the Department of Justice—that the Government has not yet determined to sanction for Canada a blacklist of enemy firms. In July the British Government established what is known as a "black list," consisting of the names of firms in the United States, with which subjects of the United Kingdom are forbidden, in the interests of the war, to deal. Very shortly afterwards Australia established a similar list. The Canadian government, after more than four months of consideration, has declined or neglected to take action. That is to say while it is illegal for British or Australians to trade with these enemy firms, it is legal, if it is disloyal, for Canadians to do business with them. Within the period mentioned, Canadian firms have, as a matter of fact it is said, done business with these outlawed firms.

The Ottawa government seems to be lax or slack in doing many things. It has, since the war began, lent recruiting, as a business, to private enterprise, and in another way it has shown an indifference to the protection of Imperial and Canadian interests. Its tender considerations for neighbourliness, leads it to continue to allow trade dealings with pro-German firms in the United States, which both Britain and Australia have placed on the blacklist.

There is other evidence of want of the government towards pro-German interests. It neglects or cannot give satisfactory explanation of where the nickel that formed a part of the cargo of the Deutschland came from. If it did come originally from Ontario mines. Besides, the censorship has a pro-German list. The Examiner received yesterday, advertising literature from a notorious pro-German publishing firm in Chicago, inviting purchase by Canadians of most venomous pro-German literature. Why is this allowed to come through the mails?

If the government is pro-German by default or neglect of duty, the results are just as discreditable to Canada as if the attitude of favour to pro-German interests. It neglects to, or cannot, tentional. Neglect or incapacity are as fatal and less manly than overt malfeasance. Almost any man would rather be called a rogue than a fool: in the one case there is possibility of reform; in the other the most skilful surgery can't remedy the condition. Good morals can be pumped into a man, but brains, never.

SENSIBLE SHAUGHNESSY.

It is to be hoped that Lord Shaughnessy appreciates the danger he has incurred, in having dared to advocate the teaching of the French language in Canadian schools. There are some Francophobe journals on whom his statement will operate as a red rag on a bull. They will regret that the good old days are gone when, like Richard III, they could give effect to the words, "Thou are a traitor: off with his head!" Lord Shaughnessy who was recently admitted to the House of Lords, told in interview in London that he was in favour of the teaching of French in the schools of Canada.

In this he took a statesman's view of the situation. He did not advocate the teaching of French, for the language itself, but for its usefulness, in helping Canadians serve the commercial interests of the country better. Alongside Ontario as a province where a large part of the population uses French, where French is vernacular of the people, where it is chiefly the language of commercial intercourse. We do business with this province and, as Lord Shaughnessy points out, this intercourse would be enlarged to mutual profit, facilitated by our ability to speak and write the French language.

We need not quarrel with the why and wherefore of this fact, we must accept the fact, and govern ourselves by it. After this war, there must be a large degree of economic and commercial reconstruction; we must seek new openings of trade and if we are to outgrow a narrow parochialism, that concerns itself with petty swapping of domestic bigotories, we must broaden our outlook, and revise our standard of regard and action. France and Russia and Italy, among our present allies, must come within the scope of our commercial and industrial enlargement of markets. It is obvious that the development of trade with these countries would be most importantly promoted by a working knowledge of their languages by the directors of Canadian commercial and industrial enterprises and interest since business has for its medium words, spoken or written. French is, has been, and still is, the language of diplomacy, taking in this regard the place of Latin of the earlier centuries. It is true that the English language has gone far to becoming the universal language, of commerce, especially. Britain's free trade policy has thrust her commerce, and largely her language, into every part of the world. Still, French has a strong hold and is still, and will continue to be, a strong influence in commercial intercourse. With the English language, it makes a strong team, and an Englishman or Canadian equipped with the two languages stands a far better chance for winning in the race.

Apart from the essential merit of French as the language of one of the greatest of living literatures; it is the language of the greatest of Britain's allies, especially in a commercial sense; is the official language of the second greatest province of the Dominion, is the language of our next door provincial neighbours, and aside from its being the necessary equipment of every educated person, its commercial usefulness to English speaking Canadians should commend to our statesmen, our educators, and our captains of commerce and industry, its practical study.

Lord Shaughnessy's eminently wise and practical suggestion has reason for its foundation. The wonderful inroads of Germany in commerce, her almost universal intrusion, into the industrial arena, and even the success of her crooked and corrupt and corrupting diplomacy, have been due to popular and scientific knowledge of other languages than German. In this war the astonishin prevalence of more or less fluent speaking of the English and French languages by German prisoners, illustrates not only German thoroughness, but explains much of her success in her evil imaginings and endeavours and achievements.

A school boy remembers the Latin axiom—fast est ab hoste doceri—it is permitted to learn from an enemy; and with all their faults, there are many things in which we can take teaching from the Germans, and their attention to foreign languages is one of them. The introduction and teaching to the point of practical use the French language, and if possible the Russian and Italian, would add one greatly needed feature to our educational programme of practical knowledge that can be used in the practical affairs of life. This might mean the elimination of some good enough, but not purely practical, subjects.

Canada is a great country, with agricultural, industrial and commercial possibilities, beyond computation. We can't adequately exploit these resources by confining trade intercourse to ourselves and our neighbours. We must seek and gain the world for our market, and our intercourse with nations that do not use our speech will be helped, by our people, the trading part of the them being able to do business in the language of our customers, whether they be French or Russian or Italian. No "pent-up Utica," should bound our activities or our powers.

CANADIAN POETS

Chosen and Edited by John W. Garvin, B.A.

Mr. John W. Garvin, B.A., of Toronto, well known in Peterborough from his former prominent association with educational interests, has done a splendid thing for Canadian literature—of the poetic vein—by his volume, "Canadian Poets—chosen and edited by John W. Garvin, B.A." and published by McClelland, Goodchild and Stewart, Toronto.

Few of us, taken in large, realized and, even then, patchily and periodically, that we had many real poets in Canada; and the sense of this fact never came to us so directly and delightfully as it is expressed in Mr. Garvin's ambitious and well-judged compilation. Canada is a new country, counting, her age by decades instead of centuries, mainly given to fighting for its material, political and nationally organized existence. We lack the conditions of leisure that permit much devotion to other things than the quest for daily bread. Our dreaming opportunities are limited. What we produce as poetry is more the outburst of poetic genius that will be no longer denied.

The poems, given in ample measure, in this handsome volume are quite Canadian—native and to the manner made. The editor happily words this idea in his modest Foreword, itself a fine bit of analytical expository literature. Referring to the poets whose works he anthologizes, he says:

> Many of these poems are indigenous to the soil—vitally and healthily Canadian. . . . but all are of Canada, inasmuch as the writers have lived in this country, and have been influenced by its history and atmosphere at a formative period of their lives.

The volume contains records, and reprints of the best work, of fifty Canadian men and women poets. It is worth while to note that this means, reduced to calculation, the birth-poets nascitur non fit—of a poet for every year of the half-century of Confederation, completed, come a few months. And when the reading of the poems printed reveals that all of them have the glow of real poetic fire, in varying forms and fervency, we have good warrant for a sense of pride in the poets of Canada.

Mr. Garvin's work, which must have involved a vast amount of collecting energy, industry and culling skill, is the fruit of twenty years' devotion, and argues a painstaking loyalty to the interests of our national literature and our literary renown. He seems not only to have picked the choicest flowers of Canadian poetry, but to have digged at the very roots. His careful and studied treatment of his subjects tells of a real and almost passionate analytical sympathy and insight. Every one of the fifty poets dealt with is prefaced with critical analyses of their work by competent reviewers, and compact and comprehensive sketches of his or her life, by the editor; followed by liberal extracts from their works. So that the volume is, at once, a biography of fifty of the poets of Canada, and an anthology as well as thesaurus of their writings.

"Canadian Poets" is a volume of 470 pages, excellently printed—"in Canada"—and illustrated with fifty portraits of the fifty authors. As the publishers' announcement truly states, it is "an epoch-making book." Its time of issue comes pat to the Christmas tide. It makes an admirable gift, not only for one Christmas, but many. Its real value and merits; its resonance of the songs of Canadian singers and patriotic pride in their work, will make it a cherished possession in every Canadian home and a treasure in every Canadian library.

GERMAN CHILDREN IN WORK FOR WAR LOAN

Berlin newspapers are congratulating the high school pupils of Berlin for the excellent showing they made in subscribing to the fifth war loan. For months the boys and girls have made every possible sacrifice and saved their pennies in order that they might swell the subscriptions coming from the schools of Berlin. The aim has exceeded all expectations.

The Imperial Leise High School subscribed 70,000 marks, the Friednaues School 57,000, the Mommsen High school 35,000 and the Augusta High School 30,000 marks.

The pupils of the big Imperial Kaiser Wilhelm High School subscribed 284,000 marks. Other schools in Greater Berlin subscribed from 3,000 marks to 80,000 marks.

The newspaper comment with considerable pride on the fact that the institutes for children born out of wedlock subscribed 120,000 marks. Previous to the fifth war loan they had contributed 194,760 marks, totalling to date 314,760 marks, which these boys and girls saved under conditions that must have called for the greatest sacrifices.

FORMER SUN MAN KILLED.

New York, Dec. 7 — Frank D Byrne, who wrote the "Gossip of Wall Street" column for the Sun until last Wednesday, when he went abroad and enlisted in the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, has been killed in action according to a cablegram that has been received by Thomas Woodlock, his brother-in-law, and a member of the brokerage firm of G. M. Warner & Co. The cablegram came from his brother, Fred D. Byrne, an officer of the Sherwood Foresters, and said Frank killed in action.

Two brothers of Byrne are fighting with the British Expeditionary Force. Ralph D. Byrne, the youngest, left Montevideo, Uruguay, in 1914, and enlisted in the Royal Field Artillery. He has been awarded various medals for gallantry under fire. Fred D. Byrne, who was formerly connected with The Sun, and more recently with W. R. Grace & Co., in Lima, Peru, left that country in the first days of the war.

Much Work Done By N. Monaghan And Fairmount Societies

The Monaghan ladies of the Red Cross Society of Fairmount and N Monaghan gave a very successful concert in the Salvation Army Hall on Tuesday evening, December 5th.

At 8 o'clock Reeve McLaish took the chair and the audience listened with pleasure and profit to the splendid patriotic entertainment which ensued.

Master Percy Luther rendered his readings in such a manner that the audience felt he would like to retaliate some of the atrocities at least that have been perpetrated by German frightfulness. Lt.-Col. Ackerman took his hearers to the trenches and outlined the method of taking the wounded from the battlefield to the convalescent hospitals and also showed that the cause would be lost to us, was it not for the work of the Red Cross Societies, that are making it possible to care for the wounded, as well as providing suitable socks, etc., on account of the severity on the part of the men in the trenches.

All were very much interested in seeing the trophies which Col. Ackerman had with him, a number of which had belonged to his brother who had died of wounds.

Mr. Wenzerug made a strong appeal to each one to do his or her bit and let it be the biggest bit possible. Address were also delivered by Rev. Crase and Adj. McElhaney; also a patriotic reading by Miss Colin. Mrs. Jas. Young of Smith moved the an Jones sang her patriotic songs.

A collection was taken which amounted to $38.13. The following report was read and the audience came away wondering if we were doing our "biggest bit". Report covering one year's work of the Red Cross of Fairmount and North Monaghan.

Amputation dressings, 600; 12 x 16 dressings 694; 9 x 12 dressings 430; 9 x 9 dressings 128; 6 x 7 dressings 600. Total 2450.

Chemises 3,975; Gauze Sponges 5,350; Abdominal 100; Absorbent Swabs 600; Wash Cloths 750; Handkerchiefs 1,043; Mouth Wipes 2,800; Bandages 2,420; Jaw Bandages 100; Many tailed bandages 475; Many tailed bandages, long 50; Triangular 600; Personal Property Bags 170; Hot Water Bag Covers 85; Ring Pillows 35; Square Pillows 20; Fomentation Cloths 95; Woollen Boots 15; Sheets 73; Draw Sheets 18; Pillow Cases 40; Towels 42; Pairs Pyjamas 43; Pairs Socks 95; Jam and Jelly 40 quarts.

This work was forwarded to Kingston and reshipped to Queen's University Hospital first in France and later transferred to Cairo, Egypt and now transferred to France again where it was found to be most needed.

The socks, however, were forwarded directly to those who were serving in the trenches.

EFFORTS TO REDUCE THE COST OF LIVING

Washington, Dec. 8.—Action by Congress on any food legislation will await the recommendation of President Wilson and his Cabinet. Such executive recommendation will be based on reports some of which the president has been receiving for days from the various government departments conducting the investigations. This plan, it is stated on the best authority, has the approval and will get every ounce of support of the Democratic House and Senate leaders.

4 Bay State Cities Vote "Dry;" Boston Worries "Wets"

Boston, Mass., Dec. 8.—Elections were held in fifteen Massachusetts cities yesterday, and four of them Fall River, Haverhill, Taunton and Leominster turned from license to the no license column.

Liquor interests place most of the responsibility for the change in these places on the campaign against booze which the Rev. "Billy" Sunday is waging in connection with his revivals in his Boston tabernacle, and to-night they are afraid of Boston going dry at its election two weeks from to-day.

Fall River's decision to close its bar-rooms was a surprise to the brewers and the liquor interests who had spent thousands of dollars following a visit to that city by the Rev. Mr. Sunday last Saturday, when he delivered a powerful sermon on the evils of liquor.

Haverhill, many of whose citizens have been taking daily trips to Boston to attend the Sunday meetings, and whose Protestant clergymen have been participating in the evangelist's revival, has been a license city since 1877, with the exception of two years.

The Haverhill vote was 3,698 for no license and 2,892 for license. Last year the vote was for license, 3,800; [illegible] 2,864.

In Fall River clergymen of all denominations joined in the fight against license. When Mr. Sunday spoke there last Saturday, a Roman Catholic clergyman sat near him on the platform. The vote for no license in that city was 6,359, and for license 4,900. The vote last year was: Yes, 5,495; no, 4,992.

Leominster citizens cast 1,649 votes for no license and 1,345 for license. The vote a year ago was 1,600 for license and 1,426 against it.

Taunton went into the dry column after 10 years of the licensed sale of liquor. The margin of victory for the no license forces was 178, as compared with the license victory of last year of 278.

Cambridge, which is taking a deep interest in the Sunday [illegible] remains in the no license [illegible] it cut its no vote of [illegible] to 6,700. There also [illegible] off in the license vote [illegible]

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The release for military service of all possible semi-skilled and skilled men who are now engaged in the manufacture of munitions has been agreed upon by the Admiralty, the Ministry of Munitions and the Army Council.

MILITARY NEWS

The Kingston Whig says:—

Major G. I. Campbell, chief recruiting officer, has just returned from Peterborough, where he was engaged in assisting in an organization for the 247th Battalion. A most successful meeting was held on Sunday last.

In an interview, Major Campbell referred to one phase of the work that deserved special mention. This was the way in which the clergy of Peterborough had taken up their responsibility for recruits. A meeting of the Ministerial Association was held on Monday last. In view of the critical conditions of affairs at the front and the absolute necessity of immediate additions to the ranks, it was decided that a recruiting sermon would be given once a month. The pulpits were to be used in every way that would assist in the great work.

Blames Rowdies For Outbreak in Athens

Washington, December 8. — A foreign office despatch received from Athens by the Greek Legation here, says that normal conditions have been restored in the capital. It describes the fighting between the Venizelists and the reservists incident to the clash between Greek and allied troops on Saturday as an attempted insurrection by rowdies, who were quickly suppressed.

"As you have already been informed, rowdies attempted on Saturday to take advantage of the deplorable encounters which occurred between the detachments of the Allies and the Greek troops to create a sudden insurrection. They killed and injured several civilians and military men."

A report from Mr. Droppers, the American Minister at Athens, reaching the State Department, said there was much excitement in the Greek capital, but gave few particulars regarding the situation. It was the first time that the Minister had been

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— I did not expect that Mayor Duffus would favour me with a reply, but as he has extended me that courtesy, I feel that it is only fair to Mayor Duffus to acknowledge his letter and to accept his correction. When he says that the City Council had not expressed" the intention of giving the land to the Agricultural Society as a gift, I stand corrected. The Council did not expressed that intention, but in following closely the discussions at these various meetings and also from what I gathered from remarks of some members of the Agricultural Society, it was the only logical conclusion I could come to. I am glad to say, Mr. Mayor, that the site suggested by the City and approved by the Provincial Board and not refused by the Board, as the City committee endeavoured to make the Monaghan Council believe. The Provincial Board, I think, advised the City to buy Mrs. O'Shea's property, but I also most certainly heard that the City Council would not buy any more land. Now what? If the prices so far obtained were prohibitive, and it was unanimous that they were so, why did the City Council have the City Engineer waste valuable time making out an elaborate plan of disposal plant and exhibition grounds? Exhibition grounds to the fore, and then rush off to Toronto Friday morning (we as committee met Thursday evening) to get the plan approved of, putting the disposal plant on Mrs. O'Shea's property? Did the committee want a free ride to the city? Why was the motion moved by Ald. McIntyre and seconded by Reeve McIntosh to secure options on other property ruled out of order by you, Mr. Mayor? We were joint committees. Why was it, Mr. Mayor, that when Mr. Peck, solicitor for the township, Mr. D. O'Connell, solicitor for some ratepayers of the township and Reeve McIntosh asked that Engineer give full description of workings of the "new system," did the City Solicitor, Mr. Gordon say "No, he did not see why the City should put all their cards on the table?" If the plant is not, and will not be objectionable, what are the City Council afraid of? "Co-operate, Mr. Mayor.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,

Yours truly,

H. E. Rye.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In reply to an article, re poolrooms, which appeared on the front page of the Peterborough Review, in the issue of Dec. 6th, judging from the statements which the author of this article makes, it is evident that he knows very little about poolrooms or the manner in which same is conducted. I am manager of a poolroom at 169 Simcoe street, and the majority of my customers are good, honest, working men and boys, many of them munition workers, who drop in after their day's work to enjoy themselves in playing a game of pool or billiards. Now, working people, as a rule, do not belong to clubs such as the writer in the Review, no doubt belongs, where he can go in the evenings and enjoy himself playing either pool or billiards. Still this same writer condemns a place where respectable citizens of the city can come and enjoy themselves for a very small amount, a game of pool costing only five cents. Besides all are not eligible to join the club to which this gentleman is a member. Even in this age of democracy we have class distinction, even here in Peterborough. If the writer condemns poolrooms, why not condemn picture shows and theatres, etc., which are also places of amusement. He states in his letter that the recruiting officer finds the poolroom a hindrance to their work. Now, if I was looking for men and knew of a place where several young men congregated in the evening, that is the very place I should go looking for recruits. Such was the policy adopted by the officers and recruiting sergeants of the 93rd Battalion. I told them they were welcome to come at any time and address the men they found there, which they did on more than one occasion, and a large number of recruits were obtained in this manner; so many, that the Commanding Officer conveyed to me his personal thanks for the welcome extended and the opportunity given to his recruiting sergeants. I may say here that the same courtesy will be shown to any recruiting sergeant or officer of the 247th who wishes to visit my poolroom. In conclusion, I wish to state that I am a British subject, Canadian born, and have near and dear friends and relatives fighting in France for their King and country; one has laid down his life for the cause, and it is not my fault that I am not there with them.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain

Yours sincerely,

F. F. Sneigrove.

Squire Brothers Meet After Many Years Separation

On Sunday last a pleasant re-union, after many years separation, took place in this village, when our esteemed townsman, Mr. J. L. Squire, was host at "Sneyd Villa" to his three brothers, Samuel of Washington State, Henry of England, and T. H. of Queensboro, Ont. Mr. Samuel Squire arrived from the West last week after a journey of 2500 miles while Mr. Henry Squire who came here some weeks ago from England had to travel as far from the east. It is thirty-two years since J. L. has seen his brother Sam from the west. Word of his coming had been received but for some reason he did not arrive by the train expected. The result was that a humorous meeting took place between the brothers in which the one from the west rather had the advantage of his brother J. L. who did not recognize him for some time after they had conversed in the store. In fact our local Mr. Squire was very busy at the time with some legal matters and told the stranger he was too busy to bother talking, but the latter persisted until J. L. asked him who he was. His brother told him he ought to know him, whereupon the joke was revealed and all enjoyed a hearty laugh and Sam got a genuine welcome. Shortly after Mr. Henry Squire arrived in the store and passing his brother, Sam, asked J. L. if any word had come of Sam. Of course no word had come, although the latter had appeared in person. The western brother was pretending to buy a broom when Henry commenced sizing him up. His identity, however, was soon discovered and a good piece of fun was brought to a conclusion. Needless to say the brothers enjoyed a happy re-union. All four have won for themselves success in life, Sam owns a large horse ranch of 750 acres in Washington, Henry is an iron and steel merchant in the Old Land, Herb is a miller at Queensboro, Ont., and J. L. is head of J. L. Squire & Son and also holds the position of magistrate while his son who is Reeve of the village, is also a magistrate by virtue of his office.—Norwood Register.

SUCCESSFUL FANCY BAZAAR AT ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

The Little Anglican Church in South Peterboro' Held a Very Successful Function

In the schoolroom attached to St. George's Anglican Church, South Peterborough, was yesterday held a very successful sale of work and fancy articles. The proceedings commenced about 3 p.m. and terminated at 10 p.m.

A stall of fancy and useful articles was held by the Ladies' Aid. This was presided over by Mrs. Price. Among the articles was an exquisitely worked and embroidered guest towel, and a "delicious" ladies' collar, largely done in tatting.

The Mission Band also had a fancy work stall. Here again were all sorts of articles to conjure coin out of one's pockets, the able saleladies being Mrs. Roy Price, Miss E. Jay, and Miss Mary Leeerf. At the adjoining fish-pond the Misses Bessie Houghton and Gladys Jay demonstrated that all was fish that came to the rod in their department.

The schoolroom had been very prettily decorated for the occasion; flags, festoons and tinsel entering largely into a red, white and blue colour scheme.

In the evening the affair resolved itself into a "social," at which tea was served, to a capacity crowd, by Mesdames H. Rew, W. Rew, Cole, Price, and Wilson.

An impromptu musical programme was given, in which, among others, the Misses May and Rose Cole, sang duets, notably one "List to the Convent Bell," which brought out well their clear soprano and contralto voices. Mr. Heafield sang acceptably; some amusement was created by some humourous tales, told by the Rector, the Rev. Jas. Price; Mr. Kearns sang, and Miss Everett recited; Messrs. Parkins and son gave a well-received duet on banjo and accordion and other numbers were given; Mr. Turner, organist of the Church, acting throughout as accompanist. Mrs. Cooper ably presided at the receipt of custom, otherwise money-taker at the door.

Many numbers were given at intervals on a Victrola, kindly lent by Mrs. Thornton. The whole affair was pronounced by the promoters to have been a big success. A large number of members of St. John's Church, who take a keen interest in the welfare of the daughter Church, was present, and at 10 o'clock the function was closed by the singing of the National Anthem, "God Save the King." SEEK FEDERAL AID IN PAPER SHORTAGE

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 7. — Twenty-five Kansas daily newspapers, confronted with an immediate danger of being unable to obtain print paper, to-day took steps to meet the crisis if possible. They delegated George W. Marble of the Fort Scott Tribune-Monitor to present their necessities to the Federal Trade Commission in Washington next week.

The reports submitted showed, according to Mr. Marble, that Kansas publishers are unable to buy print paper for less than 5 1-2 to 6 1-2c a pound, while some are paying as high as ten cents, practically three times the old prices.

Premier Receives Cordial Welcome

Addresses Large Gathering in Quebec in Behalf of National Service

QUEBEC, Dec. 8.—"In the tour which we have undertaken, touching five provinces of Canada west of Quebec, this meeting in the great city of Quebec will be an inspiration to us in our work."

This was Sir Robert Borden's last word last night to an audience of two thousand people who packed the Auditorium Theatre and heard the Prime Minister appeal for national service. One attempt was made to interrupt the meeting. It came from a small group in the gallery, who attempted to heckle the Postmaster-General, Hon. T. Chase Casgrain. The effort was not successful.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who has come into Quebec hard on the heels of the Prime Minister, was in the city last night, but kept away from the meeting. He is to deliver a recruiting speech in St. Peter's Market to-day. There was present, however, on the platform, Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec, who spoke eloquently of the work of French-Canadians at the front and promised that the people of Quebec would continue to do their duty.

Sir Robert Borden's address was listened to with close attention, and was received with applause. The Prime Minister spoke of what has been already accomplished by Canada, of what had been done by France, and of the imperative need of State service by all citizens in order that the fullest effort of the nation might be put forward.

Mr. R. B. Bennett, Director-General of National Service, closed the meeting with a strong appeal for united service and for national thrift.

Sir Robert was accompanied on the platform by Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec; Mayor Lavigeur, Hon. T. Chase Casgrain; Mr. R. B. Bennett, Director-General of National Service; Chief Justice Lemieux, Lieutenant Gov. Leblanc, Speaker Savigny, members of the Quebec Legislature, and a fair sprinkling of military officers.

The Premier spoke first in French and then in English, as in Montreal, and was given an attentive hearing with frequent interruptions of applause.

Clarence Sampson Is Arrested

Story of Arrest.

The story of Sampson's arrest is detailed in the following account received by the Examiner late this afternoon:

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 8. — Clarence Sampson, aged 26 years, is under arrest here, wanted by the authorities of Peterborough, Ont., charged with stealing some cattle. Sampson was arrested at his boarding house Thursday night by Captain Edghill. Policemen guarded the front and back doors. Chief of Police Singleton received a letter recently from Chief Constable Daniel Thompson, of Peterborough, saying that Sampson was wanted.

Detective Captain Wood had been searching for Sampson for the last two weeks, but was unable to get trace of him until last Thursday.

Injured at Work.

Captain Wood found that Sampson came to Watertown about three weeks ago, and was employed in the Wise plant, but not under the name of Sampson. He was injured at the plant, and Dr. C. N. Bibbins attended him, but he did not give the name of Sampson to Dr. Bibbins. It is also said that Sampson had raised a moustache since coming here, which makes him look older.

To a reporter this morning Sampson said that if the police knew what names he went under they could tell. He said that he lived about thirty miles from Peterborough, in the township of Dummer, and has a wife and child there.

He declared that he recently sold a farm of 300 acres at $8,000, and had come here to purchase a dairy farm and settle up some business matters. He says that he intended to return to Canada soon. He pointed out that the immigration officials were satisfied to let him through, and that he was a Church member in his home town.

Referred to Cattle Theft.

All he would say about the case was that he had heard that some of his neighbours had stolen the cattle and duplicated him in the theft. He said that he understood a drove of cattle had been stolen, but this might mean any number up to 300. He would not say whether or not he would waive extradition. T. A. Hendricks was retained as attorney.

Suits and Overcoats For Nine Dollars

Men have an opportunity to-day to buy a new suit or overcoat for the phenomenally low price of nine dollars. The history of this unique bargain is that the Globe Tailoring Company, of 439 George street, have made up a lot of new suits and overcoats for customers during the year, in their various branch stores in Ontario which have not been called for, and on which a deposit of $5 on each has been paid. The time limit for holding all of these having now expired they will go to first comers on Saturday at nine dollars, which is about half price.

Surely these made-to-measure suits will not last long, as soon as their merits are known. Read the announcement on the first page of to-day's Examiner.

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Erickson, Perkins and Co. of New York and Chicago, through their Toronto agent, J. G. Beaty, report the following quotations:

C., 107 1-2; Erie 38 1-2, 38 3-4, Reading, 111 1-8, 110 1-2; Republic Steel, 88 5-8, 87 7-8; U. S. Steel, 126, 125 3-8, Anaconda, 93 1-2, 93 1-4; Inter Nickle 47 3-4; American Loco., 90 1-2, 92 3-4. Canadian stocks: Cement 70 1-8, 72; Dominion Steel 79 1-2, 79 3-4; Steel of Canada 86 3-4, 87 1-2. Steamers, 41, 41 3-4; Gen. Electric, 121; Canadian Locomotive, 55, bid, Nova Scotia Steel 149.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Advances, ranging from 1 to 15 points, were made by speculative leaders on the stock Exchange this afternoon. Bethelem Steel added a 15 point gain to its 10 point jump of yesterday, selling at $625 a share. Atlantic Gulf and West Indies sold at 143 1-2, gaining 9 1-2 points over yesterday's closing figures. Locomotive shares led a spurt in industrials, Baldwins selling at 81 3-4, up 5 points from yesterday's low, and American Locomotive selling up 2 1-4, at 93. Coppers again were weak, while sugar stocks, after a spurt upward, declined below yesterday's level.

(Comments by the New York Press)

Post & Flagg—The market should continue at least strong for the present, with probably sharp gains in such specialties as may benefit from larger dividends or special distributions.

Laidlaw & Co—The announcement that Mr. Lloyd George has been asked to form a cabinet appears to presage it's still more vigorous prosecution of the war with all that this implies for the traffic in foodstuffs, cotton, steel, copper and munitions. The quieting effect of the harder money rates upon the stock markets tends to conserve the bull movement so long as it remains within bounds and accurately reflects the earnings of metal and railroad companies, which appear to continue on an increasing scale.

Edmund & Charles Randolph—There has never been a more difficult situation to estimate than the one which exists at the present time, and opinion concerning it in New York is varying in the extreme.—W. W. Price.

J. S. Bache & Co.—The decline in the motor shares has been very drastic. They have shown greater resistance lately to pressure and their trend has apparently turned upward.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.—Bullish specialty operations expected to continue in shipping, copper and steel shares. In the rails N.Y. Central, Reading and C. & O. are still well bought of.

BOYCOTT IS SUCCESSFUL

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—The boycott has apparently smashed a corner in eggs and other produce. Prices already sharply lower, were expected to tumble still more today. Eggs were down five cents below the high point and butter had declined six cents a pound. Potatoes banished from many tables when they became a luxury, have dropped 10 to 15 cents a bushel. Retail prices are expected to follow the decline in wholesale prices, closely following the summoning of five hundred retail grocers to appear before the Federal Grand Jury here to-day.

Commission men are beginning to give credence to the report that Wetz the egg "king," is stuck with 72 million eggs on his hands.

No Distinction To Be Made

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—It was authoritively stated this morning that no distinction is to be made in England between members of Parliament and other Canadian officers in reducing the number of unemployed officers of higher rank now overseas. Any officer of higher rank than lieutenant who cannot get to France, or whose services cannot be utilized in England, must resume civilian life.

The appointment of Major-General Turner, V.C., to command the Canadian troops in England, is expected to be followed by a ruthless lopping off of dead wood. He has been in France almost since the beginning of the war and will not tolerate the existence of men whose only claims to militarism are the wearing of uniform and the drawing of the King's pay. The coming months will likely see an exodus from England back to Canada of scores of officers who cannot be placed.

You are invited to be in your seat, at 8.15 this evening, in the Collegiate Auditorium, to hear Miss Mignon Telgman in a tone test with the New Edison, Assisted by Miss Dorothy Allen in vocal selections. A musical treat under the auspices of the RED CROSS SOCIETY Silver Collection for Red Cross work.

TIME FOR THE BOYS AT HOME TO GET BUSY IS LOCAL SOLDIER'S OPINION

Lance-Corp. J. T. Hardwicke Back in Harness After Being Wounded—"Far Better a Grave in Flanders Than to Be Branded as Cowards," He Writes.

The following letter has been received from Lance Corp. J. T. Hardwicke, a Peterborough boy at the front with the 27th Winnipeg Battalion, and who is back on the firing line after having been wounded:

Trenches, France, Nov. 14, '16.

Dear Friend, — It has been quite a time since last you heard of me, so I am going to drop you a few lines, so that my many friends in the home town will know that I am all right and once more in harness. I have been back in France two months, and as you know from the reports you receive that the work accomplished by "our boys" has brought honour and glory to our fair Dominion. We have had some varied experiences since we have been over in this country. We have had defensive fighting, and we have had the satisfaction of being through the big offensive and playing our part in driving back the Boches, and now we are in the beginning of another winter campaign which we hope will be the last, for we will be carrying on the work of hammering old Fritz to pieces all through the cold and wet weather, so although this season is going to make the task harder and stiffer to accomplish, yet it is not wise to give the Huns much rest. We must continue the punishment and give him a little severer taste of it every day, as you know we have "something behind us now" that we never had before, the "tanks." Well you know the work they can accomplish besides putting new courage into our hearts when we have them working with us. Our artillery can close old Fritz up any time he tries to start anything, and then again our boys in the line, they are as good as ten Germans any day, so the ones that are left after the artillery is through with them, well, the bayonet is very useful in making good Germans of them, for we are all beginning to realize that the only "good Germans" are "dead ones," for they have outraged every principle of humanity, broken every moral law and violated every canon of civilization. You read of the "rape of Belgium," the taking of young girls of Lillie into slavery of the worst possible kind. These are cases you hear of through your press reports, but what of the hundreds of small towns and villages that have undergone the same treatment and worse some times, and yet there is always a class of people who will say we are d——n fools, we don't know what we are fighting for. Well all I can say is once you have been here and have seen with your own eyes, and heard with your own ears, every doubt will be cast away. The man who does not know what he is fighting for, is the one who has not an ounce of red blood in his veins. We know what we left "God's country to do," and it will be accomplished before we come back again. We realize that the conflict has sapped up some of the best blood of our land, but the sacrifice will not have been in vain. Their names will ring out strong in the days to come as heroes who fought and died upholding a righteous cause, and who would not suffer their country to be traitors; far better a grave in Flanders than to be brahded as a cowardly people, so just a word to some of those who have not seen fit to help us out: Do you not think it is time to "get busy" and do your little bit to help us out, when you see the other boys coming back out of hospital with good hearts, game to take another "hand" in the struggle. Well, don't you think that you can muster up the courage to do your share? We have a brave army of boys out here now, second to none, and we have the "grit." That is all that is necessary; that is what is winning this war for the allies to-day. We can show you where the hard spots are, and we can show you just how we crack these hard nuts. It's a kind of specialty us Canadians have, and that is why we are in high favour with the Headquarters Staff out here, for we always accomplish the tasks set before us and do it very thoroughly, much to Fritz's sorrow, and old Fritz generally knows when we are around. Sometimes you can't do much, as the weather man proves your worst enemy at this time of the year. The trenches get knee deep in water, with another foot of mud underneath that, and with the cold it makes things very disagreeable, but we get hardened to these things. We never let these little hardships and difficulties make us downhearted. We can stick it, and what's more we are doing it every day. A nice dry pair of socks and a clean shirt and underwear and you feel like a new man, and ready to do the "come back" on old Fritz on the next trip in the line. Well, we know we are taking big chances out here, and no one knows any better than ourselves, as we have been into the thick of it, and we have seen our pals go down never to come up again. We have seen others who have been carried off the field bleeding and shattered, probably maimed for life, but these sights only serve to make our blood boil. We have to make the Hun pay toll for our gallant comrades, and so the war goes on, and will go on until we have made him quit, or we exterminate them (which would be the best thing that could happen for civilization.) Now I have been trying to express the feelings of our boys over here and trust that you will always send your encouragement. Don't forget that a letter is more acceptable than a meal a paper is always welcome with the news of home, and again I ask you not to forget the boys who will not come back, the silent hero who lies in a nameless grave, maybe with no shroud even of mother earth to cover him. Lord Ourwe, in his impressive poem, "A Grave in Flanders," describes the passing of young life into an unknown, unmarked grave, one of our silent heroes:

A Grave in Flanders.

Here in the marsh land, past the battered bridge,
One of the hundred grains untimely sown,
Here, with his comrades of the hard won ridge
He rests unknown.

His horoscope had seemed so plainly drawn—
School triumphs earned apace in work and play;
Friendships at will; then love's delightful dawn
And mellowing day.

Home fostering hope, some service to the state
Benignant age; then the long tryst to keep
Where in the yew-tree shadows congregate
His fathers sleep.

Was here the one thing needful to distill
From life's alembic, through this holier fate,
The man's essential soul, the hero will?
We ask and wait.

Once again we boys who are over here want to ask you to see that the widows and orphans of our dear comrades of other days do not have to suffer any more than necessary by the loss of their dear ones. The sympathetic hand should always be extended to them in their time of trial, and perhaps har ships. It's up to you who are back in the home land to see that you do not betray the trust we put in you. We have done our best to uphold the honour of our country at a great sacrifice; see that you do our share. Now I will draw this lengthy letter to a finish. You will hardly realize that this has been written in a dug-out in the line, but such is the case, so kind regards to all my friends, and to you boys as they have never fallen down on a task yet.

MANY TEAMS WILL BE OUT OF THE O.H.A. DURING THIS SEASON

The Toronto News says: That there is a pronounced scarcity of players on the O. H. A. circuit this season is shown by the fact that many of the teams which in the past have been represented in both series will only have one team this winter. Other amateur strongholds will not have teams at all, and will eschew hockey altogether. For instance, Markham, though it has a brand new rink, cannot muster enough players to make it worth while entering the lists. Orillia has neither rink nor players, and Wiarton, who were winners of the Northern League two years ago, and runners-up in the O. H. A., is out of business completely. Secretary Carrigan informed the O. H. A. that the players were too busy 'fighting Fritz' to indulge in hockey. However, a good season is looked forward to as many soldier teams are entered in all three series, but more largely in the intermediate section. It is not expected that more than eighty clubs in all will compete, as compared with over one hundred last year. Entries closed last night and the groupings will be arranged shortly

Head Straight for Collegiate Auditorium--Friday Evening

GIRL FREED QUICKLY OF MURDER CHARGE

Jury Out Two Hours in Case of Edith Ward, Accused of Luring Man to Death.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Edith Ward, eighteen years old, was acquitted by a jury in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, of a charge of first degree murder in calling Edmund Maher from a Brooklyn dance hall so that Robert Katzenmuller could shoot and kill him. The jury deliberated two hours.

She smiled repeatedly at the jury as she related her story. She wore a tightly fitting blue dress, heavy shirt skirt and high white boots. She said she had been working in Brooklyn factories since she was fourteen. She had called Maher out of the dance hall, she testified, to ask him who had made an insulting remark to her a few nights before. Maher struck her in the face and abused her, she said, when Katzenmuller stepped from the darkness and killed Maher.

Katzenmuller, who is now serving a life term in Sing Sing for the Maher murder, corroborated the girl's statement. She admitted writing a letter from jail asking Katzenmuller's sister to inform her what story he would tell on the stand, so she could give the same version.
